Kurusu Looks to Tokyo For New Orders After Long Talk With Hull

Secretary Willing To Continue Talk, President Appears Listless About It

Talks Still Exploratory

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

In an atmosphere chilled by uncompromising speeches in Tokyo, Secretary of State Hull and Saburo Kurusu, Japan's special envoy to the United States, yesterday conferred for 2 hours and 45 minutes on the prospects for a peaceful settlement in the Pacific.

The belligerent tone of official speeches and inspired editorials in Japan yesterday did nothing to dispel the prevailing impression here that the Japanese and American positions are still poles apart.

President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull, in guarded press conference remarks yesterday, gave only a general indication that they consider it worthwhile to continue the current negotiations with Kurusu, Tokyo's "peace emissary," and Ambassador Nomura.

At the same time there were indications that the discussions had come to a point where it was necessary for Japan's envoys to ask their home government for additional instructions, and the time for resumption of the talks appeared to hinge on receipt of the instructions.

President Seems Unimpressed

When Mr. Roosevelt was asked if he expected to have another meeting with Kurusu, who was at the White House for more than an hour Monday, he replied in a somewhat listless manner that he supposed he would.

Diplomatic observers thought it significant that Hull late in the day received the Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Hu Shih, for a 20-minute conference.

Leaving the State Department, the envoy said, "We have full confidence in America."

Indicating that all of America's friends in the Far East are being kept informed of the progress of the negotiations with Japan, Hull also conferred with British Charge d'Affaires Sir Ronald Campbell after his meeting with the Japanese emissaries.

The ABCD Powers

America, Britain, China and the Dutch East Indies are the ABCD powers who, according to Tokyo charges, are attempting to "encircle" Japan.

The unusual length of yesterday's conference between Hull, Kurusu and Nomura gave rise to speculation that the negotiators were already grappling with specific issues in the mounting crisis in Japanese-American relations. These include Japan's ties with the Axis, her charge that the United States is "encircling" her and this country's aid to the Chinese armies through lend-lease supplies and economic reprisals against Japan.

At his press conference, however, Secretary Hull insisted that the U. S. Forces in Philippines Much Larger Than Realized

America's military forces in the Far East are far more powerful than is generally known, informed sources said yesterday. They have been quietly strengthened in recent months under a program that is still under way.

The Army being whipped into shape by Lieut. Gen. Douglas MacArthur, former chief of staff, totals about 11 divisions, organized into three combat forces approximating an Army corps, it was stated authoritatively.

When mobilization is completed, it was estimated that there will be approximately 200,000 men under arms in the islands. Composed of both American and native troops, it will be supported by what officials have termed a "strong" air force.

In addition, the War and Navy Departments are organizing a force on the West Coast which would be the spearhead of any military operations by the United States in the Far East. It is a provisional corps of marines and soldiers to operate under the commander in chief of the Pacific fleet and is known as the Pacific amphibious force.

Officials will not discuss this latest addition to the Nation's armed forces, other than admit that it is being formed. It is known, however, that it consists of the Second Marine Corps Division, based at San Diego, the Second Marine Air Wing, based at San Diego, and in Hawaii, and an Army division, probably the Third, based at posts in the Northwest.

Troops of the Marine division are well trained in landing force operations on hostile shores and Third Division troops have been schooled in such work. The Marine division includes parachute troops, amphibian tanks and the latest landing boats to assist in landing men from troop transports on beaches under

'Penny a Day'

Milk Film Strikes Note Of Irony

"Penny a Day," a one-reel movie which vividly portrays benefits of the Government's 1-cent milk program among needy children, was exhibited here for the first time yesterday.

Shown to several hundred Agriculture employes in the department's auditorium, the picture demonstrated what has been done in New York City for undernourished youngsters in public and parochial schools and nurseries.

Not a few in the audience noted a tinge of irony in the film, which has been shown in many New York theaters and is being groomed for national exhibition.

It was this: It emphasizes the community value of penny half-pints, with Mayor and Civilian Defense Administrator Fiorello H. LaGuardian hailing the project as "a translation of democracy into action," and yet Washington—seeking such a program for its thousands of underfed children—is having a difficult time getting Agriculture to start one here.

The Case of the Missing Letter

Latest development was the incident of the missing letter yesterday.

O. M. Reed, chief of the Surplus Marketing Administration, which administers the Federal surplus milk programs, said that on Saturday he sent a letter by special messenger to Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools.

The communication reportedly signified Reed's willingness to examine the tentative draft of a penny milk program prepared by a city-wide committee headed by

Langer's Fate May Be Settled By December 4

Several Committeemen Express Private Belief Seat Will Not Be Denied

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

The Senatorial tenure of William Langer, of North Dakota, last night rested for the time being in the hands of 17 Senators who by December 4 may decide what to do about charges that he is unfit to hold their high office.

Although most members of the Privileges and Elections Committee at the close of 12 days of public hearings yesterday professed an "open mind" on the Langer case, several committeemen who have followed the proceedings closely expressed a private belief that the group will not vote to deny a Senate seat to the two-time Governor.

Defense Called "Smokescreen"

In closing arguments before the committee, Langer's defense counsel hammered home a theme propounded early in the hearings by Senator Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina—"Are you going to indict the people of North Dakota?"

Langer's political foes, declared Francis Murphy, principal defense attorney, "have used this great body and this committee as a sounding board for reiteration of charges that have been aired time and time again in the State."

"You must not indict the people of North Dakota," he said, reasoning that the State's electorate heard the worst about the Governor before deciding to send him to the Senate.

The defense was called a "smokescreen," by H. C. Lowry, one of the attorneys hired by the committee to present 21 charges on behalf of North Dakota citizens who peti-

See-Saw Struggle

By the Associated Press

Moscow (Wednesday), Nov. 19.—Red armies have hurled the Germans back again on two vital sectors of the Moscow front, the Moscow radio reported today, but acknowledged a withdrawal toward the Caucasus on the Kerch Peninsula.

Moscow's counterattacking defenders were declared to have smashed Nazi thrusts in the Volokolamsk area, 65 miles northwest of the capital, and occupied three more villages along with that town's railroad station.

At Mozhaisk, 57 miles west of Moscow, the radio announcement said the Russians had the Germans on the run in some places. Despite continually arriving German reinforcements in the Maloyaroslavets and Tula sectors, 65 miles southwest and 110 miles south, it asserted there had been no important change in positions.

Hold in Donets Basin

In the Donets Basin the Red armies were declared holding their own against massive Nazi blows, but they admittedly were getting the worst of it on the Kerch Peninsula at the eastern tip of the Crimea.

(The Germans already have claimed the capture of Kerch and the British Broadcasting Co. in a broadcast heard by N. B. C. said the Russians had escaped across the narrow Strait of Kerch to the western Caucasus with all their equipment.)

The Moscow broadcast admitted a German break-through at Kerch after the Nazis threw six infantry divisions against the Red lines.

There the Germans were aided by "a considerable superiority in

Bette Gay Sleeps, Eats and Also Cries

The staff at George Washington University Hospital is still "keeping its fingers crossed," but things are looking mighty bright for Bette Gay Bonbrest, the 11-day-old "wonder baby," they said yesterday.

Bette Gay's daily 24 hours are devoted to the three activities of sleeping, eating, crying, they said, divided about as follows: Sleeping, 21 hours; eating, 2 hours; crying, 1 hour.

Two hours may seem a lot of time for a baby who weighed only 26¼ ounces at birth to spend eating, but then Bette Gay takes nourishment every couple of hours.

Troopers Quell Mine Disorders As Roosevelt Declares Lewis' Strike Argument Is 'Invalid'

Appalachian Pact Would Not Be Abrogated, Press Told by Roosevelt

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

As coal miners and pickets fought in the field yesterday with guns, stones and fists, President Roosevelt and John L. Lewis, United Mine Workers Union president, engaged in a verbal battle over the issues of the two-day strike in the captive mines owned by the Nation's great steel companies.

The President, permitting the press to quote him directly, called Lewis' argument for the strike "not valid." The union leader justified the walkout on the grounds that the union shop Appalachian agreement covering commercial coal mines would have to be abrogated if the open shop were granted the captive mines.

Promptly, the bushy-browed union president replied that suggestions that the mine workers "dishonor" their own contract "cannot be seriously considered."

Mr. Roosevelt's statement, in answer to a letter Lewis sent to him Monday when final conferences with steel company representatives had broken down, came at the end of a day marked by sporadic clashes between pickets and nonstriking miners in Pennsylvania and West Virginia, and by the gradual spreading of the strike by sympathy walkouts both to commercial mines and other captive mines where the union shop was granted several months ago.

The Chief Executive's comments on Lewis' position were directed to the "most favored nation" clause of the Appalachian agreement, which Lewis had argued prevents the union signing an open-shop contract

Summer Weather Forecast Today

Washington will bask today in the sunshine of summer-like weather even milder than that of yesterday with the temperature expected to push up to 75 degrees.

A low of 46 degrees was forecast before dawn which was 13 degrees warmer than the previous night. Meanwhile, the Associated Press reported that although the warm unseasonable weather prevailed all the way from the Southeastern plains States and the Great Lakes region eastward to the Appalachian, typical autumn weather was in prospect for tomorrow's Thanksgiving observance.

Up to Court

Officers and men of the American cruiser Omaha may share with the United States Government value of the captured German merchantman Odenwald and its cargo if the ship is declared forfeit by a Federal court in San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Government legal authorities said last night that under the salvage libel action filed by the Government against the Odenwald, it would be up to the court to decide if part of the estimated value of the vessel and its freight would be distributed among the crew of the rescuing vessel.

Disclosure Made

Using an estimated $200 a ton as a "rough rule of thumb" measure, a Maritime Commission official estimated the value of the vessel at one million dollars. With raw rubber for December delivery quoted at 22.50 cents a pound, the 3000 tons of baled rubber reported in the cargo would be worth an additional $1,350,000. No estimate was available on the other items in the cargo, including "many" American-made tires, peanuts and rice.

The normal complement of the Omaha is about 450 men.

Precedents Obscure

The name of the cruiser and the ground on which the United States plans to take over the Hamburg-American Line ship were disclosed in the bill filed in the San Juan court by Justice Department attorneys yesterday. The ground of the action is that the German crew attempted to scuttle the vessel, disguised as an American merchant ship, when the cruiser ordered it to heave to in Atlantic equatorial waters, November 6. As the crew, then began abandoning ship and raised signals that she was sinking, the United States is proceeding under the age-old maritime salvage law which declares a sinking ship which has called for help the property of the rescuers, cargo and all.

Legal experts said they knew of no precedents of an American warship salvaging a merchantman. One case in 1921 was recalled of an Army transport which salvaged a merchant vessel. There the trans-

House Group Seeking New Curb on Strikes

Tacit Administration Approval Is Given For Labor Measure

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The House Labor Committee with tacit Administration consent yesterday started preparation of labor legislation designed to prevent interruption of defense production without imposition of drastic strike bans.

Chairman Mary T. Norton submitted a tentative bill draft and her House committee, usually strongly pro-labor, was called again into session today to review other labor bills pending in House and Senate. Mrs. Norton predicted a composite bill will be reported "some time next week."

Congressional leaders declined comment following a White House legislative conference. In one quarter it was reported that the President reserved judgment, but consented to preparation of legislation for submission to him.

Blockade May Fail

A threatened House Rules Committee blockade of price control legislation until a labor measure is put forward meanwhile showed signs of collapsing today when hearings on a price bill rule are to be resumed. An effort will be made to report a rule for the price legislation, call it up in the House next week and clear decks for probable labor legislation thereafter.

Across the Capitol, a Senate Judiciary subcommittee arranged to call witnesses from the War and Navy Departments and the Maritime Commission Friday on the Connally bill, empowering the President to take over strike-bound defense plants or mines.

Cooling-Off Period

At yesterday's meeting of the House Labor Committee Mrs. Norton outlined the confidential draft of a bill reconstituting and strengthening National Defense Mediation Act machinery and providing power to stay strikes for 30 days during mediation deliberations.

Both Chairman Norton and Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, ranking majority member of the committee, told reporters they would be willing to go farther and require a secret vote of a majority of workers in an industry before leaders of a labor union could

State Police Patrol Captive Pits in Two States in an Effort To Halt Clashes

By Walter Mason
Associated Press Staff Writer

Gary, W. Va., Nov. 18.—Almost 200 State troopers were ordered into the major trouble spot of the captive mine strike tonight almost at the same time that independent union miners were addressing appeals for protection to the President, Governor and sheriff.

Superintendent John W. Bosworth of the State police sent orders to his four company captains to bring in all available men to preserve order, after two men were wounded at one captive mine attempting to operate.

W. T. Nunally, president of the Independent Associated Miners Union, which is opposing the United Mine Workers five-State strike to enforce a union shop for captive mines, said in a telegram to President Roosevelt:

"We have been cut, stabbed, shot, maimed, bombed and feloniously assaulted for no reason except we want to work. We need protection."

Similar telegrams were sent to Gov. M. M. Neely and Sheriff Lucian Fry, of McDowell County.

[Spread of the strike and further disorders were indicated in dispatches from various coal mine centers last night.

[Vice President William Blizzard, of U. M. W. District 17, at Charleston, W. Va., said he had reports that more commercial miners were joining sympathy strikes and predicted the Associated Press reported, that all coal mines in West Virginia would be closed "within 48 hours." About 105,000 miners are employed in the State.

C. I. O. Backs U. S. Foreign Policy

Scorns Isolationist Stand of Lewis At Convention

By A. H. Raskin.

Copyright by New York Times

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 18.—Routing the isolationist forces of John L. Lewis, the Fourth Constitutional Convention of the Congress of Industrial Organizations gave its support today to President Roosevelt's policy of all-out aid to Great Britain, Russia and China.

The resolution of indorsement for the Administration's foreign policy was adopted unanimously, with the Lewis-controlled delegations from the United Mine Workers and the United Construction Workers abstaining from voting in the face of a direct appeal from C. I. O. President Philip Murray.

The convention's action was taken after it had received a solemn warning from President Roosevelt that the Government would not tolerate interruptions of defense production because of labor disputes. The President said sacrifices would be necessary to insure the defeat of Hitler and that the labor movement would be expected to share with every other section of the population in making these sacrifices.

"We need guns, tanks, planes and ships," the Roosevelt message declared, "and we must produce guns, tanks, planes and ships without delay and without interruption, and the American people and their Government are determined that we shall have them.

"I have every confidence that your members, recognizing the imperative needs of the American people in the interest of American defense, will cooperate with all other American groups in the common and in the patriotic interest. Americans will demand such a contribution from management, from labor and from all other groups for the preservation of home, family, religion and Nation."

The passage of the resolution calling for the extension of aid in quantities sufficient to accomplish "the military annihilation of Hitler's regime" was accompanied by a declaration by Murray of the C. I. O.'s intention to press for greater economic gains for its members and to "fight every inch of the way against the enactment of labor-baiting, labor-manacling legislation" in Congress.

The only voices that were raised to suggest that labor take cognizance of the fate of France and put aside some of its aspirations for the duration of the emergency came from followers of Sidney Hillman, Associate Director of the OPM and president on leave of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

Misgivings Expressed

Leo Krzycki, an Amalgamated vice president and chief spokesman for the Hillman group, and Sander Genis, regional representative of the Textile Workers Union in Minneapolis, brought into the open the misgivings felt by some of the convention delegates in extending unqualified support yesterday to the strike in the captive coal mines, but Murray left no doubt in his remarks that he was wholeheartedly in sympathy with the attitude of Lewis and the United Mine Workers on this question.

The unanimity of the convention in its action on the war resolution provided dramatic evidence of the extent to which the influence of Lewis within the C. I. O. has declined since he broke with President Roosevelt.

A year ago the coalition of Lewis' supporters with the left-wing unions, which opposed the Roosevelt policies until Germany invaded Russia, made it possible for the C. I. O. founder to block any action backing up Mr. Roosevelt.

This year Michael J. Quill, president of the Transport Workers Union; Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union and other left-wing leaders were among the most vociferous advocates of the pro-Roosevelt resolution. The delegates from the mine and construction unions, both of which are dominated by Mr. Lewis, found themselves isolated in their isolationism.

Appeals Court Upholds Rail Labor Act

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday upheld the constitutionality of the Railway Labor Act of 1934, which established the National Railway Adjustment Board for settlement of disputes between carriers and employes.

The ruling, to which Associate Justice Harold M. Stephens issued a dissenting opinion, was in favor of two railroad employe brotherhoods, involved in litigation with the Washington Terminal Co., operators of Union Station.

Nearly $250,000, claimed by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginement as pay due them, is said to be involved in the judgment.

The litigation arose in 1934 when yard employes of the company claimed they were entitled to perform train moving work in the vicinity of the terminal, instead of trainmen employed by the railroads. The work would involve extra salary payments amounting to about $80,000 a year, dating from a board ruling in 1935.

The case was carried to the Railway Adjustment Board when the company refused the demands, and the board subsequently decided in favor of the workers.

The Terminal Company refused to comply and brought action against the decision in District Court. The District tribunal dismissed the suit and the action was upheld by yesterday's appellate ruling.

The company's challenge against the act's constitutionality was brought on grounds that a period of two years is required before litigation against a board ruling can be commenced.

their jobs "to mine coal vital to the national defense."

[A sympathy strike by 5000 miners in 32 commercial mines of the Hazard coal field was announced by Edgar Reynolds, union official.—Editor's note.]

The independent union claims 4000 members at the six mines of the United States Coal & Coke Co., a subsidiary of United States Steel.

William Hairston, Negro stableman, and William Lawson, Negro motorman, were shot as miners broke through a picket line and went to work at the company's No. 10 mine early today.

At No. 6 mine, biggest of all the operations, 200 pickets forced it to close. Pickets also appeared at three other operations in the big southern West Virginia valley and one mine was not picketed.

Sympathy Strikes Held In 13 Commercial Mines

Pittsburgh, Nov. 18 (AP).—Fighting between pickets and nonstrikers broke out today in western Pennsylvania mine fields for the first time in the two-day-old captive mine strike as sympathy walkouts closed 13 additional commercial mines which were not included in the United Mine Workers' strike call.

Sympathy strikes—which the U. M. W. here declared were unauthorized—also halted operations at all four captive mines of the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation and one of two "captive" mines of the Duquesne Light Co. Both firms have granted the union shop sought by the U. M. W. in other captive mines—those pits whose output is used solely by the owners.

Pennsylvania State police broke up a clash between pickets and miners at the Red Lyon mine of the H. C. Frick Co., United States Steel subsidiary, in Fayette County, center of the captive mine field. Fists swung and shirts were torn as the miners dashed through the picket lines. The police estimated there were 50 workers and 100 pickets. Shifts changed later without incident.

State police also rushed to Frick's Ronco Mine, where rocks were hurled at two automobiles bearing nonstrikers into the mine property. No one was hurt in either clash and there were no arrests.

Despite those disturbances, the Frick Co. estimated that 3400 of its 13,600 miners were at work in 14 Fayette County mines—a figure challenged by the U. M. W. which claimed only a "trickle" of men entered the pits.

The Bethlehem Steel Co.5s Rosedale Mine at Johnstown continued operations with a crew estimated at 200 by police. With the exception of the Bethlehem and Frick mines, the other "captive" mines in the State were shut down.

Spread of the sympathy strikes to 13 additional commercial mines brought the total affected to 18 in western and central Pennsylvania, cutting off daily production of approximately 50,000 tons. The commercial mines in 1939 agreed to the union shop, which requires workers to join the union within a limited period of employment.

House Group Seeks to Curb Defense Strikes

The strike ballot principle is embodied in the Bridges bill, now pending before the Senate Labor Committee. Both the Bridges bill and the Connally bill will be considered by the House Labor committee today.

It was learned that Mrs. Norton called her committee together only after consulting the House leadership and advising the White House of her purpose.

Substitute Measures

Meantime Representative Vinson (Democrat), of Georgia, author of the Vinson "cooling off" period labor bill already approved by the House Naval Affairs and Rules Committees, announced he was preparing a substitute attacking defense labor holdups "mainly through mediation and collective bargaining processes."

A more far-reaching substitute was perfected by Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, providing (in addition to the 30-day cooling off) for freezing of the closed shop status quo in defense industries, banning jurisdictional and sympathetic strikes, prohibiting mass picketing and violence and requiring secret strike ballots.

House leaders stood on their former pledges that the House will have an opportunity to consider labor legislation in the near future. Indications were House members would get a chance to vote on all of the major legislative proposals under a Vinson bill rule permitting consideration of any number of substitutes.

With the majority of House Republicans wary and uncommitted, and Democrats divided between drastic and moderate methods of meeting the strike problem, the Administration decision on the form of the legislation may determine the final House choice.

Outline of Measure

Mrs. Norton's tentative outline of a bill, submitted to the House Labor Committee yesterday, gives statutory status to the National Defense Mediation Board with far broader scope to act in situations like the present captive mine strike.

In addition to use of mediation panels, composed of employer, employe and public representatives, the board would be authorized to use only pubic representatives if either employe or employer members refuse to participate, or if the chairman decided they were not representatives of parties to the dispute.

If a settlement failed, the chairman could appoint a panel of the board to make an investigation and submit findings and recommendations which would be published by the board.

Power to Ban Strikes

To maintain the status quo during negotiations, the board would be empowered to forbid strikes during its deliberations, up to 30 days, through cease and desist orders enforced in Federal courts.

Disputes could be certified to the board either by the Secretary of Labor or on application of either party when the chairman of the board determines the necessity.

The bill grants the board the same authority exercised by the Federal Trade Commission in procuring evidence and requiring attendance of witnesses.

Roosevelt Hits Lewis' Strike Reasons

The so-called "protective wage clause" in question in the Appalachian agreement reads:

"If the United Mine Workers of America make a wage agreement during said period covering wages or working conditions with any person, association, or district within the Appalachian area, on a basis more favorable than the above, then this agreement shall be modified so that all parties to the Appalachian agreement shall receive all the benefits of such more favorable wage agreement."

The President commented:

"On the coal strike let me make this point perfectly clear, that the Appalachian agreement in all the commercial mines stands just as it has ever since it went into operation, and that no questions involved in the captive mine strike would affect the pay, or the hours, or the collective bargaining recognition of the United Mine Workers in any of the Appalachian agreement mines."

Modification Held Unlikely

"Would this take into account Mr. Lewis' 'Point A' ——," a reporter began, referring to the "protective wage clause" mentioned in Lewis' letter of Monday.

It would, the President answered.

He added that the Appalachian agreement stands just as it has for full recognition of the union, and implied that if Lewis signed an open shop contract in the captive mines, the prior, union-shop Appalachian agreement would not be modified in any way, shape or form.

"Therefore," the President continued, "I do not think that 'Point A' in Mr. Lewis' letter was a valid point."

He explained that he was quite sure no mine now under the Appalachian agreement would choose to change in any way any of the conditions now obtaining in the agreement.

Less than half an hour later, Lewis, apprised of the President's remarks, dictated a reply to reporters:

"Obviously, the open-shop condition of a contract must be esteemed by the steel companies as a more favorable condition. Otherwise, they would not fight and disturb the tranquillity of the Nation by insisting up on the deletion of the union shop clause from the Appalachian agreement.

"Certainly the mine workers regard the union shop condition as a 'more favorable condition.' If this wore not true, the steel magnates could sign the Appalachian agreement in five minutes and abate the controversy and relieve the Nation. It is the unanimous judgment of the mine workers of the Nation that they should make this contribution."

"Dishonor Their Agreement"

Asked about the President's implication that the commercial mine owners themselves would not change the contract to an open shop pact even if Lewis signed a less favorable contract with the captive mine operators, Lewis continued:

"Any suggestion that the mine workers should dishonor their own agreement by giving the great steel companies more favored conditions than other companies cannot be seriously considered. The mine workers have a record for 30 years of punctilious observance of all contractual obligations. They cannot now depart from this policy."

An indication of the serious effect of the strike came from Pittsburgh officials of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation, a United States Steel Corporation subsidiary. They said that it probably would be necessary to stop operations of six blast furnaces within the next 48 hours because of impending fuel shortages.

No Comment on Spread

Neither Lewis nor any of the U. M. W. officials available would comment on the spread of the strike to commercial and other captive mines already signatories to the union-shop Appalachian agreement.

Reports from Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia showed that about 10,000 miners in that area were involved in such "unauthorized" stoppages in commercial and Jones & Laughlin Steel Co. mines, where the union shop was accepted last summer.

There was also no indication that either national headquarters or district officers were seeking to stop these sympathy strikes, or even acknowledge that they were "wildcat." Instead, it was pointed out that on September 16 Lewis had served notice to all signatories of the Appalachian agreement that he would call strikes at their mine at will if such action were necessary "to preserve and maintain the integrity and competitive parity" of the union shop agreement.

President Watchful

President Roosevelt, declining to comment on his future action or to make any overt move to crush the strike, was described yesterday by responsible Administration labor officials as having adopted a policy of watchful waiting for a few days.

He was said to be averse to sending troops to the strike-bound pits and thus creating an issue which would inevitably be decided against him at the current Congress of Industrial Organizations convention in Detroit.

Meantime, he was thought to be relying on disaffection from within the mine workers' ranks, and particularly from major elements in the C.I.O. The threat of fiercely punitive legislation was also said to be a factor which might force a speedy collapse of the coal strike.

White House Rail Parley Fails to Break Deadlock

A White House conference called in the hope of averting a strike which would paralyze the Nation's railroads, broke up yesterday with both rail executives and labor representatives declaring no conclusions were reached. They added they would see President Roosevelt again today.

While discussions will continue, Alvaney Johnston, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, said that orders for a strike on December 7 still stood.

"Has there been any change in the situation?" he was asked.

"Not a bit," he declared emphatically.

John J. Pelly, president of the Association of American Railroads, reported that "we just discussed this wage situation, reached no conclusions, and are still discussing it."

Air Service Forms New Supply Unit

The War Department yesterday announced formation of a new Air Service command, under Brig. Gen. Henry J. F. Miller, and with headquarters at Dayton, Ohio, to supply, maintain and store material and equipment, and service the Army air forces.

Replacing the maintenance section of the present materials division, the command will control all maintenance and supply operations throughout the United States and its possessions. These will include four continental service areas with headquarters at Hartford, Conn.; Spokane, Wash.; Tampa, Fla., and Riverside, Calif., as well as divisions at Panama, Hawaii and the Philippines.

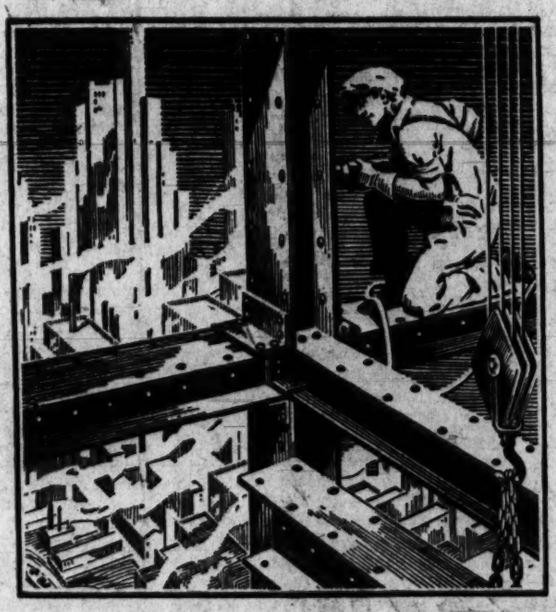
What are you building there?

Everywhere in America, towers of steel and stone rise to remind us of the vastness of American industry. Impressive buildings, yes—but something more. They house the nerve centers of American business. They remind us that American products have become the standard for all the world.



What's the meaning of a plant so big?

To supply America's demand for Budweiser requires all the vast facilities of the world's largest brewery with its 137 buildings covering 70 city blocks. Like a great city, this plant produces a volume of electricity that would supply all the homes in El Paso, steam enough to heat all the homes in Syracuse, ice that would meet the needs of all the households in Spokane. A great plant, yes — but something more . . . the answer to America's demand for a quality product.

Few British Strikes Tie Up Production

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

What is the labor picture in Great Britain? How does Britain manage to avoid such disputes as the one which now has sent 53,000 of John L. Lewis' coal miners out on strike and which has seriously threatened America's defense program?

Labor disputes in Britain still are numerous. In 1940 there were some 914 disputes, which was more than were recorded in the prewar year of 1938, when the number was 875.

However, labor disputes are one thing and strikes that actually halt production are another. Of such strikes, Britain has had relatively few, and none of them serious. In 1940 the number of man days lost in Britain as a result of industrial disputes was 940,000—a trifling fraction when it is considered that Britain has about 20 million workers, and that these, on the basis of 300 working days in a year, represent six billion man days worked.

In July, 1940, after Dunkerque, the British ministry of labor, acting under special war powers, issued an order virtually prohibiting strikes and lockouts. However, American experts say that this order did not appear to be an urgent necessity, for industrial disputes had not seriously impeded British defense industries. It was, they say, rather a precaution to ward off possible embarrassment in the future.

In fact, labor laws are only a part of the answer to the question. Why is there less industrial turmoil in Britain than in the United States? The real answer, according to Americans who have studied the question, is that in Britain there is a greater spirit of reasonableness.

This spirit, they say, is not altogether a product of the war, but rather a tradition of long standing. And they explain it by citing the fact that trade unionism is much older in Britain than it is in the United States.

Collective bargaining is generally accepted in Britain, but it is not specifically granted by British law. On the other hand, Britain, some time ago, passed a law which prohibited rioting, violence and intimidation arising from picketing. But according to a report by the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, there was slight need to invoke this particular law. British labor disputes, the report said, were "proverbially peaceful."

"The statutes," said this report, referring to the situation before Dunkerque, "played little part in maintaining industrial peace, which seems to have been due to restraint and reason on all sides."

Two months ago a delegation of British industrialists and labor leaders arrived in Washington. They came over by clipper at the invitation of OPM to study American industrial methods and relationships.

Will Lawther, president of the Mine Workers Federation of Great Britain, did most of the talking for the delegation at a press conference. At the time of the visit, he frequently was referred to as Britain's John L. Lewis.

"To strike during wartime," said Lawther, "would be nothing less than treason."

So far as he and Britain's miners were concerned, he emphasized by this remark, the order barring strikes was wholly unnecessary.

British trade unions, it was pointed out in the report of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, are legal organizations, and like other legal organizations they must pursue their activities in a lawful manner. How their activities should be pursued is prescribed not only in acts of Parliament but also by certain provisions of the common law.

The Trade Disputes and Trade Unions Act of 1927 was enacted to make impossible in the future a general strike such as Britain experienced in 1926. This act prohibited any strike "designed or calculated to coerce the government either directly or by inflicting hardship upon the community . . ."

The machinery of collective bargaining in British industries consists of joint groups representing both employers and employes. When these joint groups fail to reach a settlement, impartial outsiders are called in to help. A governmental scheme of conciliation and arbitration also plays an important part in disputes.

Willkie Lashes Roosevelt's Labor Policy

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 18.—Wendell L. Willkie charged the Roosevelt Administration tonight with failure to announce a clear and open policy for labor, and suggested that labor be given a share in the responsibility and policy-making of the Government.

Two immediate steps were advocated by the 1940 Republican Presidential nominee in a speech prepared for a dinner at which he was presented the Churchman Award for 1941 "for the promotion of good will and better understanding among all peoples." They were:

1. The organization of a labor board "truly representative of those they are supposed to represent." Public representatives would be appointed by the President; industry's representatives by organizations representing industry, and labor's representatives by elections of both the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O.

2. Transformation of the Department of Labor "from a mere adjunct of Government into a participant in Government." He cited the British cabinet as an example of how the plan could work, where labor has representation in the cabinet and shares in the government's policy-making.

The Nation's strength, productiveness and ability to help in the fight against totalitarianism, Willkie asserted, were more seriously threatened today "than at any time since Adolf Hitler first menaced our freedom."

"At the very moment when it is vitally important that our unity of purpose be made clear in order to deal most effectively with the foreign threat," he added, "we are weakened in the eyes of the totalitarian world by strife at home."

Confusion of all parties has resulted from the government's "lack of a consistent and recognizable policy toward labor," Willkie said. As an example, Willkie cited the President's reply to President John L. Lewis of the C.I.O. United Mine Workers that the Government never would force the closed shop.

Coupled with this statement, the speaker continued, were two unofficial offers which Willkie said Philip Murray, C. I. O. president, asserted the President made to him: To write personal letters to 2500 nonunion miners asking them to join as "a patriotic duty" and the President's offer to obtain for the mine workers a maintenance of membership clause.

"Now I submit," Willkie went on, "that which ever side of the argument you may be on those three statements taken in conjunction, show complete inconsistency and vacillation in the Administration's policy toward labor and industry. This is no time for playing backdoor politics. This is no time for taking up each case on its merits and laying down different principles each time in the childish hope that all will come out right in the end."

Wickard Hopeful Over Post-War Prospects; U. S. Drafts Plans Again Industrial Collapse

By the Associated Press

Secretary of Agriculture Wickard announced yesterday a Nation-wide organization of farmers and department workers to help prevent a depression in the "postwar period."

Bluntly disputing usually accepted forecasts of a severe economic slump when present hostilities end, Wickard said that the Department of Agriculture "does not share this pessimism."

"We believe the country need never go through a major depression again," the Secretary said in a memorandum. "We believe it is possible to maintain a national income greater than ever before in the history of the Nation."

The Cabinet member said that a national committee had been set up within the department to draft a broad agricultural plan for a "postwar world in which we will make full use of our man power and our resources for the benefit of the American people."

Offers 3-Point Plan

He outlined a three-point plan to be worked out in cooperation with State agricultural colleges and the 122,000 farm men and women now serving on State and county agricultural planning committees.

Wickard suggested these major points for the postwar program:

1. Public works to build up and conserve national resources, such as forestry, soil conservation, flood control, water facilities, range improvement.

2. Services for rural people, such as housing, medical care, rural electrification, education, libraries, market facilities.

3. Studies of industrial decentralization, distribution of farm products through methods such as the food-stamp plan, keeping America's share of foreign markets for farm products, and maintaining industrial output and employment at high levels.

It was learned, in addition, that Government planners intent on preventing postwar industrial collapse have gone to work on programs which either would place industry under controls and guarantees similar to those which now apply to agriculture, under the triple A, or provide for selective Government spending to stimulate private enterprise.

Under the first program, a reliable source disclosed, the Government would guarantee full output and employment in industry by allotting production quotas and promising to buy all goods the makers could not otherwise market.

Under the second it would channel money into urban redevelopment; integration and modernization of railways; highways and airways, and navigation or power projects in the Nation's rivers.

If the first plan should be adopted, presumably such surplus stocks as the Government takes over would be distributed by some method fashioned after the food stamp system.

Protagonists of this plan envision the Nation consuming all that industry is capable of producing, thus assuring full employment and high levels of national income—in conformity with the "freedom from want" declaration of the Roosevelt-Churchill Atlantic Charter.

A national planning board, assisted by advisory committees, would fix production and employment quotas based upon an industry's record of production over a stated period. The board would enter an agreement with the industry that a subsidiary Government corporation would buy all unsold surplus within the quota at a stated price.

8 in Laundry Strike Fight Go on Trial

Eight striking employes of the Arcade-Sunshine Laundry Co., involved in a walkout which began early last summer, went on trial in District Court yesterday charged with conspiracy and assault with a dangerous weapon.

The defendants are accused of having attacked three nonstriking workers, engaged in delivering laundry to the Ambassador Hotel, in an alley behind the hostelry on July 17. The trial, before a jury of five women and seven men, will continue today.

Two victims of the alleged attack, Harry Lubar and William Thompson, asserted the defendants followed them in a car, set upon them and tried to drag them out of the truck.

Weapon Carried in Truck

Lubar admitted under cross-examination that the truck was equipped with a 14-inch length of metal pipe which he handled in the fight. He asserted he suffered bruises on his arm and chest, but admitted he was not treated by a doctor or at a hospital.

The defendents are Walter Johnson, Lewis Crew, Clarence Blackwell, James Powell, Russell Bruce, Clive Henderson, George Marshall and Douglas Freeman, all Negroes. Freeman and Wesley Ward, a third alleged victim, were not present at the trial.

Defense Attorneys Charles E. Ford and Samuel Levine said they would contend that the men were peaceably asking the alleged victims to join in the strike when they themselves were attacked. Ford said he would produce hospital records showing that Johnson was treated for cuts on the head following the affray.

Rubber Hose Involved

Justice F. Dickinson Letts has under advisement a motion by the defense attorneys to exclude from evidence a piece of taped metal cable and several lengths of rubber hose, allegedly used in the attack.

They claim that the cable was not adequately identified as a weapon involved and that the hose was taken from a defendant's car in an improper search.

Assistant United States Attorney John Laskey is prosecuting the case.

President Has Not Seen Plans for 44-Hour Week

President Roosevelt yesterday said he has seen no plans for boosting the work week of all Government employes to 44 hours.

The Navy Department on Monday ordered a 44-hour week for all its civilian employes. The War Department took similar action several months ago. The new schedule has been interpreted as the forerunner of a longer working week in all Federal offices.

Ship Workers Strike ½ Hr. In Britain

By the Associated Press

Glasgow, Scotland, Nov. 18.—Ignoring government appeals posted on plant walls, thousands of Clydeside shipbuilding workers struck for 30 minutes today to protest a delay in negotiations for a 10-shilling ($2) wage increase on salaries ranging from the equivalent of $12 to $16 a week.

The interruption at 4:30 p. m. was not recognized by the Amalgamated Engineering (Machinists) Union, but strike leaders estimated that 100,000 workers would participate daily in such token walkouts unless their demands were met.

Some trade unions dispatched telegrams protesting this strike which cost thousands of hours of work in an industry held vital to the "Battle of the Atlantic."

While an amalgamated engineering union official conferred in London with government leaders, A. V. Alexander, first lord of the admiralty, had last-minute appeals posted at the yards in an attempt to forestall the strike.

These pointed out that the strike would be a poor return for all that the Russian allies were suffering in their fight against the Germans.

U. S. Forces Strengthened In Philippines fire.

Maj. Gen. Clayton B. Vogel, who has been just relieved as commander of the Second Marine Division, is understood to be the commander of the Pacific Amphibious Force, although no announcement has been made. Vogel formerly was adjutant and inspector of the Marine Corps.

Other Marine Moves

Strong Marine Corps defensive units also have been installed at the new submarine and air base being rushed to completion in American Samoa, while other base defense troops are in the Hawaiian area for protection of the other mid-Pacific naval seaplane bases.

No announcement has been made as to where the Marine units being withdrawn from China will be sent, but speculation in Marine Corps circles is that it will augment the Pacific Amphibious Force.

Gen. MacArthur's command, officially designated the "United States Army Forces in the Far East," is known to have one division of wholly American troops, and another well-trained division of Filipinos that is officered by American Army officers. Five thousand men were recently transferred from the Philippine Commonwealth Army to this unit, named the Philippine Scouts, to bring it up to a full division.

9 Philippine Divisions

In addition, the Commonwealth army—set up under direction of MacArthur five years ago—will supply about nine divisions. Compulsory military training established then had built up a reserve of 143,000 men last June, not counting the 5000 men transferred to the Philippine Scouts, some 20,000 to 40,000 men taking their six-month draft training, and the small permanent training organization.

This reserve is now being mobilized and is being intensively trained to fit into the 11 divisions set up. Supplemental Army appropriations now before Congress carry 247 million dollars for mobilizing and training the Far Eastern force.

The size of the air force under MacArthur's command is a military secret, but it admittedly has been greatly strengthened in recent months. That it has considerable strength is indicated by the recent assignment of a ranking Air Force officer, Maj. Gen. Lewis H. Brereton, to head it.

Japan has an army of about 60 divisions, totaling slightly over two million men. Its air force aggregates about 3600 first-line planes, not counting reserves and trainers, about evenly divided between the army and navy.

Although this force is far greater than anything contemplated in the Philippines, practically all of Japan's army is "committed" in other areas. Latest available data as to distribution of its forces placed 37 divisions in China, 9 or 10 in Manchukuo, 2 in Korea, 4 in French Indo-China, and 4 to 6 in Japan proper.

Opposing them, actually or potentially, is a Chinese army of about two million men—partially organized units and partially guerilla troops—a crack Russian army still aggregating about 25 divisions despite withdrawals for use against the Nazis, a Dutch East Indian force of upward of 180,000 and strong Anzac forces in Singapore.

A few years ago, many military experts held that the Philippines could not be held against a Japanese attack. Today, few such assertions are heard.

An invasion could not be even attempted, without withdrawing large numbers of troops from China, and even then, the army being whipped into shape in the Philippines might well make an invasion too costly to be profitable.

The American Far Eastern forces, it is believed, would be a "hard nut to crack."

Gen. Greely Due To Head Mission Going to Russia

Maj. Gen. John N. Greely, until recently in command at Fort Sam Houston, one of the country's largest Army posts, is scheduled to leave shortly for Archangel, Russia, as the head of a large United States military mission in process of formation, responsible quarters reported yesterday.

Although plans regarding the mission have been kept secret and War Department officials questioned yesterday said "no comment," it was understood that the objective of the body would be to consult with the Soviet general staff about military problems in which there is mutual interest; supervise disposal of lend-lease supplies and provide expert advice where this might be desired.

Gen. Greely is regarded as one of the most capable general officers in the Army.

Hull, Kurusu Seem Poles Apart; Tokyo Talks Chill Air of Parley

talks were still on an exploratory level and that the stage has not yet been set for negotiation on particular points of dispute.

Asked if he considered that the negotiations were making "satisfactory progress," Hull said he would have to wait a little longer before he could give any helpful information on that point. He made it plain that he would not welcome further questioning on his conversation with Kurusu.

The Secretary told reporters he expected to meet with the Japanese envoys again today if they were prepared to go forward with the conversations.

Kurusu and Nomura are believed to have conferred at length later in the day with Japanese Embassy experts on American policy and to have exchanged cable reports with their government in Tokyo.

Leaving Hull's office, Nomura said he was "still hopeful" of a peaceful settlement of Japanese-American differences.

Japanese Are Silent

Both Nomura and Kurusu shied away from further discussion of their meeting with Hull, and the Ambassador, when asked if the length of the conference indicated that the negotiators had gotten down to specific points, replied with a smile:

"It lasted a long time because of my bad understanding of English."

When a reporter asked Kurusu if the negotiations were making "satisfactory progress," the diplomat referred the question to Nomura.

The question was repeated for Nomura and he suggested that the reporters take it up with Hull.

Before the conference with Hull, Nomura had told newspapermen that he could not understand why the American press was "so gloomy" about Japanese-American relations.

"Why should there be any fight between our two countries?" he asked. "Why are the newspapers here so gloomy? We are very hopeful."

"You Americans are always in a fighting mood," he continued. "Why are you so war-minded?"

A reporter commented that Japanese newspapers have been taking a much more belligerent line in the present situation than the press in this country.

Kurusu broke in to remark:

"We used to have naval holidays. Perhaps it's a pity we can't have a press holiday."

Patient Slays Surgery Professor At Duke Hospital

Durham, N. C., Nov. 18 (U.P.).—Dr. Robert Randolph Jones, jr., 39, associate professor of surgery at the Duke Medical School, today was fatally shot by a patient who emptied a .22 pistol at him and was still firing with a .32 revolver when overpowered.

Police said they were holding John S. Baldwin, 38, of Whiteville, N. C., a former patient of Dr. Jones. No charges had been placed against Baldwin pending an investigation.

Baldwin, a farmer, entered the hospital and met Jones as the doctor left his office. He began firing at Jones without warning, police said, shooting him five times in the head. Baldwin was overpowered by two other doctors as he stood over Jones firing the second pistol at him. Hospital authorities said Baldwin may have been dissatisfied with a delicate plastic surgery operation performed on him last summer.

Alien Detention Measure Killed By 167-141 Vote

The Hobbs bill, a hotly-debated measure to permit forcible detention without bail of deportable aliens was killed in the House yesterday by a bi-partisan vote of 167 to 141, with the opposition contending it would set up concentration camps similar to those of Germany.

Death of the bill—labelled by its sponsors as a move to safeguard this country against foreign "termites" and criminally-inclined alien "guests"—came even as the Justice Department was reported to be planning a broad expansion of its alien detention centers.

Representative Eliot (Democrat), of Massachusetts, described the legislation as a "concentration camp bill" on the ground that aliens could be detained without jury trial—would lose their freedom "simply through a decision of a board that it is best for the country that they be imprisoned."

Robert L. Haycock, first assistant school superintendent.

Late yesterday, however, Haycock said the letter has not been received. Why, neither he nor Reed could understand.

Had the letter been received last Saturday, the proposed conference with SMA officials on the Washington milk distribution plan might have been held Monday. Receiving informal approval by the Federal officials, the setup might then have been submitted to today's meeting of the Board of Education for action preliminary to formal application.

But the letter is "missing."

Thousands Wait Patiently

The conference desired by the Haycock committee could have been arranged a week ago by telephone. There will not be another meeting of the Board of Education for two more weeks. Meantime, more than 35,000 needy youngsters—not counting the 8000 who now receive free school lunches, including milk, five days a week—must wait patiently.

Perhaps, now that the Reed letter is conceded lost, he will telephone Dr. Ballou or Haycock today, or one of them will telephone Reed, and schedule the conference forthwith.

In addition to the film, "Penny a Day," benefits of penny half-pints are noted in an exhaustive report on the progress of school lunch programs, issued yesterday by the Bureau of Agricultural Economists.

Pointing out that more than five million school children the country over will receive free lunches this winter, made possible by Government purchase of surplus commodities, the report emphasized that a large proportion of selective service rejections is traceable to childhood malnutrition.

Bronze Markers Barred on Graves Of Soldiers

The Budget Bureau yesterday banned the erection of bronze markers on soldiers' graves.

Harold D. Smith, budget director, explained that in rejecting a War Department request for money in the next fiscal year's budget, he found that the cost of bronze markers had risen from $8.95 to $12.65 each and, moreover, that the bronze was needed in defense industry.

The Government regularly puts up markers on veterans' graves, but nine out of every ten family requests are for either marble or granite, which henceforth will be used exclusively.

The ruling is expected to save 6½ tons of bronze.

Hearings Close in Langer's Case

tioned the Senate against seating Langer. He inferred that Langer's chief defense technique was to divert members of the committee by telling "a lot of Wild West stories."

Georgian Speaks

Thomas W. Hardwick, former Georgia Senator, contended that Langer is already a Senator, that if the Senate took any action against him it would have to be by two-thirds vote under rules covering expulsion of Senators, and that a member can't be expelled for something he did before he became a Senator.

Former Senator Edward Burke, of Nebraska, maintained, however, that Langer took his seat "without prejudice" pending disposition of the charges and that the Senate had a right to consider his qualifications just as though he had never taken the oath.

"You are all Senators of the United States," declared Burke. "It is not just North Dakota that is interested in whether Senator Langer is morally fit to sit in the Senate of the United States."

Japan Delays Definition of Pledge to Axis

By the Associated Press

Tokyo, Nov. 18.—Japan intimated today that her decision as to how to define her obligations under the third clause of the Axis pact—that clause which under some circumstances could be interpreted to mean a shooting alliance with Germany and Italy—might depend upon the result of Saburo Kurusu's mission to Washington.

This was the inference thrown out by Foreign Minister Shigenori Togo before a parliament that by its vast military appropriations and in its other actions had given elaborate manifestations of unity behind the government. It was at once accepted in some foreign quarters as a bargaining effort in which the empire was using her strongest diplomatic weapon: a threat to draw much closer to the Axis than at present.

The result of Kurusu's conversations in Washington was as yet unpredictable, the foreign minister observed, and then he added:

"It is still too early to state what effect the outcome will have on the third clause of the tripartite pact."

That section of the alliance obliges each signatory to give military aid to its fellow signers if they are "attacked" by any power not involved atth e time the instrument was drawn in either the European or China war. Thus standing at the heart of any implementation of the clause would be the decision as to who was the attacker and who was the attacked.

Togo declared that Kurusu had been sent to the United States only to assist Ambassador Nomura and "carried no new instructions." Thus he implied that Japan's position had changed in no fundamental since talks were opened with Washington seven months ago.

Premier Gen. Hideki Tojo and Navy Minister Shigetaro Shimada announced to the Diet that the army and navy were ready for any eventuality, but these expressions were prompted by inquiries respecting relations with Russia rather than the United States—specifically concerning the Sea of Japan, where at least two Japanese shipssinking has been blamed on drifting Soviet mines.

The Japanese government, Togo disclosed, already has refused "on the grounds of insufficiency" the Soviet reply to a protest involving the sinking of one of those vessels, the Kebi Maru.

"The Soviet," he added, "claims mines at Vladivostok are being planted against the Italo-German powers."

Speaks to "the World"

Premier Tojo announced that another extraordinary session of the Diet might be called after the scheduled ending of the present special session tomorrow if it was deemed necessary for "presenting a united front in the current situation."

"I speak here to the entire world," he added solemnly. "Not merely to members of the Diet.

"World attention has been closely focussed on the Imperial Diet; therefore the significance of calling an extraordinary session is apparent."

Maj. Kametaro Tominaga of the army press section declared to the nation by radio that the United States "actually is the backbone of the ABCD encirclement of Japan"—that claimed to have been effected by America, Britain, China and the Dutch East Indies.

"The United States," he said, "is taking the initiative for formation of encirclement . . . by instigating countries in the western Pacific and by the malicious nature of the United States."

First Photo—Capture of Nazi Ship Odenwald

U. S. SAILORS APPROACHING GERMAN VESSEL—This, the first photo showing the capture of the German motorship Odenwald by sailors of a U. S. Navy cruiser in the South Atlantic, was released yesterday. port crew was not allowed to share in the salvage money, but in this case, it was said, only the Government was a party to the suit.

The libel action against the Odenwald, news dispatches made plain, was filed in the name of both the Government as owner of the Omaha and of its officers and crew.

Lawyers said there were many cases in days gone by where Navy crews shared in prize money for enemy merchant ships captured and brought to port. A Federal statute, however, abolished this old common law right. The Omaha crew would not share in the award if the court held the Odenwald was captured, rather than salvaged. The crews of merchant vessels still share in salvage actions when they help bring in a damaged ship that was being abandoned.

planes and tanks," the Russians said.

Red Officer Admits Retreat

Without acknowledging the German claim of having entered the city of Kerch, Lieut. Col. Abdulayev, a Soviet officer, was quoted as saying:

"The enemy continues its offensive, and Soviet units slowly are retreating, offering stubborn resistance. Both sides are suffering heavy losses."

At Sevastopol, on the western end of the Crimea, the Germans used four infantry divisions and one motorized division in an attempt to crack the defenses of that Black Sea naval base, but they met "very strong Soviet resistance," the radio said.

House Study of New Defense Request Deferred

By the Associated Press

Administration leaders decided yesterday to postpone House consideration of President Roosevelt's request for $7,082,419,046 additional defense funds, informed sources said, lest it be made a vehicle for strike-curbing legislation.

The feeling of the leadership, it was said, was that ill-considered amendments might be hastily tacked on the bill.

After a conference with Speaker Rayburn, Chairman Cannon (Democrat), Missouri, of the House Appropriations Committee, announced that the huge new money bill would not be brought before the House until the first week of December. In the meantime, it was explained, the leadership hoped that the question of curbing defense strikes would be settled.

Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, spent several hours with the committee behind closed doors explaining the need for the Army's $6,687,000,000 share of the new funds and members said they had been assured no new American expeditionary force was in the making.

More than half of the Army's fund was earmarked for ordnance and some legislators said it would be used for "a lot more tanks, a lot more guns and a lot more ammunition."

It was learned that a substantial part of the new money was necessitated as a result of the Army's decision to increase greatly the motorization of its combat forces in line with lessons learned from operation of the so-called experimental fourth division. Under the new plans, it was said, many more motor vehicles, including the powerful half-track troop carriers, will be necessary.

Members said it was apparent that much more material aid for Russia was contemplated by the Government but they emphasized that equipment procured with the funds in the pending bill would not be manufactured for about 18 months.

U. S. Rector Held in Rome On Suspicion

By the Associated Press

Rome, Nov. 18.—Italian police today arrested the Rev. Hiram Gruber Woolf, of Elmira, N. Y., rector of the famous St. Paul's American Episcopal Church in Rome, and held him incommunicado after informing United States Embassy officials that his case was being investigated "on suspicion of intelligence activity."

The rector, who formerly held pulpits in Dresden and Munich in Germany, was arrested in his rectory at 9:30 a. m., two days before he planned to conduct a Thanksgiving Day service at which he would have read President Roosevelt's Thanksgiving Day proclamation.

The official Italian news agency Stefani has circulated a version of this proclamation quoting Mr. Roosevelt as thanking "the God of the United States," and one newspaper, La Stampa, of Turin, has characterized this as "a case of delirious pride."

(Actually, Mr. Roosevelt's proclamation, issued November 8, said "We are grateful to the Father . . . us all for the innumerable daily manifestations of His beneficent mercy in affairs both public and private." It also said: "Let us ask the Divine blessing on our decision and determination to protect our way of life against the forces of evil and slavery which seek in these days to encompass us.")

The two policemen who took Mr. Woolf into custody searched the rectory and confiscated a tray of visiting cards and copies of the unofficial news bulletin which the United States Department of State sends to the embassy here by radio. The bulletins were the property of two embassy clerks, Lisle Piepenburg, of Reidsville, Wis., and Hugh Osborne Macauley, of Washington, D. C., who have quarters in the rectory and were present at the time of the arrest.

The United States Charge d'Affaires, George Wadsworth, of Buffalo, N. Y., called at the foreign ministry to inquire about the case and was told that the action was taken on the basis of "seriously incriminating information" having nothing to do with the rector's church activities. The arrest was made on orders of the ministry of the interior, it was explained.

Wadsworth told the officials he knew Mr. Woolf well and knew nothing to indicate he had engaged in any intelligence activity. He asked to see him personally, wherever he is held, but it was indicated this request would not be granted for several days.

The officials promised Wadsworth they would tell him when and if formal charges were laid against the pastor.

(Mr. Woolf left Germany over a year ago on the advice of the United States consulate, according to information distributed by the national council of the Protestant Episcopal Church, with offices at 281 Fourth Avenue, New York. He was transferred to Rome in October of 1940. Last Fourth of July extremist Fascists were irritated because he flew the Star and stripes alongside the Italian flag from the facade of his church in Rome. Unmarried, Mr. Woolf formerly was chaplain of Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y.

HUGH OSBORNE MACAULEY,

Red Ties Close As Possible, Churchill Says

By the Associated Press

London, Nov. 18.—Prime Minister Churchill told Commons today that the cooperation between Great Britain and Russia was as close as "geographical and other conditions allow."

He made his statement in answer to a query from Laborite Josiah Wedgwood as to whether British and Russian relations were as close as those which existed between France and Britain when they were Allies.

House members urged the government to adopt drastic labor conscription measures during the session in which Churchill and cabinet members parried a wide variety of questions on domestic problems.

Waste and Delays Cited

Citing reports of waste, extravagance, delays and lack of planning in production, Sir Cuthbert Headlam, Conservative, said the minister of labor, Ernest Bevin, was "gravely mistaken when he did not conscript labor after Dunkirk."

"It is clear," Sir Cuthbert continued, "that if the prime minister decides to throw one of his band of brothers to the wolves many members would not hesitate suggesting who would be his most suitable successor.

"The minister is touring the country telling us that things are desperate, and threatening to conscript women to work in factories when he utterly failed to conscript men."

To all questions as to post-war plans, Churchill pointed to the Atlantic charter, agreed upon with President Roosevelt, as the only answer possible now.

U. S. Aid Discussed

Sir Andrew Rae Duncan, president of the Board of Trade, said "no opportunity is being neglected for discussions with the United States" in reply to a question of whether lease-lend aid would be continued after the war.

Capt. H. D. R. Margesson, secretary for war, told the members the government was not satisfied with certain aspects of the German treatment of prisoners of war, especially regarding food and clothing, and that these questions were being taken up with the protecting power in Germany.

The United States is representing Britain's interests in Germany.

Sir Alan Brooke Named Chief of Staff in British Army Shake-up

By the United Press

London (Wednesday), Nov. 19.—Great Britain shook up her army today, elevating Sir Alan Brooke, 58-year-old commander in chief of the home forces, a technical expert and advocate of an "army on wheels," to the rank of chief of the imperial general staff.

Maj. Gen. Archibald Edward Nye, 46, who rose in the ranks from a World War private, was made vice chief of staff. He had been director of staff duties.

Sir John Dill, chief of the imperial general staff, who accompanied Prime Minister Churchill to the Atlantic conference with President Roosevelt, relinquishes that post to go to India to be governor general of Bombay.

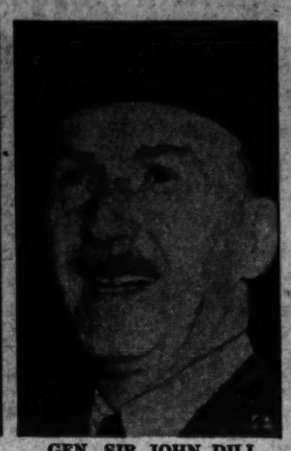
The whole shake-up was designed to bring to the front younger leaders versed in up-to-the-minute tactics and strategy.

Dill relinquishes the post he held since May, 1940, when he reaches the retirement age of 60 on December 24, the war office said.

Has No Bitterness

"I am always anxious that young men in the army should get on," Dill said. "It can only happen if older men give way to them . . . I need hardly say that I leave the service which I loved with deepest regret, but I am glad to say there is no bitterness."

GEN. SIR ALAN BROOKE



GEN. SIR JOHN DILL

Other significant changes were announced, Lieut. Gen. Sir Harry Pownall, 53, was transformed from the post of vice chief of the imperial general staff to "a special appointment," which authorities refused to amplify, although Dill said it would be explained soon.

Brooke is succeeded as commander-in-chief of the home forces by Lieut. Gen. B. C. T. Paget, 53, hero of the evacuation of Norway, who has been in command in southeast England.

Paget is succeeded by Lieut. Gen. B. L. Montgomery, 54, as commander of the area which is most likely to receive the brunt of any German invasion attempt. Montgomery has been "specially employed" since he held a divisional command in 1938.

Brooke, who has commanded home forces since he succeeded Gen. Sir William Edmund Ironside in July, 1940, is a noted expert on mechanization and gunnery and is reputed to be the inventor of a barrage map which now is commonly used for the direction of artillery barrages. He is credited with a vigorous campaign to put the army on wheels, accumulate tanks and amass every possible ounce of striking power in event the army is called upon either to defend the homeland or invade the continent.

Brooke commanded the Second Corps of the B. E. F. in Flanders when the Germans invaded the low countries and France, and thus participated in the Dunkerque evacuation. Dill paid this tribute to Brooke: "I hand over the duties of the chief of the imperial general staff to him with the greatest confidence."

Dill succeeds Sir Roger Lumley at Bombay.

Gallinger Surgeon Gets Special Award For New Technique

A special scientific award yesterday was granted by the Southern Medical Association to Dr. J. Ross Veal, chief surgeon at Gallinger Hospital, for his "new technique" in leg amputations.

Dr. Veal, it was explained, developed his process in 1938 and in constant practice here since then it has reduced the mortality rate in limb amputations 50 per cent. Clotting blood in the veins, it was reported, causes the greatest number of deaths in cases of this type.

The Gallinger surgeon, according to announcement from the Southern Medical Association, perfected a system of "tying off" principal veins close to the groin—thus preventing formation of clots.

Maryland Coeds Get 163 Pledges As 'Rush' Begins

"Rushees," who had been feted at dinners, teas and dances since November 1 when the "rush" season began, signed bids during the day at the office of the dean of women.

Red 'Flying Tanks' Harassing Germans

Siberian Troops Killed by Hundreds, Berlin Report Says

By the United Press

Berlin (Wednesday), Nov. 19.—German forces along the entire Eastern Front, particularly in the Donets Basin north of Rostov, were reported again "in movement" today as a result of improved weather.

Roads and Russian terrain generally, for several wekes a sea of mud and swamps, now are frozen sufficiently to permit normal movement of troops and equipment, especially mechanized divisions, Nazi sources said.

Nazi front dispatches last night described a 17-hour battle on the Moscow front that left the field strewn with the bodies of 500 Siberian troops allegedly poured directly into the lines from trains which brought them from the Far East.

The fighting raged without pause from 5 a. m. until 10 p. m. Saturday, the D. N. B. news agency reported, ending with the Red army defenders of the unidentified sector driven from the field and the travel-weary reinforcements slaughtered wholesale. German losses were not mentioned.

Earlier dispatches acknowledged strong Russian counterattacks on the Moscow and Leningrad fronts, supported by a fleet of new-type "flying tanks" which swoop low to strafe the German lines and shed bullets like a duck sheds raindrops.

Tough Armor Sheathing

German air fighters said they were able to pump "enormous quantities" of bullets into the new type flying juggernauts without downing them or setting them afire, so tough is the armor sheathing virtually every inch of their vitals.

Soviet ground tanks also were reported assailing the German positions in the van of stubborn sallies near Leningrad. Eleven enemy tanks were wrecked in a single attack, D. N. B. claimed.

A military spokesman said Germany had hurled the full might of her Crimean forces against Sevastopol, seeking to clear out the "last Soviet position in Crimea," presumably as a prelude to an Axis drive into the Caucasus from captured Kerch.

D. N. B. said defenders of Moscow loosed several counterattacks against German infantry lines Monday, but were beaten back with heavy Soviet casualties.

"Tank Planes" Described

The high command put the bulk of its emphasis on German aerial bombardment from Kandalaksha on the White Sea to Sevastopol in Crimea.

A German soldier-reporter sent from the Eastern Front an account of the "flying tanks."

Described as the Soviet Union's newest type machines, they were said to be "unusually strongly armored. Gasoline tanks, radiator, the pilot's seat, in fact everything in this plane is armored," he wrote. "We therefore call them 'flying tanks,' or for short 'tank planes.'"

While acknowledging their near invulnerability against defense fire, the dispatch claimed that in one attack four of the heavily armored planes finally were shot down.

Military spokesmen said several formations of bombers raided Leningrad Monday night. Visibility was good and a number of airfield hangars and factories were set on fire, they said.

Also raided, the high command said, were Moscow and Soviet air fields in the Vologda district.

Bomber Sets Record, Carries 140,000 Lbs.

Santa Monica, Calif., Nov. 18 (INS).—A new world record for air cargo has been established by the B.-19, Douglas Aircraft Co. announced today.

The world's biggest airplane carried a gross weight of 140,000 pounds in a flight from March Field. Of this, 26,000 pounds, or 13 tons, was made up of bombs. The remainder was fuel, military equipment and crew members. Douglas officials pointed out the standard Douglas airline transport plane, carrying 21 passengers, has a maximum gross weight of 25,200 pounds.

Peer Charges Secret Police Hound Duke

By the Associated Press

London, Nov. 18.—An accusation that Home Security Minister Herbert S. Morrison was creating a "Gestapo" in Britain like the Nazi secret police was made in the House of Lords today by Lord Ponsonby.

In a long address Lord Ponsonby defended the Duke of Bedford, who has been under surveillance of the home security ministry because of pacifist utterances and alleged dealings with the Germans.

Lord Ponsonby, who has been elected to Parliament on both the Liberal and Laborite tickets, said of the duke:

"I know him to be a high-minded, disinterested and absolutely sincere man, jealous of the good name of his country and intent upon her future welfare."

The Duke of Bedford, then Lord Travistock, made a trip to Eire in March, 1940, and returned with purported German peace proposals, later repudiated by Berlin. Last month a statue of an earlier Duke of Bedford in London's Russel Square was daubed with yellow paint and hung with placards reading, "grandfather of a Quisling."

The duke wrote an article published November 1 saying it was "neither sensible nor right" to fight Hitler without first trying to be friendly with him.

Morrison in answer to a question some time ago said he was keeping an "eye on the Duke of Bedford and others like him."

Ponsonby likened Morrison to Heinrich Himmler, the Gestapo chief, and thereby touched off a long debate on individual rights in wartime. Some peers expressed fears of abuses of defense regulation 18B, empowering the government to deal with persons whose loyalty is questioned.

In the House of Commons today Morrison disclosed that of 1766 persons detained under 18B since the outbreak of the war, 671 still are in custody.

Nazi Air Force Technical Chief, Udet, Slain 'Testing Weapon'

Colonel General Was Goering Comrade And Hero in First War

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Nov. 18.—Col. Gen. Ernst Udet, German air hero of the first great war and charged in this conflict with the task of keeping Adolf Hitler's air force supreme, has been killed while testing a secret weapon, it was announced officially today.

[Columbia Broadcasting System in New York, according to the United Press, heard the Berlin radio broadcast that Udet was "the victim of an airplane accident."]

Udet, 45, and quartermaster general of the air force, died yesterday of injuries before he could be taken to a hospital. Adolf Hitler ordered a state funeral in his honor and the German press spoke proudly of his bravery.

"He never left it to others to test new equipment but always took that job himself," the Boersen Zeitung said.

This was the only explanation as to how a colonel general, next in rank to a marshal, could be killed during a war-time test. Inquirers were told the "new weapon" was a military secret, hence no details of the accident would be furnished.

Heavy Blow to Nazi

Udet's death was a heavy blow to Nazi air leaders who credited him with many technical improvements, among them the first floating rescue buoys floated in the English Channel so downed fliers could rescue themselves from the water.

As chief engineer and head of supply his job was to spur designers and craftsmen to peak performance.

Field Marshal Gen. Hermann Goering, a comrade of the "glue and wire" World War combat days, when Udet shot down 62 enemy planes, had promoted Udet rapidly in his Reich air ministry.

Udet filled in the peace years with stunt flying. On a trip to the United States in 1931 he dived his plane under New York's Hell Gate Railway Bridge across the East River in a type of plane he never had flown before.

Raced at Cleveland

He also participated in the National Air Races at Cleveland and while there he met Walter B. Wanamaker, of Akron, Ohio, whom he had shot down in 1918, then landing to extricate the American from the wreckage.

(Wanamaker, a former Common Pleas judge, now is with the National Labor Relations Board.)

The man who wore Germany's two highest orders, "Pour le Merite," and the Knight's Cross of the Iron Cross, was born June 11, 1896, in Frankfort-on-Main of Huguenot stock.

As a boy of 13 he began tinkering with gliders, and his daring World War exploits earned him rapid promotion.

Before turning to stunt flying throughout Europe and America Udet had founded his own airplane factory at Munich, but apparently it was a financial failure.

He made a series of flights over the Alps and into the Arctic to assist Leni Riefenstahl, well-known German motion picture photographer, in filming those areas. Once he was given up as lost after a four-day disappearance.

French aviators honored him in 1928 at the Aero Club in Paris by receiving him as their first German flier guest following the World War.

Three Officers Die in Plunge Of Test Plane

By the Associated Press

Springfield, Ohio, Nov. 18.—Three officers of an Army bombardment squadron perished today in the crash of a B-26 medium bombing plane at North Hampton, 13 miles northwest of her.

The officers, attached to the Seventy-first Bombardment Squadron at Jackson, Miss., were:

Staff Sergt. E. E. Johnson, of Jackson, Miss.

Second Lieut. J. Gerald Lynch, West Haven, Conn.

First Lieut. T. P. Bacon, Radford, Va.

The men were testing war planes for the Army Air Corps at Patterson Field, Dayton, and had left the port shortly before their ship spiraled from great height nto a cornfield.

E. C. Davis, tenant on the farm which the ship struck, said he saw two men attempting to bail out as the plane roared to earth. The ship struck on its nose and debris was hurled several hundred feet.

John Coleman, a farmer who saw the crash, said the ship exploded with a terrific impact and ripped up earth for a radius of 25 or 30 feet.

One Killed, One Hurt In Army Glider Crash

Sweet, of the Ordnance Department. Sweet, who was in the glider as an observer, suffered a slight brain concussion.

Army's Venereal Disease Feud With Parran Due for an Airing

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

Smouldering for weeks, a feud between Surgeon General Thomas Parran, of the United States Public Health Service, and the War Department is emerging into the open with the appearance of "Plain Words About Venereal Disease."

Both sides held their fire yesterday, each apparently awaiting public reaction to the book criticising the Army's syphilis-gonorrhea control, written by Dr. Parran and his assistant, Dr. R. A. Vonderlehr.

The volume, lambasting allegedly dilatory tactics by the War Department and citing startling increases in disease rates among selectees, will be published Friday. Advance copies have appeared in Washington, however, but medical officers who were solicited for comment said they had not yet seen them.

Meantime, The Post learned that locations have been selected, after months of delay, for two prophylaxis service centers which will serve soldiers in Washington. They are now being equipped and will be ready for operation in a week or two.

The station for white soldiers will be on the second floor of a building at Ninth and E Streets Northwest. For colored, a place in the 400 block of N Street Northwest has been selected.

Both places are rented quarters. For months the Army tried to get space in abandoned school buildings, then in the District's Southwest health center, but efforts failed.

One of Dr. Parran's complaints against the Army is its failure to provide these early treatment stations in the National Capital to which a service man, suspecting exposure to venereal infection, might come for a belated ounce of prevention.

Medical corps officials pointed out yesterday, however, that the civilian surgeon general did not state the whole truth. While it is true that no prophylactic stations, as such, have been opened here, the preventive treatment has been available at the military hospitals, they asserted, admitting, however, that these institutions are not ideally located for this purpose.

Furthermore, they went on, the Army has been handicapped no little by protests of citizens who "want no such places in our neighborhood."

"Plain Words" says, in substance, that syphilis and gonorrhea are rampant in the Army; that the gonorrhea rate has jumped from 27 to 40 cases per 1000 since the start of selective service, despite the fact that all new men were free of infection; that the "exquisite discrimination" exercised by examining doctors seems to be "love's labor lost."

Last Friday the War Department issued a press release painting a rather bright picture of the venereal disease situation. It said the syphilis rate, as of August, was 5.5 per 1000 men, compared with 17.56 in 1918 and 6.59 in 1939. The venereal disease rate generally is 40 per 1000 today, compared with 107 in 1917 and 90 in 1918.

The Army cited its "unremitting campaign" against the twin scourges of syphilis and gonorrhea and described the cooperation in progress between military and civilian authorities.

A public relations officer denied yesterday that issuance of the Army Surgeon General's encouraging report was an advance rebuttal in anticipation of the "Plain Words" book, which depicts a far less rosy situation in the armed forces.

Taking an aggressive tone—but still on an unofficial, "don't quote me" basis—the officer deprecated the Parran-Vonderlehr charge that the Army is grievously at fault for not having invoked the May Act. Enacted last July, this Federal law gives camp commanders authority to define boundaries within which prostitution will not be tolerated.

The public relations officer pointed out, with feeling, that the only reason why the new law has not been invoked to curb prostitution in the general vicinity of troop concentrations is because the Federal Security Agency has asked the Army to desist for a while anyway.

Dr. Parran's Public Health Service, the officer explained with a chuckle, is a unit of Federal Security Agency.

Parran's book, however, points out that nothing comparable with the famous General Order 77, which sharply reduced infection in the A. E. F. by cracking down on prostitutes, making prophylaxis compulsory and stressing importance of disease reports, has yet been issued.

"Not one commanding officer in the nine crop areas has demonstrated a comparable interest in the problem of venereal disease," according to "Plain Words." "On the contrary, several of the line officers have demonstrated their firm belief in the regulation of prostitution as a method of controlling disease and have been less receptive than Clemenceau in 1918 to scientific evidence proving that method as outmoded as the 1918 model airplane."

First Army Seizes Plans, Drives Ahead

By Marshall Andrews
A Staff Correspondent

With First Army in the Field, Nov. 18.—By one of those freaks of chance possible in maneuvers and pokes, the First Field Army yanked itself across the Pee Dee River by its bootstrap and tonight was deep in Blue territory.

Last night the Sixth Corps captured a vehicle of the First Armored Division with a copy of today's operations orders of Maj. Gen. O. W. Griswold and complete map data. This information showed Gen. Griswold's intention to withdraw during the night to the Monroe-Pageland Ridge, concentrating the First Armored Division near Marshville, N. C., and the Second near Pageland, S. C.

With his order in his possession, Lieut. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, commanding First Army, knew exactly what his enemy intended doing all day today. From then on First Army moved rapidly, directly and all together.

Units still east of the Pee Dee were rushed across in the darkness to follow close upon the retreating Red Fourth Corps. The Twenty-Ninth Division, in Army reserve, piled into its trucks and all the trucks it could borrow and moved 80 miles to a position from which it can cooperate tomorrow with other forces in an attack designed to swallow a flank of the Reds and envelop them from the rear.

Spectacular Recovery

In its spectacular recovery from the lassitude in which it ended yesterday's fight, First Army was assisted no little by its enemy. For some reason, Fourth Corps' tremendous and overwhelming weight in tanks and wheeled infantry has not yet been employed. There has been no all-out tank attack; when First Army lay pinned against the Pee Dee for 24 hours there was no concerted effort to drive the steel clad divisions up or down along the river and peel the Blue invaders away from their bridgeheads.

Early today one brigade of the Second Armored Division, supported by the four regimental combat teams of the Thirty-first Division, thrust its steel spearhead into the town of Cheraw, S. C. For two hours hot fighting raged in the town, with tanks clanking through its streets and 75-millimeter guns banging away at every corner.

Instead of the entire brigade of more than 200 tanks, only about 30 actually got into Cheraw, the balance lying scattered in surrounding woodlands. Instead of four Infantry combat teams, one made its way into the city and pressed behind the tanks to the Pee Dee Bridge on its eastern fringe.

Span Blown Out

Some of the Infantry managed to get on the bridge and blow out a span before the entire force was thrown out by superior Blue fire power. Just what the attack was intended to accomplish was not entirely clear tonight.

If it was to have demolished the Pee Dee Bridge, the entire tank brigade with the full force of the Infantry division would have been required to do an effective job. Only the most thorough job of demolition could have made the bridge, with its many spans, unfit for use more than a few hours.

No purpose could have been served in moving Red forces east of the Pee Dee, where they would run the risk of being bottled up behind the river and squeezed between two fragments of the Blue Army. Possession of the town of Cheraw could have been of little value without possession of Society Hill to the southward, which had fallen to the Blues without opposition in the first few hours of Sunday.

In all cases so far, Red tank attacks have been weak, scattered and piecemeal.

Even Red air attacks have softened, repeated raids on the important Pee Dee Bridge east of Albemarle being driven off with no damage to the bridge by a concentration of antiaircraft machine guns atop the steel work of the bridge, machine guns borrowed from heavy gun regiments on the ground and Blue pursuit planes circling constantly overhead.

Tonight the Red Army was dug in along the Pageland Ridge, its last defensive line east of the Catawba River, for which First Army is driving. Blue had pressed forward to this line and southward beyond Rocky River and had its field artillery 20 miles deep in Red territory firing on strategic Red crossroads.

Ex-Nazi Attache Urges Stronger U. S. Mobilization

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 18 (AP).—Warning that a Hitlerian victory is a grim possibility, Prof. Ernest W. Meyer, member of the faculty of Bucknell University, Lewisburg, Pa., in an address to local Rotarians today, urged greater realization of its direful consequences and the mobilization of all possible military, economic, educational, political and spiritual forces on the part of Americans to defeat it.

Prof. Meyer spoke as a German who has renounced national socialism. He came to this country in 1934 as first secretary of the German Embassy in Washington, which he said he resigned because he could not agree with the domestic or foreign policies of the Third Reich.

There are various means to defeat Hitler, the speaker declared, but military and economic measures are not sufficient. There must be individualist as well as national effort, he asserted, and it should be directed to a short war, for if it is prolonged and Europe is laid in ruins, there will be little chance for a constructive peace.

U. S. Radio Analyst in Red Influx, Dies Charges

Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas, yesterday singled out Goodwin Watson, recently appointed chief broadcast analyst of the Federal Communications Commission, as one in "a new influx of Communists and fellow travelers into official Washington."

In a letter to FCC Chairman James L. Fly, which the chairman of the special committee investigating un-American activities made available to the press yesterday, he wrote:

"Goodwin Watson has been a propagandist for communism and the Soviet Union for many years. His activity in this respect has been open and above board. Mr. Watson is to be commended for not attempting to conceal his Communist sympathies. And I wish it clearly understood that I do not challenge his right to hold whatever sympathies he may choose to hold.

In Important Position

"My only concern is over the fact that one of such outspoken Communist views and sympathies should be named to the position of chief broadcast analyst with such important decisions entrusted to him."

Representative Dies said he understood that Watson, who receives a $5600 annual salary, "is chief analyst of radio broadcasts emanating from foreign countries, to determine the probable trends of the war, the internal morale and conditions of foreign nations . . . and further directs the work of five supervising analysts."

He stated he was greatly concerned over "a new influx" of Communists and "fellow travelers" into "official Washington," and had expressed his concern to the President recently.

Eulogized Soviets

Charging that Watson wrote "frequent eulogies on the Soviet way of life" which were frequently coupled with "emphatic disparagement of the American way of life," he offered "a list of the party's organizations with which Mr. Watson has publicly associated himself." The organizations included:

American Committee for Democracy and Intellectual Freedom, American Congress for Peace and Democracy, American League for Peace and Democracy, American Student Union, Conference on Pan American Democracy, Consumers Union, Coordinating Committee to Lift the Embargo, International Workers Order, League of American Writers, National Emergency Conference for Democratic Rights, North American Committee to Aid Spanish Democracy, Open Letter in Defense of the Communist Party, Social Work Today.

Stating that the committee is not concerned solely with "the case of Watson as an individual," Representative Dies wrote:

"We are, I believe, compelled to search for the hidden influences which bring about the appointment and certification of such persons as Watson. The problem of ridding official Washington of the hundreds of Communists and fellow travelers who now occupy Government posts will not be solved until we get at the root of the matter, namely this prevailing influence which continues to bring such men as Watson to important Government posts in the Nation's Capital.

"When that sinister influence has been identified and exposed, then we may hope that some Americans of undoubted loyalty will be called to these newly created posts of such strategic importance in the defense of America."

Efforts to locate Watson for a statement were futile.

Mrs. Torrance Autopsy Shows Skull Fracture

By the Associated Press

Monterrey, Mexico, Nov. 18.—A 2-inch depressed fracture behind the left ear was found today by four physicians performing an autopsy on the body of Mrs. Arthur Torrance.

They sought to determine the manner in which the wealthy Michigan woman came to her death on the highway north of here ten days ago.

Her husband, self-identified New York author and explorer, had theorized in a statement to investigators that his wife died as the result of a blow on the head suffered when their honeymoon car swerved to avoid striking an animal. Torrance said she apparently had struck the rear-view mirror of the vehicle.

Gilberto Zardaneta, municipal criminologist, said there were small fractures inside the skull, and that the nose was broken. There were bruises on the left hand and right forearm.

Torrance is accused of beating his 67-year-old bride to death with a vacuum bottle.

A visceral examination will be made in the federal bureau of investigation laboratory at Washington, D. C. Authorities planned to ship the viscera by airmail today.

At the last moment, authorities waived a legal requirement that Torrance, identified as the English-born author and explorer, witness the exhumation of the body.

Investigators said it would be several days before the findings of the autopsy could be announced. Particularly the visceral examination would require considerable time.

Shortage Forces Ship-Arming Priorities

By the Associated Press

The Navy set up a priorities system yesterday for arming merchant ships and provided that vessels which will carry munitions to Britain and Russia through the North Atlantic would be the first to receive guns and gun crews.

The work will be done in navy yards along the Atlantic Coast, it was learned, and the facilities of private shipyards may be used if needed.

Establishment of a priorities system was necessary because the Navy does not have enough guns now for all vessels. Secretary Knox has said that guns would become available, however, as rapidly as ships could be brought into port for arming.

Under the plan announced yesterday—a day after President Roosevelt signed the bill removing the Neutrality Act prohibition against arming merchant ships—first priority was assigned to "ships plying to and from the British Isles and northern Europe."

Second priority went to "ships plying to and from the Red Sea," and third to "ships plying to and from the South Atlantic."

The reference to northern Europe apparently referred only to Russia's northern ports, particularly Archangel which has been designated as the main port of entry for munitions shipments to the U. S. S. R.

Assignment of second priority to ships sailing into the Red Sea emphasized the importance of that route of delivering war supplies to Britain's armies in Africa and the Near East. Red ports have been bombed by Axis planes and an American ship, the 5714-ton Steel Seafarer, was sunk in that area September 5.

The third category of ships plying to and from the South Atlantic apparently covered both vessels making South American ports and those destined to such British West African ports as Freetown and Bathhurst.

In effect the three categories covered the three principal routes of munitions deliveries. No provision was made in the priorities classification for ships carrying supplies to Russia across the Pacific, presumably because that ocean is considered relatively safe from Axis raiders.

Rector of Fifth Avenue Church Called 'Lover' of Rich Widow

By the Associated Press

White Plains, N. Y., Nov. 18.—Joseph Nickerson, counsel for an objector to the will of the late Mrs. Anna Hollingsworth Siter Paton, declared in surrogate's court today that "it is known" that the Rev. Dr. Henry Darlington, of New York City, a beneficiary, "was the lover" of Mrs. Paton.

Dr. Darlington is rector of the fashionable Church of Heavenly Rest on Fifth Avenue.

Surrogate Charles D. Millard granted a request for a closed hearing on probate of the will after Raymond A. Carter, counsel for the executors, said his firm "had been served late yesterday with papers disparaging to the memory of the decedent."

Charles H. Fay, lawyer for Dr. Darlington, told newsmen that Nickerson's charges were "all bosh," and said he was confident he would be able to disprove them if the contest went to trial.

"Dr. Darlington," he said "is 51. Mrs. Paton was 77. Dr. Darlington is happily married; his mother lived until her death in Mrs. Paton's apartment."

Mrs. Paton's will left her Irvington mansion Nirvana and the income from three-tenths of the residuary estate of Dr. Darlington with contingent interests to two of the rector's children. Mrs. Paton's estate has an estimated value of one million dollars.

"It is known that Darlington was a lover of this woman but they want to limit the examination to a couple of years," said Nickerson. "They know that Darlington met her in 1926 when he preached her husband's funeral service."

Nickerson said that he had "photostatic copies of love letters written by Darlington."

In a statement tonight, Dr. Darlington said he hoped the public would withhold judgment until litigation over the will had been settled. He added:

"I will only say now that the charges that have been made involving the good name of either Mrs. Paton or myself in the effort to unsettle her will are utterly false."

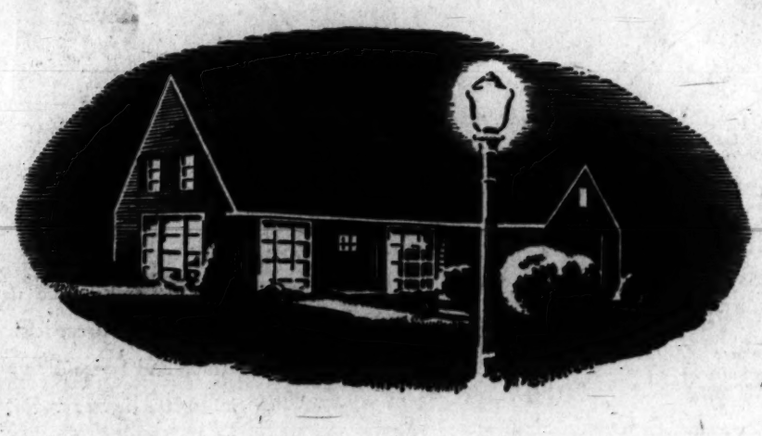
LET'S GIVE THANKS



FOR the quiet, ordinary things in our lives, first.

Thanks that children in the parks, on the doorsteps, in the schools, and mothers, too, can hear the peaceful throb of planes overhead and look up without terror — or not look up at all . . .

Thanks for the trees along our residential avenues, and the houses— all whole, well-roofed, sound . . .

Thanks for the millions of automobiles that take millions of Americans for their day on the open road . . .

Thanks — at night — that our street lamps are still lit and windows may still shine out with uncurtained light . . .

Thanks that the humblest of us may pass the plate and say, "Please, may I have more?"— and get it . . .

Thanks for warm houses and thanks we need give up no blankets, no overcoats . . .

Thanks for play and laughter and work to do . . .

Thanks that when the leader of this nation issues a decree — it is an innocent proclamation to celebrate Thanksgiving . . .

Army SaysFish Free to Appear Before Jurors

(Representative Flanagan's views on the Fish affair are reported in an article on Page 14).

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Although the Army made it plain last night that it will give Representative Hamilton Fish "no sanctuary from subpena," he is going to be given a chance to testify voluntarily before the special grand jury on German agents.

Fish left last Thursday night for a fortnight of active service. War Department officials last night said if the grand jurors wanted Fish back they could have him.

When informed of this, Assistant Attorney General Wendell Berge, chief of the criminal division, said:

"The Department of Justice is disposed—and always was disposed—to respect the desire of the House that its members be free to attend actual sessions of the House without being interrupted to give testimony or appear elsewhere during the hours of the session.

"With reference to Representative Fish, during the time he was under the direction of the House not to obey the subpena of the special grand jury, we were informed that he had left Washington to serve 10 days or two weeks with the First Army.

"The press has quoted him as saying that if the House authorized him to testify he would get in touch with the special grand jury upon his return.

"We see no urgent necessity to call Representative Fish away from his temporary Army duties. Upon his return we shall accord him another opportunity to appear voluntarily before the special grand jury. If he does not come, then, of course, we shall subpena him."

Meanwhile lawyers for George Hill, 45, one of Fish's secretaries, yesterday urged Justice James M. Morris of the District Court, to dismiss the perjury indictment against Hill and to permit them to read all the testimony Hill gave before the special grand jury.

Special Prosecutors William Power Maloney and Edward J. Hickey, jr., opposed both applications.

In another action Justice Morris refused to change the trial of Geosge Sylvester Viereck, indicted German agent, from January 12, before Justice F. Dickinson Letts. Viereck's lawyer, Daniel F. Cohalen, jr., New York, sought to have Viereck tried before Justice T. Alan Goldsborough.

Court to Decide When to Bury Legion's Ex-Head

New York, Nov. 18 (AP).—The State Supreme Court has been asked to help settle a difference between the widow of Edward Elwell Spafford, former national commander of the American Legion, and a daughter by a former marriage as to where he should be buried.

The widow, Mrs. Lillyan Mercier Spafford, who successfully opposed Spafford's divorce suit last spring, insists he be interred in Arlington National Cemetery because of his wartime rank as a commander in the Navy.

The daughter, Mrs. Lucille Pfeffer, says it was her father's wish that he be buried in the family mausoleum in Woodawn Cemetery here.

Pending a court decision or mutual agreement, Mrs. Spafford and Mrs. Pfeffer decided to place the remains in a receiving vault at Woodlawn. Spafford died in the Naval Hospital at Annapolis Thursday.

Held as Housebreaker

Ival J. Fisher, 26, of 4637 North Seventeenth Street, Arlington, Va., was held for action of the grand jury yesterday in Arlington County Court on charges of housebreaking. Fisher waived preliminary hearing when arraigned before Judge B. M. Hendrick. Fisher was arrested last Friday in Baltimore.

Report ListsAid To Needy Here With Paralysis

The D. C. branch of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis expended almost $18,000 for the relief of needy victims of that disease here during the last year, it was revealed yesterday by Juvenile Court Judge Fay Bentley, chairman of the local chapter.

Judge Bentley made public excerpts from the organization's expenditure record, following a full financial report by Assistant Treasurer I. J. Roberts.

An expense increase of almost 60 per cent was illustrated by figures showing a $3000 additional outlay for special nurses and an added $1000 for hospitalization. The hospitalization total for last year was more than $5000, Judge Bentley said.

The foundation also sent about 29 small paralysis convalescents away to camp for the first time last year, involving an outlay of about $1600, she added.

The youngsters were sent to Camp Greentop, operated by the Maryland League for Crippled Children at Thurmont, Md.

Money for the work is raised by the annual President's Birthday Balls, held throughout the country, and appropriations are arranged so that a reserve fund is always on hand for active years such as this just passed, she explained.

Other expense items included school transportation, the purchase of equipment including an iron lung, braces and special shoes for sufferers and convalescent home care.

Veteran Officer of 3 Nations Held as Alien Law Violator

Carl Lang, who once wore an officer's uniform with the German, Austrian and White Russian armies and served in the Austrian diplomatic service, was indicted by the District grand jury yesterday for violation of the Alien Registration Act.

Lang, who registered under the act in October of last year, is charged with failure to notify officials of several changes in address, including a move from New York to Washington.

He is said to have lived at two addresses here, 1839 Mintwood Place and 1436 Meridian Place.

Lang entered the United States illegally in 1924, according to the Department of Justice, when he deserted a Holland-American liner upon which he was employed as seaman. He was arrested in 1937 for illegal entry, but has not been deported because of "existing conditions" in Europe.

A complicating factor was introduced into the case by the fact that Lang has been in jail since October 27, and will probably have been there about six weeks before the case comes to trial. The maximum penalty which can be given him, if convicted, is 30 days.

The charges against those indicted were:

Carnal Knowledge—Louis Lee Cabell, 27, Negro; Lloyd Smith, 27, Negro. Assault with dangerous weapon—Clyde V. Crutchfield, 44; Walter E. Harris, 29, Negro; Wade Harris, 28, Negro; Thomas Dunkins, 41, Negro; Emma J. Melvin, 24, Negro. Violation of Alien Registration Act—Carl Lang. Forgery and uttering—Harry Kidwell, 38. Setting up a gaming table—Odessa Madiro, 34, Negro. Violation of D. C. lottery law—Juanita Taylor, 36, Negro; William H. Coates, 35, Negro; John Batiista, jr., 23; Joseph C. Morris, 41, Negro; Waverly Thomas, 64; Mike Sosso. Grand larceny—Edward L. Boley, 23; Claude White, 41, Negro; Robert H. Miller, 36.

Robbery—Howard T. Sims, 46, Negro; Willie Lee Fuller, 23, Negro; Albert J. Willett, 21; Edward R. Buckler, 18, and George C. Reidy, 21, six counts; George Baxter, 17, Negro, and Willie Ritter, 23, Negro. Housebreaking—Waverly Richardson, 20, Negro. Housebreaking and larceny—Waverly Richardson, 20, Negro; Richard B. Williams, 18, Negro, 2 counts; George Thomas, 19, Negro, 9 counts; Clarion Pina, 20, Negro, 6 counts; Raleigh Jacobs, 26; Henry Lee Artis, 34, Negro.

The grand jurors dismissed the following charges:

Forgery and uttering—Rodney B. Ridgeway, two counts, and William Thomas, 42. Carnal knowledge—Norman Fields, 24, Negro.

Stalin Invokes Deity in Toast

Leader of 'Godless' Soviet Asks Divine Aid for Roosevelt at Kremlin Celebration

By Wallace Carroll

Copyright, 1941, by The United Press

Manila, Philippine Islands (Uncensored), Nov. 18.—The night Joseph Stalin invoked God's blessing on President Roosevelt was a night such as the Kremlin never had seen before and may never see again.

A hundred American and British delegates had gathered at the old fortress with their Soviet colleagues to celebrate the successful conclusion of a conference at which they had worked out a long-term program for the delivery of war supplies to the Soviets.

They had heard of Stalin as a man of steel, the ogre of the Kremlin, a ruthless dictator. For 7½ hours they saw another side of Stalin—Stalin the human being, or, as one American put it, "a nice old gentleman with a very kind face."

The crimson-gold banqueting hall was filled with generals, admirals and lesser officers in uniforms weighed down with medals and medal ribbons.

Then in walked Stalin in that semimilitary costume he has worn ever since he was a political commissar in the revolutionary army 23 years ago—grey tunic and grey trousers tucked into the kind of boots a Red army private wears.

He didn't seem very much interested in the generals and admirals. He just strolled around until he saw a face which interested him, then stopped and talked.

In this way he came on Lieut. Clinton L. Olson, 25-year-old United States Army officer of Stanford University, Calif., who still is with the supply mission in Kuibyshev.

Stalin looked at a star on the sleeve of Olson's uniform, a twinkle came into his eye and he remarked:

"You look very young to be a marshal. In the Red army, you know, a star like that stands for a marshal."

Olson replied that the star was a regimental insignia.

Toasts Are Drunk

Stalin took his place at the head of the table and the banquet and toasts began. There were 31 toasts.

Somebody gave a toast to Maj. Al Harvey and Lieut. Lou Reichers, United States Army fliers who piloted two four-engined B24 bombers which carried United States delegates from Washington to Scotland and from Scotland to Moscow. Stalin asked the pilots to stand up, then left his seat, walked to where they were standing and shook hands.

But the big moment of the evening came when Stalin arose, lifted his glass to President Roosevelt.

"May God help him in his task," he said in Russian.

Constantine Oumansky, former Russian Ambassador to the United States, translated the toast into English. Some of the Anglo-Americans looked surprised and asked their Russian neighbors whether Oumansky's translation was correct. The Russians agreed it was.

Why did Stalin invoke the name of God? The Soviet leader was educated in the Orthodox priesthood and frequently lapses into biblical or religious phraseology—even more frequently than Lenin, who also knew the Bible. But the delegates agreed that a foxy statesman like Stalin had not made a mere slip of the tongue.

Religious organizations and isolationists in the United States have been opposing aid to Russia because of the Soviets' attitude toward religion. Mr. Roosevelt has been under fire at home because he stated that the Soviet constitution guaranteed freedom of religion.

Stalin's toast, therefore, was aimed at the United States, but not at the American public. Soviet officials made no attempt to inform American correspondents—in fact, at the time they were inclined to discourage correspondents from writing about the religious question.

Aimed at President

It seems that Stalin was aiming directly at Roosevelt. He knew the American delegates would tell the President about the toast and he knew Mr. Roosevelt attended church and often made religious allusions in his own speeches. He also knew the President has been criticized for defending the Soviets against attacks by religious organizations.

Therefore it seems Stalin just wanted his friend in Washington to know what he had said. At least that's the explanation some delegates hit upon.

Stalin's hair is gray—some delegates said it is beginning to turn white. They were surprised to see he is only 5 feet 6 or 7 inches tall.

Despite his 63 years, Stalin seems as strong as ever and puts in a long working day.

Stalin has a retentive memory and appears able to meet these technicians on their own grounds. Harry Hopkins, Lord Beaverbrook and W. Averill Harriman discovered he can discuss technical details on the latest guns, tanks and planes.

He is an inveterate pipe smoker and allows himself the luxury of American tobacco, which sells for 15 cents a tin.

But to get back to the party. Uncle Joe, as foreigners in Moscow usually call Stalin, led guests out of the banqueting hall. At the corridor he paused, turned around and said just like anybody's Uncle Joe might say:

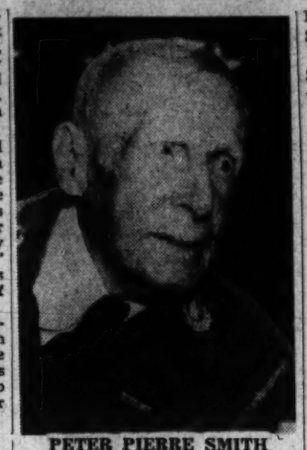
The plumbing was English. So were Stalin's parting words at 1:30 a. m.—"Good night."

Odlum, OPM Official, Leaves Hospital

Rochester, Minn., Nov. 18 (AP).—Floyd B. Mrs. Odlum left here yesterday for Los Angeles.

Gray Veteran, Who Lived to Laud Union, Dies



PETER PIERRE SMITH

The ranks of the District Confederate soldiers dwindled to one last night when Peter Pierre Smith, 97, last surviving member of Company B, Second Maryland Battalion, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Maude S. Fenton, 4830 Sixteenth Street Northwest.

Active to the end, the colorful veteran had planned to appear on an Armistice Day broadcast here but he had to give it up at the last minute. Instead, there was read his feeling toward the War Between the States, expressed by Mr. Smith in "Brother Warriors," a collection of Blue and Gray tales by Miss Martha Norris McLeod, of Washington.

"As the last survivor of my company and regiment," Mr. Smith wrote, "I want to say we were opposed to fighting against the Stars and Stripes, but we were forced to fight for the protection of our civil rights.

"Better That We Are United"

"We stood the greatest test of courage to uphold the cause we believed in. We endured the direness of a 'Lost Cause' and its attending afflictions, with faith, mercy and patience.

"We have lived to see the evolution of events prove that it is far better that we are united today rather than a Nation divided against itself, and fighting as Europe is.

"I love my native country and its people, and I was happy to be privileged to attend a joint reunion (at Gettysburg in 1938) with my brother soldiers, a wonderful symbol of the love and peace that we feel today as United States."

Mr. Smith would have reached his ninety-eighth year next April. He enlisted with Maryland's troops as a youth of 18, fought at Cold Harbor, at Petersburg, through the Shenandoah and at Gettysburg.

Off on a furlough to his home in St. Marys City, Md., Mr. Smith was captured by Union troops and would have been executed as a spy but for his furlough slip having been signed by Gen. Robert E. Lee. At that he spent 80 days in close confinement at Point Lookout prison, his release coming at the end of the war.

He was taken to New York for the premiere of "Gone With the Wind," and he liked it. And although he fought through the war as a private, he was proud of the snug-fitting gray uniform given to him two years ago when the Confederate Memorial Association raised him to an honorary major. He was the lone veteran to attend Confederate memorial services at Arlington Cemetery last June.

Two sons, Robert B. Smith and Peter Pierre Smith, jr., also survive, as well as numerous grandchildren, including William R. Fenton, 23, a selectee at Fort Bliss, Tex.

The funeral will be held from Gasch's funeral home, 46 Maryland Avenue, Hyattsville, at 9:30 a. m. Friday, with interment to follow in the cemetery of Trinity Episcopal Church, St. Marys City.

Lone surviving Confederate veteran in Washington is 98-year-old Cornelius B. Hite, 2915 Connecticut Avenue Northwest.

Germans Warn U-Boats Lurk on Route to Russia

Berlin (Wednesday), Nov. 19.—German submarines are operating in the White Sea, German commentators declared today, emphasizing assertions that this is on the route of any United States merchantman bound for Archangel, Russia.

The well-connected Dienst Aus Deutschland commentary in this connection described as significant the German High Command communique of yesterday which reported four "armed enemy merchantmen aggregating 21,000 tons and one protecting vessel" had been sunk by U-boats in the North Atlantic and Arctic Oceans.

The White Sea is an arm of the Arctic, and is largely frozen over in winter. The Dienst said winter had not hindered German submarines there, however.

A German military spokesman said that in any event if cargo ships had to follow ice-breakers through narrow channels of limited maneuverability they would be easy targets for German bombing planes.

The Dienst said British ships were the victims of the latest submarine sinkings, which it placed in the White Sea.

Dancer Tells How She Pirouetted Into Ballet

It is indeed lucky for Milada Mladova that she had a mother who believed in that mossy American dictum, "When you want anything, step up and ask for it."

Otherwise Milada, who is half-Czech, half-American and a member of a Russian ballet company, might conceivably be dancing again for the Rotary Club in Oklahoma City instead of dancing here tonight and tomorrow night with the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo, accompanied by the National Symphony Orchestra.

Milada, a Hedy Lamarrish-looking girl, sat on an early-English couch at the Raleigh Hotel yesterday and told about it. She uses laughter for punctuation—a long laugh for a period, a medium one for a semicolon, a short one for a comma.

It was several years ago that the Ballet Russe stopped in Oklahoma City, where lived Milada Mraz, 14 years old, with ten years' dancing experience, shy, ambitious.

To Milada the Ballet Russe was one of those far-away things surrounded by all kinds of halos. But she knew the Oklahoma impresario and arranged for herself and mother to watch the ballet practice.

As the practice neared its end, Mrs. Mraz suggested they ask Leonide Massine, artistic director for the ballet, for advice on where Milada should continue her ballet study. To Milada this was like barging in at Buckingham Palace without ringing the doorbell, but as Massine, tremendously in a hurry, started to stride from the room, Mrs. Mraz stopped him and shot her question.

"I don't know," the great man said, "how can I know? I have not seen her perform."

Mrs. Mraz said that could be arranged, and before the ballet left Oklahoma City Milada had a contract with it—first she was to study in Paris, then join the ballet.

That's how an Oklahoma girl, who will be in the performances starting at 8:30 p. m. today in Constitution Hall, got her start in ballet. Then she got further along by being so good looking that when the ballet went to Hollywood to make a couple of pictures, the motion picture men, always with an eye for beauty, singled her out for a leading role in the Hollywood version of "Gaite Parisienne," in which she danced opposite Massine himself.

The ballet people gave Milada a new last name—"they told me Mraz means something not very nice in Russian."

The ballet press agent publicizes her as looking like Hedy Lamarr. Milada had never before heard the comparison, she said, when a reporter mentioned it to her.

It was probably only a coincidence that yesterday she was reading a magazine, Charm, which had Miss Lamarr for a cover page.

Thanksgiving Service Planned At Synagogue

Jewsih congregations of Washington will hold a joint Thanksgiving service at 11 a. m. Thursday in Beth-El Synagogue, 702 Jefferson Street Northwest.

Rabbi Aaaron Volkman, of Beth-El, will give the brief thanksgiving address. The program also will include:

Opening convocation by Rabbi J. T. Loeb, of the Combined Hebrew Congregations of Washington; a prayer for the Government by Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, of the Washington Hebrew Congregation; Hebrew version of the prayer chanted by Cantor Adolph Vigoda, of Beth Sholom Synagogue, and a brief Hebrew ritual service conducted by Rabbi Harry Silverstone, of Tifereth Israel Synagogue.

Likewise on the program are hymns, psalms, chants, songs and prayers by other Washington rabbis and cantors.

District Lawyer, Sans Equipment, Remains Missing

The whereabouts of C. B. Seal, "Arkansas traveler" from the District, who dumped his car into a creek near Conway, Ark., on Armistice Day because he was piqued by its failure to operate properly, is still shrouded in mystery, his sister, Mrs. George S. Wilson, of 1560 Hemlock Street Northwest, reported last night.

Mrs. Wilson said she has received no word of her brother since the Associated Press reported the incident last week.

"I assume that he just continued traveling, either in another car or by train," she said. "He had plenty of money with him."

Seal, 28, an attorney with the Department of Justice, resigned his job last month and left the District, stopping by to visit his mother in Indianapolis and then continuing on a pleasure trip "through the South," Mrs. Wilson said. In the car at the time it was dumped into the creek were extra suits, a new typewriter, radio, golf clubs and law books.

Duchess of Windsor Likes 'Tummy Emphasis' in Clothes

Associated Press WIREPHOTOS

By Amy Porter
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Nov. 18.—Now it can be told—that the Duchess of Windsor favors "tummy emphasis" in clothes.

The duchess, who was a little touchy on the subject of clothes while she was in this country, has given permission to Mainbocher, one of her dressmakers, to discuss the things he made for her.

Of the seven Mainbocher costumes she chose for wear during her visit here, three had ruffs or puffs, draperies or trimmings placed in front just below the waitline. That's what Mainbocher calls "tummy emphasis."

You say you don't care?

Not so fast. Inevitably the clothes the duchess wore in Washington, Baltimore and New York, will be reflected in the styles chosen by millions of American women next spring. And are you one to hold out against a trend? Rather, look to your mirror, and if yours is a stomach rather than a tummy, consider streamlining.

The duchess wore her first stomacher costume in Washington—a sapphire blue wool dress and jacket with front fullness gathered into little points below the waistline. The fullness disappeared at the hem, giving a slim line to the skirt.

At the reception given in the Windsors' honor in Baltimore, the duchess appeared in a startler—a one-piece dress of white silk crepe with a puff of twisted black velvet over the stomach. This dress forecast another new trend in fashion—the white dress trimmed in black.

Again in New York, the duchess wore a dress with tummy interest, this time of sapphire blue wool, with back jet embroidery on the front peplum and on the tiny revers.

For an evening in New York, she chose a jet-trimmed black sweater set—slipover and cardigan—worn with a slim black skirt.

Mainbocher wouldn't say what her clothes cost.

Low Bid Is $147,970 On Potomac Span Work

Baltimore, Nov. 18 (AP).—The State roads commission, opening its third set of bids for construction of fenders for main span piers of the Potomac River Bridge today, received a low bid of $147,970 from the Lynn Construction Co., New York City.

The commission earlier rejected two other low bids of $170,000 and $180,281.70, respectively, as too high.

Before advertising for new bids, the commission arranged to furnish necessary steel for the work, which it was estimated should cost approximately $110,000. The bridge spans the Potomac between Ludlow Fery, Md., and a point near Dahlgren, Va.

Jewish Editor Sees America Leading Recovery

New York, Nov. 18 (AP).—Markos Regalsky, editor of El Diario Israelita, a leading Jewish daily publication of Buenos Aires, said today he believed the United States would have the most important voice in the rehabilitation of the world at the war's end.

Regalsky was one of eight delegates to the Inter-American Jewish Congress to be held in Baltimore, November 23-27, who arrived on the Moore-McCormack liner Argentina.

Among them was Natan Gesang, president of the Zionist Federation of Argentina, who said the principal purpose of the congress was to plan relief for Jews in Europe who are under German domination and to lay the groundwork for resumption of Jewish immigration to Palestine after the war.

Action

from a single 40-cent Want Ad in The Post enabled Mrs. Ruth Beeler, formerly of 1530 11th Street N. W., to leave town right on schedule. Her plans were made . . . and there was no time to waste time. The only hitch . . . how to dispose of her furnishings . . . fast!

Mrs. Beeler had lived in Washington a good many years. During those years she'd learned a good many things about The Washington Post . . .

. . . That it reached an increasingly large buying public!

. . . That it was well read and respected by this public!

. . . That it motivated to action the buying mind of this public!

. . . And that a Post Want Ad, therefore, was the best assurance of getting an offer seen and accepted.

At twenty pennies a line she inserted a two-line ad in The Post "Miscellaneous for Sale" column. A few hours after The Post came off the press, her furniture was sold . . . at a satisfying price.

Said Mrs. Beeler: "Forty cents worth? I should say so! I not only sold every last stitch of furniture, three rooms of it . . . but the words 'leaving town' in the ad brought in several inquiries for my apartment."

At any price she couldn't have done better than that!

But by a FREE People's Will to be TAXED . . . for Defense!

For instance, YOU have made Gunther's so popular that the 1941 taxes from this one beer alone can buy NINE Martin Bombers for your defense.

One of the wonderful things about the American way of life . . . is that the things worth fighting for, the things we enjoy most, such as beer, so often carry their own freight by supplying huge sums in taxes for defense.

All of us are contributing, willingly, to the job that lies ahead of us.

Thus our planes, guns, tanks and ships are not built by people conscripted for labor. Not built by an oppressed people forced to stay at their work . . . or be starved.

But they are built by a free and courageous people with unequalled skill and tireless ingenuity for large scale production . . . matched by no other nation on earth!

Without fear, without force, coercion or exploitation of any group of Americans . . . we stand united for the defense of America. For all this, in spite of the tragedy of our times, all of us should give thanks on this Thanksgiving Day.

Flanagan Discusses Fish and Inquiry

Gives List of Questions He Believes House Would Like to Have Answered

The importance of the special grand jury investigation of the activities of German agents was stressed by Representative John W. Flanagan, jr. (Democrat), of Virginia, to the House of Representatives in discussing the subpoena which ordered Representative Hamilton Fish to go before the jury.

The investigation, which is being conducted by Special Prosecutors William Power Maloney and Edward J. Hickey, jr., of the Department of Justice propaganda squad, will be resumed next Monday.

After approving the resolution which withdrew the protection of the House from Fish, leaving him free to obey the summons, Flanagan said in his speech Monday:

"Now let us look at the facts. The Government is trying to ferret out these Nazi gutter rats that are attempting to undermine the faith of our people in their Government by disseminating propaganda that will bring about disunity. In the dissemination of this propaganda it is alleged the Congressional frank is being misused. It is common knowledge that there are many subversive agencies scattered over our land, supplied with foreign funds, spreading this propaganda.

Cites Removal of Mailbags

"A Federal grand jury has been impaneled in the District of Columbia to investigate the whole matter and bring to the bar of justice the guilty. This grand jury investigation has led to the indictment and arrest of a member of the office force of the Representative from New York. The indictment charges perjury, that is, giving false testimony before the grand jury. The investigation discloses that speeches of the gentleman from New York have been mailed out by, at least, one supposedly subversive agency under th gentleman's Congressional frank, and that the indicted member of his office force has received from some unknown source a large sum of money, and when questioned by the grand jury relative to the money he refused to answer, evidently upon the theory that a true answer would incriminate him or bring embarrassment to others.

"When the agent in charge of one of these supposedly subversive agencies was summoned before the same grand jury, we find that after the summons had been served but before he appeared, certain mail bags were taken from his office to the office of the gentleman from New York, some of the mail bags containing the gentleman's speeches enclosed in his franked envelopes.

"The gentleman from New York, from statements appearing in the press, is, it is thought, in possession of knowledge that would clear up many of these things, among them being, where the member of his office force received the money and to what use he put it and the number of his speeches in franked envelopes turned over to the supposedly subversive agency and other persons, organizations and agencies.

"The Congressman has been invited to appear before the grand jury and clear up the whole matter and, it appears, refused the invitation. A summons was then issued and served on him to appear, and when questioned by a reporter as to whether he would appear in obedience to the summons is reported to have replied that he did not know until he 'consulted his lawyer.' His lawyer raises the hue and cry of 'smear.'

"There are some things I believe the membership of the House would like to know, namely:

"(1) How can you smear a man by giving him an opportunity, under oath, to tell his side of the controversy before a grand jury? His appearance before the grand jury would be given wide publicity and, unless incriminating, and I do not think it would be, would clear up any smear his enemies may have attempted to paint him with. Truth has never asked anything better than a forum from which to speak. What better forum could any man demand than the opportunity to testify before a Federal grand jury?

"(2) In raising the question of personal privilege, the gentleman from New York stated the privilege to be, 'I find I am unable to comply with the summons without the consent of the House, the privilege of the House being involved: I therefore submit the matter for the consideration of this body.'

"Question: If the gentleman from New York wanted to appear before the grand jury and make a full disclosure, but felt some hesitancy without first obtaining the 'consent of the House,' why did he not simply ask the House for such consent? The House, in my opinion, would have gladly given its consent. Its action today confirms my opinion.

"And there are some things that, in the name of national safety and security, should be known, namely:

"(1) How many speeches has the gentleman from New York furnished to individuals, associations and agencies to be mailed out under his Congressional frank, and a list of such individuals, associations and agencies?

"(2) Why were the speeches returned by Dennett after he had been summoned to appear before the grand jury but before he actually appeared, and why did the gentleman's office arrange for the return of the speeches by sending a Government truck?

Source of Money

"(3) From what source or sources did the member of his office force receive the large sum of money, for what purpose was the money furnished, and what use was actually made of the money? What contact or contacts brought forth the money to the member of his office force?

"(4) Is the gentleman's apparent aversion to testifying before the grand jury due to embarrassment or a sincere desire to shield some one, if so, whom?

"I believe the grand jury is entitled to full and complete answers to these questions, and I feel sure the gentleman from New York can answer same to the satisfaction of the grand jury and the American people. I sincerely hope that, without further ado, he will see fit to appear before the grand jury and give full and complete answers, let the chips fall where they may. I feel quite sure that the grand jury, as to time of appearance, will cooperate with the gentleman from New York so as to hear him on some day when the House stands in recess, so the great district he represents, in the language of the resolution, will not be deprived of 'his voice and vote.'

"My colleagues, while there may be some excuse for a Representative, conscientiously against the foreign policies of this Administration, being duped into furnishing his speeches to agencies that he did not know were subversive, which agencies used the speeches to spread dissension among our people, there can be no excuse for a Representative, or any one else, attempting to cover up his mistake by refusing to make a frank and full disclosure before a grand jury impaneled and sworn to uncover the activities of those who attempt to weaken our national defense by circulating literature calculated to cause dissension and disunity.

"The manly thing to do, the patriotic thing to do, is for all of us to cooperate to the fullest with the Government in its effort to bring these crafty, deceptive, slimy, subversive tools of Hitler to the bar of justice.

"Let us ever remember that the safety and security of this Republic are paramount to the rights of any individual."

Abbe, Who Reared 3 Prodigies, Did It All by 'Wolf' Theory

'Around-the-World' Authors 'Sent to Look Out for Themselves'

JAMES ABBE

James Abbe, an energetic little man with a knack of rearing famous children, said here yesterday he did it all by the "wolf" theory.

Abbe's children, three of them, wrote a book called "Around the World in 11 Years." Readers ate it up and were generally surprised to find that the oldest author was only 11.

Their father, a writer-photographer, described his theory in this verbal shorthand:

"The wolf bites its young in the flank, sends them off to look out for themselves.

"I use the wolf theory."

Fitting their actions to his theory, the three youngsters, Patience, now 17; Richard, 15, and Johnny, 14, made their own killing.

Sold 100,000 Books

Their first book, their dad recalled, sold 100,000 copies in this country, was translated into six languages, and netted $40,000. Out of that, was bought a 320-acre ranch, with an 11-room house in Colorado, and now the children are going to high school in Colorado Springs. Since their first book, an account of the people and places they saw in their first years in Europe, they have published two more.

Their father, something of a lone wolf himself, came here recently to see "what all the shooting's about."

He's been following the shooting for a good many years. It all started down at Newport News when Abbe used to trounce the naval officers at tennis, he said. He took pictures then, too—made a shot of the Maine a month before its sinking—so when he came to Washington about 1910 his naval friends steered him to the department here.

He landed a ride with part of the fleet on a cruise to Europe, and he said that three of the pictures he took were sent back here and published in The Post.

He was in New York, taking theatrical pictures, when he found Polly Platt in the Ziegfeld chorus.

Tripped to Altar

"I tripped her as she went by, and she married me," he said. She is the mother of the authors, took dictation from them when they were writing their first, and lives with them.

The Abbes went to Europe, and took the children around with them. While there, Abbe made pictures of Stalin, Churchill, Hitler, Mussolini, and others.

"Don't get those people mixed up," he warned. "Keep them separate when you write about them."

After the children got famous, their dad went off to Spain to photograph the war. He's ready to go again, but "not asking for it."

His present job is radio commentator for Station KWYO in Sheridan, Wyo., and during his stay here he expects to interview Senator O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, on the radio.

Just to keep the record clear, Abbe wanted it known he's not the only photographer in the family. There is James Abbe, jr., a son by an earlier marriage, whose by-line pictures have appeared in several national magazines.

Sportsmen Seek Hunting Preserve

Special Dispatch to The Post

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 18.—Complaining that most of the 4000 hunters who have taken out licenses are finding it difficult to locate land that is not posted to hunt on, a group of sportsmen here are planning to ask Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor to set aside 12,000 acres of mountain land on Green Ridge, in Allegany County, for hunting.

The land on which several CCC camps have been located for several years, is now State property under the jurisdistion of the State Depart ment of Forestry and sportsmen point out the land could be converted into a hunting preserve with but little expense.

Frenchmen Learn They Must Watch Tongues Because Careless Talk May Land Them in Jail

By Roy P. Porter
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Nov. 18.—France today is a country where you keep your mouth shut—literally—or run the risk of going to jail.

Particularly in the occupied zone, freely expressed approval or criticism of any phase of official or military activity may lead to arest or denunciation.

It extends even to an unofficial prohibition against speaking English in public places.

Some of the unfriendly feeling of French people toward Americans arises from discontent over the present situation and a desire to blame somebody, even unreasonably, for France's defeat. Despite United States assistance in the World War and despite willingness to accept shipments of food and medical supplies from this country to the occupied zone, some Frenchmen believe America should help soften the hard times the country is now going through.

German propaganda in occupied France, too, has constantly criticized the United States, protesting that Americans are making too much money out of the war while Frenchmen go hungry.

The peculiar feature of the situation is that an unconsidered remark among strangers often may be interpreted several ways, with unpleasant consequences attached to each.

An Example

For example, a Frenchman was talking to a companion in a Paris restaurant not long ago. They were discussing the entrance of Japanese troops in French Indo-China.

"The damned Japanese have finally gotten in," he said. "I suppose the old marshal knows what he's doing but I sometimes wonder. But I can see how we couldn't help Indo-China defend herself."

Those expressions got him into trouble in two different ways, and the next morning—because he was well known in Paris—he was taken into cusotdy by French police for questioning.

A German officer in civilian clothes reported he had expressed anti-Axis sentiments by referring to the "Damned Japanese." A Frenchman—a strong supporter of the Vichy government—who overheard his remarks told the police that Mr. X. had criticized the marshal by calling him "old" and intimating he perhaps did not know what he was doing.

Mr. X. explained that his remarks, although careless, were harmless, and he was released after he had signed a statement denying he intended to offend anyone. But now he has a police record.

Americans Suffer

Americans in the occupied zone have suffered—some of them severely—from this system of denunciatory reports. Sometimes it originates with the French police, acting either independently or under German supervision, sometimes directly from the German authorities.

One woman in the now small American colony was sent to the Sante Prison in Paris for questioning, remained there for more than two months and finally was sentenced to an additional four months. She was still in prison when I left occupied territory.

She went to a large restaurant, much patronized by Germans, with a French woman friend one night. She was well known to the head waiter who tried to find a table for her. He finally located a small one. On either side were tables with German officers and several of their secretaries.

She looked around the restaurant, then turning to her friend, said in a bitter tone: "I can't understand why all the tables here always have to be taken by German officers. You would think a few of us might like to eat occasionally."

She was put in jail the next morning—and has been there since. Only her husband has been allowed to see her.

An American business man, known in Paris for being the central figure in several incidents with the German military police, disappeared from his hotel sometime in June. His friends inquired for him and were told by hotel employes he had left in custody of two men and later two more had come to search his room and baggage.

He has not been heard of since, although his family in the United States has made many inquiries about his whereabouts, through the State Department and through personal friends. A German I know in the military police admitted to me he was in German custody but refused to tell me where or on what charges.

Elizabeth Carmalt, who drove an ambulance for the American hospital serving the French during the war and lately has been working with the Y. M. C. A. in Paris, was arrested in August. She was told by French detectives that she had been accused of distributing tracts. Tracts in France mean only one thing—Communist propaganda.

She denied the charge indignantly and told the French police to go search her apartment. They did and found quantities of tracts—religious pamphlets. She was released a few days afterward.

Dull Christmas Is in Store For Americans in Britain

By William W. White
Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, Nov. 18.—Americans in Britain—and any one expecting presents from Britain—can look forward to an unexciting Christmas this year because Britain must use most of her available shipping space for war materials.

Virtually the only presents Americans can expect from here are photographs, partly because the authorities frown on the export of valuable gifts of jewelry, and partly because buying gifts of cloths costs not only money but coupons and few in England can spare any of their yearly supply of 66 coupons in buying presents.

And there are not many toys that can be sent from England, export rules or no export rules. Original stocks of toys only amounted to one-fifth of normal and they have suffered in quality. Toy soldiers have lost their waistlines and their scarlet tunics, dolls no longer have China heads and moving eyelids and doll furniture does not have its usual polish.

The export rules require the present-giver in Britain to fill in a form stating that he expects payment for the gift in American dollars within six months—which violates the rules of most Christmas giving—and no present over £1 in value may be sent unless the Bank of England approves the transaction. One American who has tried already to send a £4 toilet set to America could not get that permission.

Americans who send gifts to friends or relatives in England are allowed a bit more latitude. "Unsolicited gifts," even though they include rationed foods, may be sent from abroad provided they do not exceed five pounds in weight and do not contain more than two pounds of any one foodstuff. If the package contains more than two pounds of one food the receipient will not get it. He must then send it to a "responsible organization in England formed for a charitable or similar purpose."

Broadly those are the lines which must be followed, although the port officials here urged would-be American gift donors to contact officials in America for specific rules since "there are so many changes being made that it is almost impossible to keep track of them all."

Child Safety Regulations To Be Revised

A new program for the traffic protection of school-age youngsters was launched yesterday at a special conference of school, police and American Automobile Association leaders in the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K Streets Northwest.

Dr. Robert W. Eaves, principal of Thomson School and chairman of the Board of Education's school safety committee, was designated to formulate a "more consistent and articulate" child safety plan.

Delegates to the meeting were told that five school children have been killed on Washington streets since the September term opened. It was pointed out that these youngsters were killed en route to classes at uncontrolled intersections.

Dr. R. L. Haycock, assistant superintendent of schools, reported that 60 per cent of students enrolled this year are from out-of-town and are unfamiliar with local traffic conditions.

It was suggested that school lunch periods be shortened so that the children would be forced to bring their own lunches, remain on school property and not take the extra trip to their homes.

Dr. Eaves promised to work out a new safety program and report back to the meeting at the earliest possible date. It was agreed by all spokesmen that renewed efforts should be made to obtain home instruction in safety measures.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer announced that of the 12 fatalities—adult and juvenile—during October, only four cars of District registration were involved. He said the other autos came from Virginia, Maryland, Delaware and Michigan.

Quick First Aid Of Guardsman Saves Boy's Life

Salisbury, Md., Nov. 18 (AP).—Lieut. Fred Wagner, Company C, Maryland State Guard, was credited by local surgeons today with an "amazing example" of first aid in saving the life of a 12-year-old boy whose jugular vein was pierced.

Nelson Elliott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Granville Elliott, had been firing an air rifle at a 30-30 cartridge which exploded when one of the BB shots struck it. A quarter-inch fragment tore through the left side of his neck. He ran to the Wagner home and collapsed from loss of blood.

Wagner applied pressure on the vein with his fingers while his wife drove them to the hospital. He maintained his grip until the boy was placed on an operating table. Only when surgeons began their work did they instruct him to let go.

A blood transfusion was given young Elliott and he is expected to recover.

Ballou Urges Air-Raid Drills for Pupils; Tentative Plan Outlined at Conference

Washington's 90,000 day-school children should have air raid evacuation drills "on the first pleasant day," because it "is not too early" to practice anything in this connection that we know how to do, Superintendent of Schools Frank Ballou declared yesterday.

Speaking at his monthly conference with more than 200 school administrative officers in Roosevelt High School, Dr. Ballou outlined a tentative plan for the protection of school children and cooperation with the local Air Raid Warden Service.

The new setup as related by the superintendent grew out of recommendations of his assistants delegated at the last Board of Education meeting to be responsible within the District school A. R. W. S. system for such departments as fire, police, medical, maintenance and morale services.

Notice of probable air raids will be received here at least an hour and probably much longer before the enemy can reach the city by plane, it was stated in the report on fire services by Dr. G. C. Wilkinson and Dr. C. W. Holmes. "Consequently, it will be possible for practically every child to reach his home before the enemy arrives with bombs."

The present fire drill system is believed the best to evacuate buildings with the children returning immediately to their homes, and wherever possible, with the older children looking after the younger ones.

Emphasis was placed on the fact that no school buildings here are suitable as shelters against bombs. A building must be more than four stories in height to answer this purpose, the report stated, and none in the District are of use for this reason.

Dr. H. H. Long and L. J. Cantrell conferred with Lieut. John J. Agnew relative to police auxiliary in the schools. Its duties will be to assist in allaying panic, to prevent looting, establish police lines, evacuate buildings, and to report casualties among other duties. One auxiliary police assistant for each 100 pupils was said to be necessary.

Two recommendations were made by Dr. E. A. Clark in connection with the medical services. These were for each school to check its first-aid equipment to see that it is in good condition and for school officers to encourage all teachers to take first-aid courses under the Red Cross.

Morale services were reported on by R. L. Haycock and A. K. Savoy, deputies charged with this duty.

In conclusion Dr. Ballou urged cooperation with the entire program, pointing out, "We may feel that the bombs are a long way away. I don't know, but there are those who believe we should prepare for the worst and then hope for the best." After school officials have had an opportunity to express their views on the plan it will be submitted to Col. Lemuel Bolles, executive director of civilian defense here, for final approval.

Archives Guard, Despondent, Kills Self With Pistol

A ceretificate of suicide was issued by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald yesterday after an investigation of the fatal shooting of Edward R. Ferriera, 32, a gaurd at the Archives Building.

Ferriera, who lived at 923 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, was found about 6 a. m. in a washroom at the building by James Kaur, of 17 Sixth Street Southeast. His .38-caliber service revolver was near his hand with one shot discharged. He was dead when a doctor from Emergency Hospital arrived.

Detective Sergt. Herbert Wanamaker learned that Ferriera, a native of Plymouth, Mass., was despondent because of financial and domestic troubles. His wife, Mrs. Mary Ferriera, was notified at Plymouth.

This holds OIL-PLATING snugly joined up to inner parts during all the time you use Conoco N*th* motor oil. In this way, long before your alarm clock rings—and before any oil pump could squirt one squirt—the OIL-PLATED insides of your engine are waiting with lubricant already up in place, to make quick starting safe.

And persistent OIL-PLATING—entirely in addition to plain fluid oil-film—still stays up on guard against wear, despite the hot firing inside the cylinders that would wilt a stoker. This added defense helps the engine not to over-eat oil. You can count on Conoco N*th* as a strict economy diet, figuring from the Certified Record of the spectacular Competitive Death-Test in Death Valley.

Here 6 identical everyday cars each got one 5-quart fill of some one big-name brand of oil . . . locked in . . . none ever added. Each kept speeding, day on day, under impartial observation, till each oil and engine gave out. The 5-quart fill of one big brand quit dead while Conoco N*th* was still up at 3.65 quarts! And after all five others were down and out, the car with Conoco N*th* still had 2.7 quarts of its original 5-quart fill. That's certified—and that's plain arithmetic on why to change now to Conoco N*th* for Winter OIL-PLATING—for safe prompt starting—for saving quarts and cash. Drive in today at Your Mileage Merchant's Conoco station. Continental Oil Co.

GAVE TWICE THE ENGINE LIFE!

This oil that OIL-PLATES gave its engine more than twice the life averaged by the engines using the other oils in the Death-Test.

In these times use your car prudently. And use oil that's great for engine life—changing regularly as recommended.

Good starting—good lubrication against all needless wear—helps save gasoline, too.

Meeting Today May End Split On Rent Bill

By Charles Mercer
Post Staff Writer

The uneven road to enactment of the District rent control bill is expected to be smoothed somewhat today when Representative Patman (Democrat), of Texas, chief opponent of the measure as it now stands, meets with House District Committee, backers of the bill.

In expressing hope that some differences may be settled today, Representative Patman declared:

"The present bill provides an escalator up in prices for the landlord, but it doesn't provide any escalator down for the tenant."

He emphasized that an emergency rent control measure is necessary in Washington, but reiterated his belief that an equitable means for a rent administrator to arrive at fair rent rates is not included in the bill.

Author of Amendment

Representative Patman is the author of an amendment which would hinge an administrator's decision chiefly on the investment value of property. The Senate sliced the amendment from the measure last week when it passed the bill fixing rates at the January 1, 1941, level.

The amendment was opposed by representatives of both tenant and landlord groups at Senate District Committee hearings because of its similarity to the ineffectual local rent-control measure after the last war.

When the bill was returned to the House Monday, Representative Patman refused to concur in a unanimous consent motion or to allow it to go to joint conference.

Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, acting chairman of the Rules Committee, told Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, acting chairman of the District Committee, that his group probably would not be "interested" in a special rule to set the bill moving again.

Meet at 9:30 A. M. Today

Yesterday Representative Cox modified the attitude of the committee, indicating that a hearing for a special rule to allow the bill to go to conference probably would be granted if necessary.

Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee, sponsor of the bill, said that Representative Patman will meet with himself, Representative Schulte and Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, at 9:30 a. m. today in the House District Committee room.

If a satisfactory understanding is not reached today, the Rules Committee will be asked for a special rule to take the bill to conference, with Representatives Schulte and Dirksen as the House conferees, he said.

The House District Committee will meet at 10:30 a. m. to consider the bill making it a criminal offense to sell impure food in the District, Randolph announced.

Scott Underpass Opening Due Before Christmas

The equestrian statue of Gen. Winfield Scott will be returned to the center of Scott Circle in "about a month" with the Sixteenth Street underpass beneath the circle scheduled to be completed before Christmas, Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, District highway director, said last night.

Moving the statue and its 140-ton stone base from its temporary resting place nearby will be a "simple job that should not take more than a day or two," Capt. Whitehurst said. It will be placed in the center of an oval which will divide Massachusetts Avenue into two lanes.

The route now used for Massachusetts Avenue is a temporary one constructed to carry the traffic load while the rest of the grade separation is being completed, he said.

The statue was placed on its pedestal in 1875. Cast by Sculptor Henry Kirke Brown, it was made from cannon captured by Scott's army in the Mexican War. The stone base, a solid block of Massachusetts granite, is believed to be the largest single block of stone ever quarried.

Manville Weds Fifth, 3 Days After Meeting

By the United Press

Ridgefield, Conn., Nov. 18.—Thomas Frederick Manville, jr., known to blondes the world over as Tommy, was married today for the fifth time.

His bride was Bonita Francine (Bonnie) Edwards, Broadway show girl, whom he met Sunday night on a blind date. Manville announced their engagement that night at the Hurricane, a night club where he had just judged a blonde beauty contest. The crowd snickered because Manville has announced his engagement numerous times since his divorce in October, 1937, from Marcelle Edwards, also a show girl, but no relation to Bonita.

The fifth Mrs. Manville was introduced to the asbestos heir by his friend, Jack Eigen, radio commentator on Broadway and Hollywood affairs, who had been asked by Manville to bring an extra girl along to the night club.

Next day, despite his announcement of the engagement, Manville asked Eigen if he should marry Bonita.

"Why not?" Eigen replied.

Thus encouraged, and with the further knowledge that their horoscopes indicated marriage would be propitious, Manville proposed once more, this time seriously.

They went to Connecticut today and Justice of the Peace Thomas J. Breen waived the State's five-day marriage certificate law.

Manville's record for staying in the matrimonial bonds was made in his first marriage, to Florence Huber. They stayed married for seven years.

Manville has made settlements up to $200,000 on his former wives, once they have divorced him. He sends his first wife a hamper of liquor every Christmas. She doesn't drink.

Pair Get 30 Years In Kidnaping of Virginia Girl

Richmond, Va., Nov. 18 (AP).—Judge Robert N. Pollard in United States District Court today sentenced Tracy Lee Sims, 20, and Jack Floyd Adams, 24, former North Carolina Cotton Mill workers, to 30 years each in the Federal penitentiary at Atlanta, on conviction of kidnaping a 17-year-old Boydton girl last August, and transporting her across the State line into North Carolina.

Schipa Abandons Tour, Flies to Italy

Rio de Janeiro, Nov. 18 (INS).—Abandoning contracts in the United States for 46 concerts, Tito Schipa, famous tenor, left by air today for Italy.

Schipa asserted the United States Government, although he has an American-born child, demanded a written guarantee that the singer remain in United States territory for the duration of the war. He denied that the Italian government had ordered him home.

Ringside Table

NINE HUNDRED POUNDS OF BEAUTY will cavort on the Brown Derby bandstand come Monday. This truck-load of feminine charm is concentrated in the persons of the massively glamorous Three Murphy Sisters who sing and dance, tip the scale at 399 pounds apiece. Here's hoping, but timorously, that the jovial Murphy giantesses don't reduce the B. D. stage to kindling wood . . . The "Three Loose Nuts" will continue to bounce terrific jive around the Derby for the balance of this week.

Tonight's history-making event is the opening of the new Crossroads, big and Manhattanish spot on the Baltimore Boulevard, with dance music by Ralph Hawkins and his Crossroadsters. Every table will be crowded and they'll probably be standing three or four deep at the 75-foot "diamond bar."

EDDIE DOWLING, the engaging actor who makes sense out of Saroyan plays, visited the Metronome Room recently in company with some of the Administration's stanchest pillars, including Postmaster General Frank Walker and Mrs. Walker, Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones and Senator "Happy" Chandler . . . Decorations for tonight's Tranksgiving Eve party in Metronome are so handsome, we're told, that they'll give you ideas about home holiday decorations (This is no hint that you take the decorations home with you.)

THE SONG WRITING BUG has bitten Carmen Cavallaro, piano wizard of the Carlton's Cosmos Room. He's polished off a couple of numbers and sent them to his publishers and the sheet music will be coming along soon. It'll be highly interesting to see how Carmen's creative inspiration compares with his acknowledged topflight interpretative ability.

AN AMATEUR CONTEST GRADUATE is Bob Pace, new singer in the King Cole Room. A native New Yorker, he won his first boost by taking top honors in an amateur contest sponsored by Jay C. Flippen. This coup netted him an engagement at Jack Dempsey's, his first important job. From there he went to the Paradise Restaurant. He's also appeared at the Edgewater Beach and Drake Hotels and the Chicago Theater in Chicago. Radio vocals have taken much of his time for the last five years and he recently sang on the Orrin Tucker program.

Tallest warblers in town are Cynthia Cavanaugh, new blonde eyeful in the Mayflower Lounge, and Helene Standish of Paul Young's. They're both of showgirl altitude which means around six feet, and have figgers like fashion illustrations.

"A TABLE, MY KINGDOM FOR A TABLE!" is the sort of remark you hear around Versailles where they're cracking all records for supper dance crowds, luring in a colorful mixture of junior socialites, diplomats, service people, defense executives and visiting firemen and show people. Head waiter Maurice who's trying to make two tables grow in place of one, affirms that this popularity sprouts equally from Versailles' two bands playing South and North American dance music and its rare and almost inexhaustible wine cellar.

"OUT YOU GO, DUCHESS!" The "Duchess of Riviera," cocker spaniel mascot of the Lounge Riviera, and her master and mistress, Manager Don Stone and Mrs. Stone, are all looking for a new apartment. Their landlord insists on applying that "no dogs" clause in the lease to the aristocratic little "Duchess." Fie!

A POP CORN BOUTONNIERE is worn by blonde Billie Joyce, of the Harding-Moss-Joyce Trio appearing in the Neptune Room. Each bit of pop corn is wrapped in cellophane and looks like a glistening posy. This is Billie's way of showing she's true daughter of Iowa . . . The "revolving rhythm" of the H-M-J Trio is now heard over WINX. Their theme song is "The Music Goes Down and Around."

Alfredo Seville, Troika's new baritone, is acclaimed by no less authority than Variety, the show people's paper, as "having the finest voice heard in night clubs. That's receiving the accolade.

THANKSGIVING EVE AND THANKSGIVING DINNERS will keep the niteries and restaurants equally busy. Restaurant "823" will be resounding with fun tonight with more than the usual dozen-odd of amateur singers probably trying to help out Vocalist Van Taylor . . . The new Viking has dancing room and good cheer for this evening's merrymakers and a monumental turkey dinner for tomorrow afternoon . . . The Rainbow Room is always cram-jammed on holiday eves and will be fine tomorrow, too, when you can either precede or follow your Thanksgiving dinner with cocktail dancing to Milton Davis' music . . . There'll be a big party out at O'Donnell' Farmhouse tonight, and it would be a good idea to go out there tomorrow, also, for a country style Thanksgiving dinner with lavish goodies . . . Thanksgiving feasting at the new Balalaika will be enlivened with that subtle touch.

"Present prosperity in the restaurant and hotel business," said Seer Leo of the Mayfair, looking around at the crowded tables, "will continue in a huge upswing until September, 1942." "What then?" we said. "The war will be over," responded Leo.

DIVERTING THOUGH DIZZY. The unbelievable tail light worn by Joe Arenas Boston bull terrier in the Shoreham floor show . . . The spins of Dancers Jack and Jill in the Pall Mall Room. 'S a wonder they don't come tumbling down the floor . . . The impromptu rhumba lessons that Maraca Juggler Miguelito Rodrigo gives to customers in the Copocabana . . . Tommy Johnson's high-speed boogie-woogie organing in Burt's Trans-Lux . . . That bracelet with bangles of silver dollars that we saw a pretty girl wearing in the Hi Hat. There's a lass who doesn't need a pocketbook . . . The new arrangement of "There's a Shanty in Old Shanty Town" being played by Carr and Don in the Madrillon . . . Will Goff's resurrection in the Plymouth of that quaint Ziegfeld oldie, "It's Delightful to Be Married" . . . Those wicked lyrics that Don Carper of the Cafe Caprice writes for the singers in leading Manhattan hot spots. They'll give you a quick sun tan . . . The dumbfounded expressions of Casino Royal patrons who have just had the number on their folding money reeled off to them by the Mystics.

Tonight may be "Piggy Party" at River Bend, but tomorrow will be another kind of piggy party there—the Thanksgiving sort. River Bend dinners are plenteous and delicious and you can dance later to George Stein's music.

KAVAKO'S THANKSGIVING CELEBRATION. Beginning tonight there'll be big holiday floor shows in Kavakos Grill for the rest of the week. Bill Kavakos believes in doing things up right and making a real holiday week of it. A large group of vaudeville acts from out of town has been booked. Songs by Nell Deacon, dance music by Louie's orchestra.

A DANCERS' MAGNET is the Nightingale with Jack Maggio's up and coming band. Young leader Maggio craftily mingles sweet and swing melodies, tosses in occasional handfuls of jive and boogie-woogie, blends in the needful vocals. It all comes out as the kind of dance music preferred by Mr. and Mrs. Public.

Field for Mission Seen in D. C.

Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, executive secretary of the D. C. Baptist Convention, yesterday called Washington "the most strategic mission field on this earth," and urged more work here.

Reporting at the sixty-fourth annual meeting of the D. C. Baptist Convention at Fifth Baptist Church, Sixth and a Half and E Streets Southwest, he said that the convention had raised almost $700,000 for its cooperative work in 10 years, and had "given 10 times as much money to mission work of the Northern and Southern Baptist Conventions as to local mission work."

He stated that the metropolitan population has increased 53 per cent in 10 years, while the Baptist membership has increased but 37 per cent.

Urges Aid for Europe

Dr. Walter O. Lewis, general secretary of the Baptist World Alliance, stressed need of aid to the "stalwart" Christians who are carrying on so nobly under the greatest of difficulties in Europe."

The alliance headquarters have been moved here from bomb-shattered London and occupy temporary offices at Calvary Baptist Church, Eighth and H Streets Northwest.

The report of the executive board of the District of Columbia Baptist Convention recommended a pension plan for local Baptist ministers. It also cited the progress of local mission churches, especially Luther Rice Memorial Baptist Church, which was organized last December and officially admitted to the convention yesterday. The Rev. Mike Elliott, editor of the United States Baptist, is pastor.

Merger of the North Washington and Highlands Baptist Churches was also announced at the morning meeting. Dr. John E. Briggs, pastor of the host church, gave an address of welcome to delegates.

Youth Night Celebrated

"Young People's Night" was celebrated last evening—combining the November meeting of the Columbia Federation of Baptist Young People's Unions with an address by Dr. William Dewey Moore, who has just returned with his wife after five years' service as Baptist missionary in Italy.

Senator Josh Lee, of Oklahoma, will speak at 8 p. m. today. The Rev. W. Bertram King, pastor of Fountain Memorial Baptist Church, will preach at 11:55 a. m. on "Capturing the Capital." Dr. William S. Abernethy, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, will deliver the Thanksgiving message tomorrow at 10:30 a. m.

Col. Knute Enlind To Have Arlington Military Funeral

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, Nov. 18.—Lieut. Col. Knute Enlind, 68, Army Medical Corps Reserve, died here Monday in the Veterans Hospital.

Col. Enlind was a well known New York physician, active in Army and civic circles for 40 years. A graduate of the University of Vermont, he received a post-graduate degree from the University of Maryland. Medically, he was noted for his studies in endorcinology. He was also a distinguished cardiac specialist, and during the World War was senior psychiatrist in the Army Medical Corps, stationed in Washington, D. C.

A member of the Military Order of the World War, he was beloved for his philanthropic medical work. He has been residing at 77 Park Avenue, New York City. He was associated with former President Madero, of Mexico, for many years, and at one time held extensive silver mining interests there.

A native American, Col. Enlind was a member of the distinguished Swedish family of the same name and a nephew of Klaus Enlind, former commanding general of the Swedish army. He is survived by his sister, Mrs. Helma Wilde, of Yarmouth, Mass. Burial will be with military honors in Arlington Cemetery. Services also will be held in New York, although definite arrangements have not been made.

Earthly Values Overemphasized, Dr. Niebuhr Says at Congregational-Christian Meeting

Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr, distinguished theologian, last night advised against loving earthly existence too much, and disregarding the life to come.

"We had better not love it too well," he said at the annual meeting of the Washington Association of Congregational-Christian Churches, "or we will rob it of its value and dignity by clinging to it too desperately. The plight of modern France is an example of this truth."

"Our modern culture,' said the speaker, "began with the hope that it could establish a more perfect justice on earth if it could disavow the 'other-wordly' note of Christianity. It renounced the incredible heaven, namely, Utopia."

Dr. Niebuhr, professor of Christian ethics at Union Theological Seminary, New York City, and eminent author of theological and ethical works, spoke at the People's Congregational Church, 624 M Street Northwest. He is a member of the Evangelical and Reformed faith.

Hunter Elected

At business sessions earlier in the day, the Rev. Paul R. Hunter, pastor of the Rock Spring Congregational Church of Arlington, Va., was elected Moderator of this area, succeeding the Rev. Paul W. Yinger, pastor of Cleveland Park Congregational Church here.

Also named were W. W. Langtry, of Cleveland Park Church, vice moderator; Mr. John Elmo Wallace, assistant pastor of First Congregational Church, secretary; Howard Barker, Cleveland Park Church, treasurer, and Harry A. Whiton, First Congregational Church, and Miss Jessie LaSalle, Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, trustees.

Dr. Farmer Speaks

Speaking at a fellowship supper that preceded last night's worship service, Dr. J. Leonard Farmer, professor in the Howard University School of Religion, said:

"Christianiay must solve social problems in a practical way in our land before it can have any reasonable ground for expecting its proffered solutions to be accepted in other areas of the world." Dr. Howard Stone Anderson, pastor of First Congregational Church, was toastmaster, and the Rev. Arthur F. Elmes, host pastor.

Among other speakers at the afternoon sessions were the Rev. Edwin H. Tuller, director of the Training Camp Council, Washington Federation of Churches, and Mrs. D. E. Brown, superintendent of the Middle Atlantic Conference of Congregational - Christian Churches.

Montgomery's Sewer Extension Given Approval

Presidential approval of 15 public works defense projects, costing approximately two million dollars, yesterday cleared the way for Montgomery County's proposed sewer system extension, to cost $51,870.

Of the cost, the county will put up $39,000 and the Federal Government will contribute $12,870.

The program, sponsored by the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission, calls for construction of sewer extension facilities to serve the Forest Glen housing project for enlisted personnel at the Army Medical Center, and for construction of sewers and treatment plant to serve the Cabin John housing project, which provides homes for Navy personnel of the ship model testing base.

Make D. C. Defense Housing Focal Point, WPA to Urge

The Works Progress Administration will shortly release a report with recommendations for making the Nation's Capital the focal point for defense housing construction, it was learned yesterday.

It is expected that the recommendations for Nation-wide expansion of housing facilities, drawn up by the office of Charles F. Palmer, Federal defense housing coordinator, will seek the largest single building program for the District.

Whether dormitories like those built for Government girls during World War I will be recommended is not known. It is recognized, however, that rooms for girls is the major housing problem.

The report from Palmer's office will carry no provision for financing, it is understood. There is now before the House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee, however, a bill authorizing expenditure of 300 million dollars additional the country under the Lanham Act. The committee is expected to delay its report until after the housing coordinator has announced his recommendations.

Difficulties of undertaking additional huge housing programs in the District "before spring" are worrying local housing officials, who are pushing their efforts to make more rooms available at private homes.

Rev. Bell Assails Lewis In Talk Before Clubmen

John L. Lewis delivered a "below the belt punch" by ordering walkouts of workers employed in captive coal mines "while Government officials were seated at the conference table attempting to reach a settlement with Japan which might have a far-reaching effect on the destiny of both nations," the Rev. C. Cooper Bell, pastor of the Washington Street Methodist Church, declared yesterday in an address before 150 members of the Alexandria Kiwanis, Rotary and Lions Clubs.

Speaking before the annual joint Thanksgiving meeting of the city's three service clubs in the Westminster Building, Dr. Bell declared the year 1941 is a "year of disillusionment, and for that fact we should be thankful.

"We should be thankful for disillusionment because no longer is there evidence of that cocksureness so apparent a decade ago, and no longer are Americans so smugly sure they are sitting on top of the world," he said.

Film Star Makes Good As Curb Floor Trader

New York, Nov. 18 (AP).—Motion Picture Actress Linda Darnell, as a Curb Exchange "specialist in defense bonds and stamps," today sold $146.75 worth of the savings stamps and took in $800.75 for bonds in half an hour.

The first woman to sell securities on the floor of the Curb Exchange, Miss Darnell was assigned trading post 29.

Prince Georges Collects $4062 In Chest Drive

Prince Georges County (Md.) Community Chest officials, at the report meeting in the Willard Hotel yesterday, announced $4,062.95 had been pledged so far in the county's drive to raise its goal of $15,000.

Frank H. Haszard, county vice chairman, failed to get to the meeting in time with several hundred dollars more, which he stopped to collect en route. Haszard obtained the third highest individual pledge contributed so far—a $100 gift from Charles Gentile, College Park bowling alley proprietor.

The county's average as of yesterday was 28 per cent of its goal, as compared to 31.13 per cent for the entire Chest. Next Monday, Haszard announced, will be Prince Georges County Day at the report meeting. Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland and county drive chairman, will make the report on the county's progress.

Gauleiter For Russia

Our readers had already been prepared for the appointment of Dr. Alfred Rosenberg as the chief civilian administrator of occupied Soviet territory. In a series of articles which appeared on the page opposite last month Andre Visson predicted that Rosenberg would be Vice Fuehrer of Russia. He also foreshadowed the nature of the rule Hitler plans to impose on the conquered regions in the east. The administration set up by Berlin for the region which includes Esthonia, Latvia, Lithuania, the former Soviet Republic of White Russia and the annexed parts of the Ukraine completely ignores nationalist lines. In effect the whole of that vast region has been incorporated in the German Reich. On the basis of Rosenberg's writings it is apparent that the ultimate purpose is to transform this territory into actual Lebensraum for Germany. The present population, Mr. Visson predicted, is to "be gradually transferred to the east, some as far as western Siberia, in order to make space for future expansion." "In 30 years," he added, "all this area is supposed to be completely colonized by Germany."

So the views of the leader of the intellectual underworld of the Third Reich, a man whose mystical belief in the Germans as Herrenvolk is matched only by his contempt for non-German peoples and his hatred of Christianity, are now coming into their own. The only difficulty is that the war on Russia which Rosenberg so persistently promoted has not gone according to plan. There is a very large fly in the ointment. After five months the Russians show no signs of giving up, while the number of German casualties mounts into the millions. There is hardly a family in Germany which does not mourn a father, son or brother sacrificed on the altar of those megalomaniac ambitions entertained by Hitler under the persistent promptings of Rosenberg.

"Put The Lid On"

An inscription on a 3000-year-old vase which merely reads "Put the lid on" may not sound exciting, but in a double sense it puts us on intimate terms with our forefathers. The scholar who has succeeded in reading the inscription, which is written in the script known to archeologists as Cyro-Minoan, is Dr. John F. Daniel, assistant curator of the University of Pennsylvania Museum, and the hieroglyphs occur on some fragments of a very ancient oil jar from the island of Cyprus. The scholars will rightly hail Dr. Daniel's success. For, according to Dr. Daniel, this syllabary provides the "missing link" between the most primitive Greek and the Scripta Minoa of the mysterious pre-Hellenic civilization of Crete and other Aegean islands. Thus the discovery may be in the nature of a key. It may lead eventually to the deciphering not only of the inscriptions on Cretan vases and other artifacts of the late Minoan period but also of the hieroglyphs employed in the earlier phases of Minoan culture.

It seems a pity that Sir Arthur Evans, who died last summer at the age of 90, could not have lived a few months longer to hear of this success. For it was through Sir Arthur's excavations of the fabulous Cretan labyrinth that the existence of Minoan writing became known. Indeed, we are indebted to him for virtually everything we know concerning this strange Mediterranean people who, throughout at least a thousand years before Homer, had developed a high civilization. Then on the threshold of Homeric times the whole Minoan world was overwhelmed and destroyed so completely that it survives only in Greek legends. Whether its conquerors were Dorians, or the Mycenaeans, or the people that Homer calls the Achaians is still a matter of conjecture. However, Evans has identified the people whom the Bible calls Philistines with a colony of Minoan refugees.

Still the translation of the writing on Dr. Daniel's Cyprian oil jar seems something of an anticlimax. "Put the lid on" is a prosaic ending to a quest that may set the world of archeology agog. It is somewhat as though an archeologist of A. D. 5000, having with great labor pieced together an inscribed artifact from the ruins of Washington, and having with great scholarship deciphered it, should find that it said "No parking at any time."

Sole Issue

Not least among the tragedies involved in the coal strike is the gross misrepresentation of the issue which is being practiced by the organ of the U. M. W. A., the United Mine Workers Journal. A copy of the current number, which no doubt is now circulating through the idle coal fields, has come to our attention. The first article deals with the coal dispute. It is headed "Miners Out to Win Union Recognition; Mediation Board Stalls in Its Tracks." The article is keyed to this headline. The miners are told that "union recognition," which is called an "age-old controversy," was the "sole issue" before the Mediation Board.

This statement is a complete travesty of the facts. Union recognition was not the "sole issue" before the Mediation Board. In fact, it was not an issue at all. The "sole issue" was whether the Government should compel the few nonmembers of the U. M. W. A. in the captive mines to join that union. In other words, the argument was over a union shop forced by the Government, not union recognition. A moment's reflection would persuade any miner of the reason that such a demand could not be favorably considered. The U. M. W. A. already has a union shop in the mines belonging to the commercial operators which has been won in the normal course of union growth and industrial bargaining. In the captive mines only a small number of the workers remain outside the U. M. W. A. If the Mediation Board had recommended that the Government should dragoon these men into joining the U. M. W. A., the Government would have been called upon to take a step distinctly against the public interest. For, as has already been stated in these columns, a union shop covering an entire calling would establish the U. M. W. A. as a private monopoly of national scope and public concern. No worker could have worked as a coal miner in the United States except through membership in this union. Logically any such recommendation would have had to be accompanied by strict Government regulation.

Obviously a refusal to force the union shop is altogether different from a refusal to recognize the U. M. W. A. The Mediation Board, far from taking such a stand, leaned over backward in buttressing the U. M. W. A. It encouraged the few nonmembers of the U. M. W. A. in the captive mines to join that union. The Mediation Board makes the suggestion in these words: "In our opinion these individuals could make a great contribution to untroubled labor relations in the coal industry and to the national welfare in this period of crisis by voluntarily joining the U. M. W. A., at least for the duration of this contract." Moreover, the board formally recommended that the captive mine operators proceed immediately to adopt in all particulars but the union shop the Appalachian agreement governing the noncaptive mines in the coal industry. This the operators said they would do.

Whether the striking miners know of this willingness to extend to them the privileges, minus the union shop, of the Appalachian agreement must be doubted. At any rate, they will get no understanding of the way that the Mediation Board advanced their cause from the United Mine Workers Journal. No workers in the world enjoy terms and conditions of labor equal to Appalachian privileges. In wages and stability of employment and other working conditions that agreement is unexcelled. High basic rates of pay are accompanied by vacations with pay. Mine committees are established with the U. M. W. A. represented. The U. M. W. A. is on union grievance committees. Many abuses in mine operation against which miners have inveighed for 50 years past are eliminated. The Mediation Board, in short, actively furthered the security of the U. M. W. A.

In this aid the Mediation Board merely fortified the assistance which Mr. Lewis' union has been getting from Government agencies since 1933. It was then a pale skeleton of a union. New life was breathed into it by the organization made possible by the NRA and the Wagner Act. Now the union is not only recognized; it is securely established as one of the most powerful unions in the entire world. It is just as fantastic to give the impression to the miners that union recognition is at stake as to call out those miners on such an unimportant issue as a complete union shop for an industry which is already organized almost wholly. There could be no misrepresentation of the position of labor as rank as that of which the United Mine Workers Journal is guilty.

Ernst Udet

Inevitably there will be conflicting rumors as to the real reason for the death of Ernst Udet, quartermaster general of the Nazi air force. Officially he was killed accidentally while testing a new weapon. And this may be so. For all his flying life Udet was a crack test pilot whose daredevil capacities and aircraft pioneering were respected here as well as in Britain. But Udet, from all that can be learned, was a Nazi by convenience, not by conviction. He joined the party late and at the behest of his World War flying comrade, Hermann Goering, who was largely responsible for his ascendancy. And his outspoken criticism of Nazi tactics made many enemies among the Third Reich's political hierarchy. Usually Goering's friendship was sufficient to guarantee Udet's position, but only a few months ago, when there were stories of Goering's temporary eclipse, there were also stories that Udet was at last on the skids. Whether or not such stories were true, whether there is more to Udet's death than meets the eye, naturally cannot be established. But there is no doubt of his signal contribution to the Nazi air arm. His major job was to keep the Luftwaffe abreast of her enemies in the air, and judging from the history of the past two years his engineering skill was thoroughly exploited. His death removes a formidable technical opponent of the R. A. F.

Fall Of Kerch

Kerch, at the easternmost end of the Crimean Peninsula, provides the Nazis with an important jumping-off point for an assault on the oil fields of the Caucasus. More or less effective control of the entire Crimea has now been secured. The exception is the region around the great Russian naval base at Sevastopol. As long as Sevastopol remains in Russian hands, and can be utilized by Russia's Black Sea fleet as a base, a German drive on the Caucasus would be attended by grave disadvantages. Thus Sevastopol will be the next objective. If it should fall, the Russian Black Sea fleet would not be in a position to hamper a German thrust down the Caucasus coast.

Turkey would then be put in a delicate position which it is trying desperately to avoid. Recently President Inonu made a speech in which he indicated Turkey's readiness to serve as the sounding board for a Nazi peace offensive. It is possible that this was only a quid pro quo for a hands-off policy by Hitler toward Turkey. But inspired German comment suggests the possibility that Turkey is prepared to go further in the direction of appeasing the Third Reich in the hope that in so doing Nazi lightning will be diverted from Anatolia. One way in which Turkey could be of considerable service to the Axis would be to permit the Italian fleet, either under its own colors or under the flag of one of the Black Sea nations allied to the Axis, to pass through the Dardanelles. Were that to happen, and were Germany to capture Sevastopol, a German drive on the Caucasus would be greatly expedited. However, there is as yet no concrete evidence that any Turkish volte-face is likely.

The loss of Kerch and all that it involves are not to be minimized. After five months of war in which Germany has been forced to use up considerable man power and material, the Wehrmacht continues to show offensive power. But Germany is still very far from her goal in Russia. Instead of the decisive victory which Hitler promised would be won in a few weeks, the German people now have before them the certain and extremely unpleasant prospect of a winter war.

Community Chest

Community Chest workers who have been canvassing the District report unusual generosity on the part of some individuals. This is welcome news and may reflect both increased income and greater appreciation of local needs. Subscription totals are nevertheless running behind by $196,000, compared with a year ago. It is too early in the drive, of course, to determine what this really means. Boomtown conditions and the increased difficulties of adequate coverage by volunteer workers may account in part for the relatively slow start. And perhaps customary substantial gifts usually made in the early days of the drive have yet to be added to the grand total. In any case only 31 per cent of the hoped-for two million dollars has been pledged. The two-week campaign for the Chest is not scheduled to close until November 27. And before then, augmented teams of volunteers will have had ample opportunity to test the social responsibility of local residents. The urgent needs of the District's 59 social agencies are well established. So is the obligation of those who are in a position to give.

BACCHUS IN A GARDEN OF NEVADA

Bacchus is sleeping now, beneath the vine.
His little loves lie crumpled here and there,
His hand rests on the white bull, and the wine,
Tipped from the cup, runs down among his hair.
So late, Diana comes across the night
And finds his drowsy head, and seeks his eyes,
Beneath his eyelids, sealed against her light,
And kisses him awake, and beaming, sighs.
Then he in heaviness falls back asleep,
And she on silver tiptoes swiftly goes
And leaves him there to slumber till the peep
Of day shall find him ruddy as a rose. . . . . .
Oh, let no fool despoil the purple fruit,
The god has left his footprint at the root.

Fair Enough

I believe it to be an understatement to declare that Washington, D. C., is not notorious for frank or full expression of opinion on the part of responsible public officials regarding either persons or policies of national importance, except on rare occasions.

This may not truthfully be said of newspaper columnists. Outstanding among the writers is one who deserves, it seems to me, support of a great body of readers in the crusade he is and has been making for some time; a crusade for honesty and decency in government, especially within the ranks of organized labor.

I refer, of course, to Westbrook Pegler.

It is not easy for a newspaper writer to be a reformer. Most writers hesitate to arm themselves for muck-raking. There's a good alibi for most writers to avoid any clearance-out-of-the cesspool. However, let us be clear in our thinking. Pegler is not a reformer as we have hitherto known the type.

Pegler is worthy of support. He has been fighting a lone and long fight, and, I am ashamed to say, without the backing of those of us who should be immediately behind him. I used to read his articles and smile at his lingual assaults. Later, I used to chuckle at his manhandling of corrupt officials in and outside of the ranks of the unioneers. In recent times I have learned to admire his fearlessness, respect his honesty and to understand his real worth to our generation in these troublous times.

I warn those of my readers who look down their noses at Pegler that they are making a great mistake. Westbrook Pegler is an adversary to be reckoned with by any man, however high his station, if that man is venal or possesses only a veneer of honesty in his make-up.

And those purists of the English language had better restrain their "what-can-you-expect" shrugs and their eyebrow lifting. Rather, if they are brash enough to cross his path, they had better sharpen their lances and line their shields; for Mr. Pegler is an artist in the use of words. He can and does, upon occasion, brighten the day for me with a perfection of phrase and precision of meaning that are far beyond my powers o' expression. Yes, he does handle the vernacular freely and with full-arm swing; but he selects his tools so carefully that the smallest of them become as a mighty weapon of war.

Remember, too, his facts are founded on something deep-rooted. He is a student well versed in the laws of libel and any one who questions his statements of fact had better be equally well armed. The art of jiu-jitsu in debate is well known to Pegler.

Thank you for affording your mounting list of readers the opportunity to read what Pegler thinks is "Fair Enough."

Labor's Stranglehold

In his message to the New England Governors and the leaders in industry and business, President Roosevelt said: "As a nation of free men we are engaged in a great effort to build our defenses against those who threaten our way of life."

I would like to remind Mr. President that the hold which American labor leaders are acquiring and their threat to our way of life are fast, fast approaching Hitler's stranglehold, while our President has done nothing to check this. Shame on him! Time has been lost which can never be found again.

Preventive Medicine

May I comment upon a topic in your editorial, "Community Chest?"

You say, "After all, charity begins at home. The average citizen . . . will not hesitate to help meet the needs of the poor, sick and the weak and the helpless. In so doing he will help emphasize a custom of democracy by showing a willing concern for the problems of others."

A very sentimental approach and the usual one! It will make a fellow feel very noble to give a little.

But what is the real reason that we must care for the poor? And incidentally the poor is a variable element. Poor today and rich tomorrow, especially in America. When we help "the poor, sick and weak" we are not "showing concern for the problems of others." We are obliged to try to keep the poor as healthy as possible, for it is among the poor who cannot care for themselves properly at the time, that diseases brood and spread upward. The temporary upper strata are not inured to these ailments and are hard hit, especially by skin diseases and respiratory troubles. Helping the poor is in the nature of preventive medicine for the rest of us.

And not exactly apropos of this thesis but near to my heart is another question. How much to give? The Community Chest suggests a day's salary. Let this be a day's and not the salary of the days we are actually on duty.

Salaries must be figured by the year, no matter how they are paid. Whether per diem, in 10 or 12 installment, 365 must be the divisor in computation and not the actual days one is on duty. After all, expenses go on every day in the year, and it has been some time since the ravens have fed any of us on Saturdays or Sundays or during the summer months.

To Raise Funds

A suggestion has been made that merchants attach a Federal 1-cent stamp to packages carried by the customer. This seems a painless manner of raising war funds since the merchant has already received his delivery fee in the selling price of the article. It would amount to a great sum of money in a year.

Labor Maxim

In the course of a Sunday stroll through your fair city I encountered the Samuel Gompers monument at Massachusetts and Tenth. The following sentence in one of the inscriptions, evidently spoken to a labor organization, has peculiar force in these days:

"When we have blundered into trying to force a policy or a decision, even though wise and right, we have impeded, if not interrupted, the realization of our own aims."

Mothers' Faith

The mothers of American lads still have faith that their President, whom they helped to elect, will keep his promise not to send our boys to Africa or other foreign soil. Certainly not until the allied nations have exhausted their own resources in man power, which assuredly they have not done so far. The women of America, who have closely followed our great President, are looking for his sympathetic understanding in this matter, and we feel our hope shall not be in vain.

AMY WARREN.

Washington, Nov. 17.

Ambiguous Position

The irreconcilable conflict of the United States with the law of nations will continue to contribute to the international political chaos pending a definition by our Government of the legal position of America since our departure from neutrality.

That we are in the war is recognized by the British government, such being the signification of Churchill's phrase, "our common enemy," in his most recent denunciation of Germany. England is prohibited by the most solemn decisions of British courts, by the history of her reprisals against nations deviating from the law, and by her vital interests the earth round from regarding the abandonment of neutrality by America as less than war.

England could not assent, except to endanger the British Empire forever, that a nullification of the law of neutrality is permissible for any reason, and must maintain that the legal resort, if a nation be challenged, is war.

By adjudications of the British courts, acceptance by a neutral of a combatant convoy is constructive resistance to a right of war, and such vessels can legally be fought as enemy craft for the reason that they so violate neutrality. Such an act constitutes a measure of intervention in the war and a rule of law is that the neutral so situated loses his legal remedy. The fact that the United States is participating in a public war cannot be confuted.

Since Congress ignores the only legal justification of our intervention in the war which would not compromise our profession of neutrality, i. e., the assertion of a nation's social duty to defeat the lawlessness of an international insurrectionist regime, thus acting for the permanent supreme good of the complete community of nations, America must be deemed by foreign governments to be presuming by reason of our irresistible force to vitiate the recognized law or to be legally at war. As the United States Supreme Court would assert to wage war is lawful, to do an unneutral act is unlawful.

EDWARD CONN.

Washington, Nov. 16.

Neutral Restrictions

The impression prevails in some quarters, I think, that the Neutrality Act, as recently amended, permits and authorizes the sending of American ships through combat zones to belligerent ports, under our own flag, protected by our own guns. Presumably that is what we are going to try to do—else why all the fuss? Germany has said what she will do if we try it. Looks like quite a scrap in the offing.

Aside from the better than even chance that we would lose ships and men in such adventure, there is another—and possibly greater—question involved. Have we, under international law, any right (as a professed "neutral") to attempt delivery of munitions of war to a belligerent?

The question is academic. We have not. Such ships would be carrying contraband of war, and the Nazis would have a perfect right to sink them.

It may be said, as against the brutal powers with which civilization is now contending, technical rights are no longer important. They may prove very important, if not decisive of this world contest—important to Japan in deciding her obligations to the Axis under the tri-party treaty; important to our South American friends in determining who really was the aggressor; important, perhaps, in its effect upon the German people themselves, who would feel that they were unjustly—if indirectly—attacked by a professed "neutral."

Taking it all in all, this would seem like a wonderfully good time to think twice before entering the fight abroad. Think twice—and then not do it.

The Post Impressionist

Little Old Man

I had been working hard of late . . . Doing nothing, principally, which, in the opinion of many, is the hardest work of all. I felt that I should occupy myself somehow, so decided to spend this afternoon at Hav-sum-gras. If there is any one thing that will jerk you out of the doldrums, and in a hurry, a Post Meridian at the races is it.

. . . Having bought a ticket and other pertinent paraphernalia, I climbed into the bus. It was crowded, and I had a time to find me a seat. I finally spotted one at the rear end, and sat down (come to think of it, I could not have done much else than sit down).

As my gaze roamed around the inclosure of the bus, I began to be conscious of the person seated next to me. I looked out of the corner of my eye and saw a little old man, wizen-faced and wizen-bodied. He seemed to be in a trance. He was studying a form sheet, and making figures with a pencil along the margin. He would suddenly close his eyes, shake his head, and mutter something under his breath. He either was working out a mathematical formula, or endeavoring to pull a winner out of the land of the mystics. It made me slightly uneasy.

" . . . Blood-lines," the little old man was saying, "blood-lines. Nothing but blood-lines. That is the answer and not a thing else . . ."

I mumbled something about not quite understanding.

"My boy, have you ever studied the history of the thoroughbred?" He pronounced the words as "thtudied" and "hiththory," and his upper or lower teeth were evidently missing.

I said I had not, to any extent, studied the history of the thoroughbred.

"Most interesting . . . utterly fascinating," he went on. "It has been generally supposed, by the public that the origin of the thoroughbred is embodied entirely in the Arabian horse——"

"Yes," I said, "I always believed that. It seems to make horse-sense."

He ignored my feebly humorous essay, and continued . . . "but it is not by any means the case. If you look up the pedigree of Eclipse, for instance, the great English horse of 1764 and thereabouts, you will find English mares in his sequence. These English dams were not all Arabian by a long shot, because Henry VIII, 150 years before, had imported Spanish and Italian thoroughbreds, which later became known as the Royal Stud, and the ancestors of these same dams."

"All Portuguese to me," I said gaily.

"My, my," he muttered. "Young man, I wonder at your ignorance . . . You must know that the modern racehorse stems from three thoroughbreds, of the 1700s—Matchem, King Herod . . . and Eclipse. Every horse entered in here today"—he held up the racing form—"can trace its family tree back to any one, or probably all three of those original sires. Not many human beings can go back that far."

It struck me as rather odd, comparing a human being with a horse, even in the common matter of blood lines, but I let it pass. As a matter of fact the 'bus stopped suddenly, which automatically changed the subject. It stopped so suddenly that, as I shot forward, I narrowly missed the man's head in front of me. And I was just able to catch hold of the little old man, as he was about to sail over the head of the person in front of him . . . It was all very interesting, and after the bus-driver had had his pungent say concerning the convolutions, or gyrations, of the present crop of automobile-driver, things settled down again. In the nature of a drawing-out process, I turned to my companion and said, "You must have seen considerable racing in your horse-race wanderings."

"Yes," he said, ". . . seen plenty. Watched Dry Monopole win the first Brooklyn Handicap back in '87 by a nose at a mile and a quarter . . . Saw Salvator beat Tenny in a match race at Coney Island. I remember well the match race between Keene's Domino and Croker's Dobbin. It was a dead heat, the deadest heat you ever heard of . . . I've seen 'em all run—Ben Brush, Henry of Navarre, Hamburg (and he was no hamburger), Ethelbert, Hamburg Belle, Broomstick, Waterboy and all the rest. Saw Irish Lad, win the Brooklyn Handicap in 1903, and Africander, a superior mudder, the Saratoga Handicap in the same year . . . Have seen Colin, Exterminator, Sysonby, Man o' War—and now Alsab—"

"By the way," I cut in, "this little Alsab. Quite a horse, isn't he? Suppose he's a throw-back from somewhere?"

"Of course he is. He's a throw-back from Colin, his great-grandsire . . . Colin never lost a race; ran 15 or 16. Only horse in America ever to do that . . . If this little Alsab develops—and he may not—he will be one of the greats. No doubt about that."

The old boy seemed to have much exact knowledge about the horse, so I asked him the animal's origin.

"Well, you'll probably be surprised to know that 40 million years ago, a horse was about the size of a fox-terrier. It has taken him all this time to get to his present size."

I was delighted to hear all this, and begged him to carry on. He did.

"There's one horse, incidentally, that I haven't mentioned . . . Phar Lap. Possibly the greatest horse of all time. He won close to $340,000, which puts him among the world's large money-winners. He had speed and stamina. He could run any distance, 6 furlongs or 3 miles, and win. He was gentle as a lamb, and intelligent . . . In a 2¼-mile race in Australia in the early 1930s, Phar Lap traveled the first 6 furlongs in 1:12⅘, and the full distance in 3:49⅕ . . . He died at Agua Caliente under peculiar circumstances . . . Had St. Simon blood on one side and Bend Or on the other . . . Wonderful horse . . ."

The bus rumbled into the track inclosure, and the occupants scrambled out.

"Good luck, my boy," said my fellow-passenger.

"Good luck to you, old-timer," I answered heartily, and added, "How old did you say you were?"

"Seventy-nine next March," replied the little old man, with a grin, as he disappeared in the crowd.

I walked through the gate and on toward the grandstand in a thoughtful mood, wondering what I would be doing at 79.

Army Assignment

By Ernest Lindley.

To Sub For Naval And Air Forces

THE NEW SIX and three-quarter billion dollar War Department appropriation request is a step toward doubling the arms production program. The increase will not be spread evenly over the whole program. The raw materials and productive facilities are not available. Moreover, it is by no means certain that the output of every type of weapon will ever need to be doubled. As the President indicated several weeks ago, the step-up will be selective. First attention will be given to the war implements, such as tanks, which the European war has shown to be of paramount importance.

LINDLEY

This money, on top of previous appropriations, will equip an Army of two million men, the War Department explains. Actually, production for our Army and for lend-lease is now so mixed up together that in many lines the division between what is to go to our Army and what is to go to the British and Russians is only a matter of bookkeeping. If lend-lease were suddenly cut off, we would have, or could produce, much more of certain items than would be needed by an Army of two million men.

FOR MONTHS there have been waves of rumors that the War Department was preparing to enlist and equip an Army of four, five, seven, or ten million men. In the sense that calculations are made, or should be, for all contingencies, these rumors are true. But the War Department has now reasserted that the plans under which it is now operating do not contemplate an Army of more than two million men. This is indicated also by the amount requested for pay and sustenance in the new bill. It will take care of an Army of about 1,740,000 men—an increase of about 150,000. The increase is due chiefly to the rising need for troops to garrison outlying bases.

The assignment which the army now has is essentially that given to it 18 months ago when France fell, and the emergency national defense program was started. Selective service was adopted, and the National Guard called out, chiefly as a hedge against the loss of the British fleet. The enlarged army was, in major part, a substitute for the second-ocean navy and great air force we had not yet built. In brief, the army set out to provide the special troops needed to garrison bases, plus a mobile striking force to deal with an invader of the Western Hemisphere.

With the passage of time, the bases to be garrisoned have increased in number, and the more distant ones, such as Iceland, Hawaii and the Philippines, have required forces strong enough to deal with major attempts at invasion. This has added to the army's load, and with the effort to build up an immense air force accounts for the gradual growth of the total number of officers and enlisted men in service.

FROM the total number of men in service must be subtracted those in only partly-trained units, and new men undergoing preliminary training before being assigned to units. An army of two million men does not mean that many are ready to fight at the drop of a hat. However, the Army has a mobile striking force—small on the scale of the Russo-German war, but well-equipped and of growing strength, which could be used outside the United States and its possessions and the Western Hemisphere.

If a state of war is declared with the Axis or Japan, the Army's plan will be revised accordingly. But a war declaration would not necessarily be followed by a large increase in the Army. While Russians and Britons who are willing to fight remain unequipped or incompletely equipped, there would be little sense in sending a large American expeditionary force to Europe. Lack of shipping would prevent it, in any case, for a long time to come. The available shipping can be used more economically to carry weapons and other critical items to the fighting men who are already at the front, or near it, and can obtain other supplies at home. Air forces, and a limited number of ground troops for effect on morale or to take and hold a specific sector, such as West Africa, might be sent earlier.

IN THE PRESENT strategy of the anti-Axis group, our role is to provide supplies, to assist in transporting them safely across the oceans, and to give technical assistance. As the picture is viewed in high circles, a collapse in Russia would be far more likely to alter this role than would anything said or done in the United States. If Russia should fall—which our top men consider extremely improbable—the enlargement of the American Army well beyond two million men probably would soon follow.

In the Far East our role brings us closer to the front line of action. But even here, the main demand on us is for sea and air power. There are still plenty of partly trained but incompletely equipped troops in the Far East, especially China, to keep the Japanese army busy.

Fair Enough

The Coal Strike

MOST OF US seem determined to deceive ourselves on the fundamental issue in the coal strike by confusing the case with considerations of national defense.

That is easily the most pompous and balled-up sentence that has been published in this country outside the Nation and the New Republic since the turn of the century, but I have phrased it backward and both ways against the middle and it makes no better sense. Nevertheless, it is just what I mean.

The true point is that the union would be just as wrong in this dispute if there were no military emergency. The union is trying to compel men to join a private organization which is much more than a mere labor union, subject to arbitrary taxes and the arbitrary rules and orders of subleaders beholden to a dictator. It is a political organization and a subgovernment or supergovernment of national scope and it is too big and powerful for the laws pertaining to unions. These laws pertaining to unions are few, feeble and old-fashioned and the attempt to deal with such organizations as the miners of the C. I. O. through such laws is like trying to control a fast car with a halter and rope or a roadhog freight truck with an elephant hook.

IF WE SAY that Wrong John Lewis must not do this or that because a military emergency exists we are saying in very plain effect that it would be all right for him to do the same thing in the absence of such an emergency, and that is the big mistake. Even in times of peace Wrong John has no right to bar American citizens from lawful employment for failure to join his union, and if we don't insist on that point in the emergency we plainly threaten the American citizen with such compulsion and, as President Roosevelt has finally reluctantly acknowledged, with a phase of the Hitlerism dictatorship, when peace arrives again.

That is a hell of a prospect to offer American citizens as a lure to sacrifice so that Hitler may be destroyed. Destroy Hitler, we say to our people, and when we have all made the necessary sacrifices for that purpose and vanquished the dictator we will place ourselves under the dictatorial rule of Wrong John Lewis or some other political unioneer.

OUR PEOPLE would not even argue with Lewis or any other unioneer on this and several other points of fundamental right if they were educated in the facts of unionism. And their ignorance of these facts is partly the fault of our press and partly the fault of our politicians in the national field. A good deal of blame lies with the present national Government, too, because debate has been kept down and every attempt to bring bills into Congress for discussion and a vote has been beaten by silent orders from the White House.

The result is that our people are just beginning to realize that unionism is not what they have always carelessly thought it was. It is a huge business and a huge political movement.

In West Virginia right now, Lewis is bigger than the State Government, and is organizing the State employes into C. I. O. unions which means that when the inevitable demand is made for the closed shop, a private organization, ostensibly a labor union, will be demanding a percentage of the wages of all State employes and will require that all employes join the union but will not have to give any account of its political activities or expenditures. It will be a nazified party running an American State in the guise of an organization of free workers, with goons or brown shirts, known as pickets, to enforce its will.

But, in the presence of the emergency which certainly does exist, a quotation from Bill Shirer's Berlin Diary is shockingly pertinent.

On August 5, only last year, Shirer was in France with the armies of the Nazi conqueror and he wrote:

"French coal mines are working again. They were not destroyed by the French this time as in 1914. A photograph in one of the papers shows French miners unloading coal at a pit. Watching over them is a steel-helmeted German soldier with a bayonet. Their Moscow-dominated Communist Party and their unions told them not to work and not to fight when France was free. Now they work under German bayonets."

A Complex Conflict

By Mark Sullivan

Roosevelt, Lewis And The C. I. O.

THE PUBLIC thinks this is just a simple conflict, clean-cut, with two sides. They think that one side is the people and Government of the United States, led and symbolized by President Roosevelt. They think the other side is C. I. O., led by Mr. John L. Lewis.

SULLIVAN

That is the way the public sees it. To enable the public to see it otherwise will be difficult. For the wheels within wheels are as intricate, as subtle and as quietly concealed as anything that ever went on in the most Machiavellian politics of a medieval court.

Let us take it to pieces, examining the simplest part first. There is a real conflict between President Roosevelt as a man and John L. Lewis as a man. This personal conflict is genuine. This detail of the larger conflict is as the public sees it. So let us examine how the personal conflict began, and the nature of it over some five years.

IN 1936, Mr. Lewis made a contribution of some $500,000, out of the treasury of his union, to the campaign fund for reelecting Mr. Roosevelt. That, naturally, created a relation between the two men. But not just the kind of relation you might superficially suppose. True, it was a case in which one man, Mr. Lewis, put the other man, Mr. Roosevelt, under an obligation. That is the way it might work with ordinary men. The ordinary men, thus situated in relation to each other, might become permanently in cahoots, become lifelong friends and allies.

But Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Lewis are not ordinary men. In their different ways they are two of the most unordinary men now upon the face of the earth. While both are unusual, the ways of their respective unusualness are as different as if they belonged to separate species of the animal kingdom. Both have large egos by nature and because of their respective achievements in the remarkable careers they have had. But their egos are utterly different, in the ways they express themselves, and in the kinds of satisfaction they seek.

LEWIS, when he put a President of the United States under obligation to him, undoubtedly felt great satisfaction, not necessarily in a sordid way at all, but rather as a prop to his pompousness. Probably Mr. Lewis did not think so much of benefits to be received, by himself or by his union, as of the addition to his importance. The debt of Mr. Roosevelt to Mr. Lewis could have been paid, to the complete satisfaction of the creditor, by merely and harmlessly flattering Mr. Lewis' self-esteem.

In the case of Mr. Roosevelt, when Mr. Lewis put him under an obligation, he did not become Mr. Lewis' friend. On the contrary, he became Lewis' potential enemy. Mr. Roosevelt's temperament is that which does not like to feel beholden to another, especially if the other is in his own right a personage of considerable size, as Mr. Lewis was and is. Mr. Roosevelt's temperament can be generous and gracious and genuinely friendly—toward all who are of lesser stature than himself. But toward anyone who challenges him, whether by asserting a claim upon him, or having a position approaching rivalry with him, even rivalry in a limited field, like labor politics—about any such, Mr. Roosevelt is uncomfortable. Silently but powerfully, Mr. Roosevelt feels challenge in return.

From the day that Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Lewis came together it was certain that Mr. Lewis would be blusteringly overbearing, that Mr. Roosevelt would be smilingly but subtly resentful; that Mr. Lewis would walk into the White House orotundly vociferating behemothic words; that Mr. Roosevelt would suavely coo like a dove; that Mr. Lewis would brandish a battle-axe; that Mr. Roosevelt would have a sly stiletto in his desk drawer. It was destined by their stars they should become enemies.

IT WILL be objected that Mr. Roosevelt tried to pay his obligation; that he helped Mr. Lewis in the early days of C. I. O. by condoning C. I. O.'s sit-down strikes, and in many other ways.

But that was not the way of it. The whole point, and the key to the present situation, is that Mr. Roosevelt was not helping Mr. Lewis—he was helping C. I. O. Mr. Roosevelt was as much the parent of C. I. O. as Mr. Lewis was. Mr. Lewis organized C. I. O. merely to expand his scope as a labor leader. Mr. Roosevelt fostered C. I. O. as an instrument and embodiment of the New Deal's social and political philosophy.

Today, Mr. Roosevelt will destroy Mr. Lewis if he can, destroy him as a public man and as a labor leader. As between the two, Mr. Roosevelt's objective is to separate Mr. Lewis' labor following from him, to acquire that following for himself. But that Mr. Roosevelt should do anything seriously harmful to C. I. O. as an organization he has constantly fostered is hardly credible. The gestures on the surface may seem to be one thing or another. But if any real harm is done to C. I. O., any effective restraint put upon it, it will be by Congress and public opinion.

If They Meet

Joe—Well, well, I'm certainly thrilled by this meeting, comrade!

F. D. R.—Shush! Not so loud on that comrade stuff!

Joe—But we are comrades aren't we?

F. D. R.—That's the hell of it!

* * * *

Joe—Anyhow, I'm glad to meet you face to face.

F. D. R.—I hope you're not meeting me two-face to face.

* * * *

Joe—Don't mistrust me, Franklin. I'm on the level this time. I've gone straight. I'm 100 per cent honest, I . . .

F. D. R.—Don't shout so; I can hear you!

Joe—Don't you want to know how dependable I am?

F. D. R.—Yes, but the more you emphasize it the more apprehensive it make me.

* * * *

Joe—You must have 100 per cent faith in me.

F. D. R.—100 per cent?

Joe (sheepishly)—Well, I'll settle for 75.

* * * *

F. D. R.—How strange it seems that you and I should be standing here arm in arm.

Joe—You could knock me over with the same feather.

F. D. R. (sharply)—What are you doing?

Joe—Pinching myself to see if it's true.

F. D. R.—How did you make out?

Joe—In the affirr ative!

* * * *

F. D. R.—I wish Adolf could see us this way.

Joe—Don't worry. I'll see that he gets a wet print. The schlemiel!

F. D. R.—I wish you had always thought that of him.

Joe—So do I.

* * * *

F. D. R.—Why did you ever tie up with him in the first place?

Joe—Can't a fellow make a mistake? I never had any use for him. It was just a case where he double-crossed me before I could double-cross him. It's like this: In the art of double-crossing . . .

F. D. R.—Please! You're through with all that now . . . I hope!

Joe—What was that?

F. D. R.—I say you must drop all double-crossing from now on. You mustn't even think of it.

Joe—Not even just a little tiny, weeny thinking?

F. D. R.—Not even that.

Joe—Can't I just taper off gradually instead of dropping the idea all at once?

F. D. R.—No. Remember you're not the man you were six months ago.

Joe—You're telling me!

* * * *

F. D. R.—We must stick together now and defeat Hitler. You have been doing a swell job and I am proud of you. By the way, did you get that billion-dollar loan?

Joe—Did you say loan?

F. D. R.—Well, it's not really a loan.

Joe—O. K. Then I got it!

What Japan Wants

By Barnet Nover

Plain Speaking From Tokyo

ON THE MORROW of Saburo Kurusu's arrival in Washington on what has been described as a "peace" mission, both Premier Tojo and Foreign Minister Togo of Japan made speeches before the Diet in which they discussed Japanese-American relations in belligerent and uncompromising terms.

NOVER

This is diplomacy with a new twist. If the two Japanese officials meant what they said Mr. Kurusu's mission is doomed from the start. If they did not why did they choose this particular moment to let go with all barrels at the United States? Were their saber-rattling utterances intended for Japanese consumption alone? Or were they taking an extreme position purely for bargaining purposes and in the hope of frightening the United States into a speedy settlement with the island empire?

IT HAPPENS that these various possibilities are not mutually exclusive. At one and the same time Gen. Tojo and Mr. Togo were speaking for domestic consumption, trying out a bluff and voicing their real views.

The latter point cannot for a moment be lost to sight. The Japanese premier and foreign minister were only repeating in their speeches of last Monday what a long succession of Japanese statesmen have said, what the Japanese press has constantly pressed home and what the overwhelming majority of the Japanese people fervently believe. What is even more important, the speeches of Gen. Tojo and Mr. Togo were entirely in line with the policy which Japan has steadfastly pursued for a decade and which she will continue to pursue as long as she is not stopped.

IN HIS ADDRESS Gen. Tojo made four specific demands on the United States, Great Britain and the Netherlands. If peace is to be preserved in the Pacific, he indicated, those nations must (1) keep their hands off Japan's "settlement of the conflict with China," (2) lift the economic blockade which has brought Japan's foreign trade to a virtual standstill, (3) promise an end to the "military encirclement" of Japan and (4) restore normal trade relations with that country.

Gen. Tojo was much too modest. He should also have asked for a whopping indemnity from those three countries. The concessions he asks are those which a victor exacts from the vanquished, and he might as well have gone the whole way.

JAPAN, however, is no victor nor can the United States, Great Britain and the Netherlands Indies be regarded as vanquished. On the contrary, the ABCD bloc is powerful and becoming more so, while Japan is suffering from the effects of four years of indecisive war upon which there is now being superimposed the equally debilitating effects of economic sanctions.

One might assume under the circumstances, that Japan would be coming to Washington, London and Batavia hat in hand to ask for favors and be willing, in return, to make real concessions. But the men who rule the destinies of Dai Nippon are not prepared to admit that their ambitions and their policies have brought their nation to the verge of ruin. To do so would be fatal to the position which, from the very beginning of Japan as a modern nation and for centuries before that, they have occupied there. The very fact that Gen. Tojo, an active military leader, heads the present government of Japan indicates that the Japanese militarists have never for a moment been prepared to shoulder the blame for their nation's present plight.

Somebody else has always been responsible. Inside Japan they blame the civilian leaders; externally the fault lies with those nations which, in Foreign Minister Tojo's phrase, have failed to understand "Japan's natural requirements and her position in East Asia" and have failed to "consider the situation as it exists there in the light of realities."

Mr. Togo portrayed Japanese foreign policy in a light never seen on sea or land except, possibly, in Germany, whose ambitions so closely resemble those of Japan.

He portrayed the war in China as "military operations for the construction of a new order in East Asia," and the "establishment of peace in East Asia based on justice." He lauded Japan as a "stabilizing force" in the world. And he blamed the United States and the nations cooperating with this country in the Pacific for having created the existing state of tension in that area and the drift toward war.

"There is," he said, "a limit to our conciliatory attitude." In other words, patient Japan is losing her patience. If peace is to be preserved in the Pacific the United States must see the light regarding Japan's truly noble intentions and act accordingly.

ON THE BASIS of these speeches nothing can be expected of the Kurusu mission. Undoubtedly Japan would be willing, for tactical reasons, to make minor concessions to the United States in order to secure a relaxation of the embargo that is now strangling the island empire. And since, with each passing day and week, the noose around Japan grows tighter it is understandable why Tokyo is trying to intimidate this Nation into a speedy settlement.

But whatever the progress of the talks between Mr. Kurusu and American statesmen, the one certainty is that no fundamental settlement between the two nations is possible. What Hitler said of Germany's relations with the Western democracies can be said of Japanese-American relations today. Two worlds are in conflict. One or the other must break asunder. A showdown may be postponed. It cannot be averted.

French Terrorists Captured In Slaying Of Nazi Officers

By Lansing Warren

Copyright by New York Times

Vichy, Nov. 18.—Several members of a terrorist band charged with responsibility for the killings of German officers in Nantes and Bordeaux have been arrested, according to a notice published today in Paris.

This notice gives a description of Gilbert Andre Brulstein, one of the leaders who is said to be still at liberty.

The capture of the persons charged with the slayings can have far-reaching effects since it has been often repeated that the failure of the French population to cooperate in running down the aggressors has been one of the obstacles in the way of progress in the pending Franco-German negotiations.

There have been hints that releases of prisoners, easement of the line of demarcation, and even the institution of those conditions which Marshal Petain has repeatedly said must precede all thought of his return to Paris, could be facilitated by an atmosphere of cooperation with regard to the safety of the troops of occupation.

It has been intimated recently that the information which led to the arrests was furnished by French citizens. Several prisoners in German camps, relatives of those who have aided the police investigators, have been released, according to official announcements. The notice published today says that the husband, brother, relative or friend of the persons giving information leading to the capture of Bruistein can be released in addition to payment of the money reward.

It is known here that arrests in this inquiry were made as early as November 6 but they could not be revealed for fear of hampering the inquiry.

The notice says:

"Following incidents of various sorts committed for a few months past and whose consequences have been heavy on the French population the Paris police has brought all its activity to bear on the hunting down of those guilty. Several persons have at present been arrested and an arsenal of the terrorists has been discovered and seized in the course of raids effected.

"These individuals have admitted having participated in sabotage of railroads in different factories in Paris and the Paris region and to having set fire to harvests. They have thus caused damages valued at several tens of millions of francs to farmers and deprived the population of priceless foodstuffs on the verge of winter.

"However, one of the leaders, an exceptionally dangerous man, has escaped and is actively sought by police and gendarmery. He is Gilbert Andre Brulstein, born March 20, 1919, in Paris."

The notice gives a detailed description of Brulstein and concludes with mention of the money reward and the possibility for informers to obtain the release of their relatives who are war prisoners.

Among those now under arrest are said to be two young Communists, a Spaniard, and another suspect who was described as a Polish Jew.

The Gallup Poll

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 18.—New evidence to show that such adverse criticism of labor unionism as exists on the part of the public today arises largely from the conduct of union labor leaders is revealed in a Nationwide poll just completed by the Institute.

The great majority of American voters believe every worker should have the right to join a union for his own economic protection. In fact, the principle of collective bargaining has been consistently indorsed by more than two-thirds of voters in every Institute poll on the issue in the last five years, including the latest poll only a fortnight ago. At the same time, recent studies have indicated that a large majority (68 per cent) feel that labor union leaders—as distinguished from the rank and file of union members—are not doing all they should to help the national defense production program.

The latest poll on labor leadership was conducted during the period of November 7-14, when the issue of the captive coal mine strike was boiling to a crisis. A cross-section of the voting population throughout the country was asked the simple question:

"What is your opinion of John L. Lewis?"

All replies were purely spontaneous and were recorded verbatim by interviewers working on behalf of the Institute.

An analysis of the opinions recorded indicates that a large proportion of voters—more than 8 in every 10—have formed very definite views one way or the other about Mr. Lewis. A great many, particularly in the lower income groups, described him as fearless, honest and a good organizer. The majority of opinions, however, were unfavorable, as the following tabulation indicates:

14% Expressed Opinions Favorable to Lewis
70% Expressed Opinions Unfavorable
16% Were Undecided or Gave No Answer

Those who sympathize with Mr. Lewis say, chiefly, that he has done a great deal to improve the lot of the working man, that his past record is good, that he stands head and shoulders above anyone else in his ability as a labor organizer. This point of view is reflected in such comments as:

"Lewis is taking care of his organization." "He's the miners' friend." "He's a fearless fighter for the working man."

Some of these who sympathize with him expressed the belief that "He may have overstepped himself," but that this nevertheless did not affect their basic opinion of the man.

Among the group who expressed unfavorable opinions the chief arguments were that Mr. Lewis has misused his power and perverted it to selfish ends, that he is "stubborn," "unreasonable" and "unpatriotic;" that his tactics have "hurt, not helped the working man;" that he should cooperate more with President Roosevelt," and that, in calling the original coal mine strike, he "put his own interests above the interests of the country."

A Detroit voter expressed the views of many when he told Interviewer George S. Bush: "I think he has surrendered the Nation's interest to his personal ambitions."

Others were more outspoken, as for example, one voter who said: "That bird is trying to wreck the country." Others called him a "radical" and a "scoundrel."

Some were so infuriated by Lewis' tactics that they refused even to speak about him. A dairy farmer in Shelburne, Vt., for example, when asked his opinion of Mr. Lewis shot back curtly:

"I wasn't brought up to swear."

Two-Way Radio For Police Here May Be Delayed

Reports from Washington must wait indefinitely for its long-planned two-way police radio system because of priority demands on equipment were scouted yesterday by District Purchasing Officer Roland Brennan.

He said priority ratings established on certain materials under the national defense program would not affect the District's order for new radios.

The two-way radio sets, he said, have been ordered under contract from a New York firm for 52 cars. The concern, Brennan reported, is now prepared to ship 13 sets and have available the rest of the units as soon as trade-in exchanges have been made on 39 old cars.

Brennan indicated that Washington would have two-way police radio service within another month.

Nazi Army Defeat Linked to Peace

By Lucia Giddens

Formulas for the defeat of Hitler were advanced by newspapermen who have been European correspondents, at the luncheon of the Women's National Press Club yesterday at the Willard Hotel.

Richard Hottelet, of the United Press, and Joe Harsch, of the Christian Science Monitor, agreed that a concrete defeat on the field of battle would be necessary to start the crumpling of Germany's resistance.

"The German people are morally insecure" without reserves to fall back on in time of stress, Hottelet said. "They can dish it out but they can't take it.

"The German people as a whole are behind Hitler because they fear if they lose, the treaty will be a worse Versailles," he pointed out.

"If German armies were dealt a concrete blow on the field of battle, and shot and mutilated Germans began to pour back into Germany . . . when an air force can go over Germany and carry out a systematic campaign of bombing, then the German people will look at each other and say 'we're not getting anywhere'," Hottelet said.

The key to the defeat of Germany is to change the psychology of the people, to get them to associate privation with militarism, Harsch said.

"The minute Germany is defeated, she should be fed," he said. She should be shown a plan for a postwar world in which the German people can be happy, and should be shown that the German people have less to be afraid of in defeat than in militarism, Harsch said.

Clifford Prevost On Program

Clifford Prevost, of the Detroit Free Press, who was British born but is now an American citizen, climaxed his account of a recent trip to England by saying that if the war is being fought to save the British way of life "it isn't worth one drop of American blood."

He prefaced this remark by saying that members of the upper classes had told him that after the war they would push the workers "back where they belong." He said he had thought that England's class system was being disrupted by the war, until he encountered such attitudes.

Harsch said that "the British way of life has nothing to do with this war," but that it will determine whether Germany or the United States will be the dominant power in the world.

"We are the only power that can thwart Germany's dream of the world for the Germans," he said. "If we were removed from the picture, England would capitulate and the conquered countries would make peace with Hitler."

Raymond Clapper Also Speaker

Raymond Clapper, Scripps-Howard columnist, who recently returned from London, pointed out how British management and labor have reached an agreement "in which both gave up something."

"Labor gave up the right to strike, and management gave up the right to fire," he said. Pointing out that there had been no nation-wide strikes in Britain's defense effort, he described the small spasmodic strikes in which groups of disgruntled men stayed away for a few days and then came back to work.

William L. Batt, director of materials, Office of Production Management, said he returned from Russia convinced of the importance of sending "vital materials" to that country.

He confessed that there was a letter in OPM files, written some time ago, in which he had said he thought then it would be a mistake to send such materials there.

"I came back, working to get those materials to Russia," he said, after having seen to what "good use" Russia is putting materials.

Paul H. Appleby, Undersecretary of Agriculture, was asked whether he thought the United States should feed the subject countries under Hitler. Giving his personal opinion, he said "I think not at the present time," in the belief that indirectly at least Hitler would gain from such a move.

Thomas Kernan, author of "France on Berlin Time," who was director of Paris Vogue magazine when Germany occupied France, told of Germany's immediate inroads on the press.

Mrs. Esther Van Wagoner Tufty, president of the club, who has just returned from South Carolina, where she was an observer at the Army maneuvers, presided at the luncheon.

'Y. W.' to Study Room Problem

Problems of keeping pace with an average of 1000 girls a month who come to the Y. W. C. A. seeking rooms will be discussed at the monthly meeting of the room registry committee at 1 p. m. today.

Mrs. Frank W. Ballou, wife of the superintendent of schools of the District and for the last six years chairman of the room registry committee, will preside at the meeting which follows a noon luncheon.

Although always a permanent part of the functions of the Y. W. C. A., the committee has assumed a new importance with the influx of defense workers into Washington, and its work has more than doubled in scope. The members of the committee make a personal inspection of and file a written report on all rooms which are added to the Y. W. C. A. approved list, which now includes more than 1100 homes. Their volunteer work makes possible the placement work of the professional staff, which is headed by Miss Florence Hillengas. During the summer months the committee was also assisted by members of the Central Volunteer Bureau.

Members of the committee are Mrs. F. W. Ballou, Mrs. W. E. Emley, Mrs. Walter Ward, Mrs. G. B. Woods, Mrs. S. R. Brooks, Mrs. Oscar Berry, Mrs. J. T. Cook, Mrs. Vick Carlson, Mrs. E. Dickinson, Mrs. Alba Edwards, Mrs. J. Greear, Mrs. LeRoy Hyde, Mrs. R. L. Hiner, Mrs. George Holman, Mrs. J. W. Irwin, Mrs. T. A. Kraabel, Mrs. C. C. Jacobsen, Mrs. F. Kelly, Mrs. R. L. Turkey Hopes Britain Wins, Dr. Fisher Tells Club Women

"Turkey does not want Germany to win because she realizes that her own security depends on a British victory. Turkey does not want to fight but will fight if anyone attacks her."

Thus Dr. Sydney N. Fisher, of Ohio State University faculty, summed up Turkey's present position in his address yesterday in the Near East Lecture Series at the Shoreham Hotel.

"It is no secret that Turkey is a nonbelligerent ally of England and is not overly cordial toward Germany," he pointed out.

"A short time ago Dr. Clodius was in Turkey on an ecomonic mission and an agreement was reached between Germany and Turkey. But if this is examined closely, it will be found that it favors Turkey and most of the clauses to the advantage of Germany have catches in them. For example, Germany gets no chrome ore in 1942 and 1943 until she has delivered equivalent values in guns and tanks in advance.

"The whole situation can be illustrated by the story told of the farewell banquet tendered to Dr. Clodius before he left Ankara. As a last number, the orchestra played 'We Can't Give You Anything But Love, Baby.' They might have added, too, that they had very little of that to spare for him," Dr. Fisher said.

Dr. Fisher, who was formerly on the faculty of Robert College in Turkey, pointed out that "some years ago when trade and commerce were at a low point, a barter agreement was signed with Germany. Within a short time, however, the disadvantages of this treaty became apparent. The government and banks lost money and merchants found their markets dislocated. Upon the remembrance of being dragged into the first World War and then let down by Germany was added this second score.

"Germans became quite unpopular in Turkey and Goebbels, when he came to Turkey for his health, had his baggage searched and the film in his camera destroyed. Recently a fellow American, who looks quite German, had to ask for police protection while traveling in Asia Minor.

"At the present moment Turkey is collaborating in every way with England and I believe they have confidence in each other," Dr. Fisher said.

The speaker traced the history of Turkey, and discussed the transformation which Mustafa Kamal Ataturk made in the country.

Among the most revolutionary accomplishments of the Turkish republic is "the transformation of the position of women," Dr. Fisher said.

"The abolition of the harem, the end of polygamy, the discarding of the veil, and equal rights for women have been most significant," and the beneficial results of these steps are still to come. "A whole new generation is growing up in which the mothers are educated, and they in turn will hold a great influence on the next. Woman is now free to express herself, and the evils of repressed spirits are diminishing. The effects of this liberation are limitless," he added.

Dr. Fisher was introduced by Dr. Livingston Wright, who was formerly president of Robert College. A group which had luncheon together after the lecture included Dr. Fisher, Mrs. Wright, Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, Mrs. William C. Johnstone, Mrs. Helen Montfort Moodie and Mrs. Raymond Clapper, chairman of the lecture series which draws an attendance of approximately 800 clubwomen.

Build Home By FHA Loan

SO YOU'D LOVE to own your own home—but John's reluctant? If John fears the cost, your best persuader is the many charming low-cost homes built of late years.

Loans insured by the Federal Housing Administration made it easy to buy them. Only 1 per cent down payment is required, $400 on a $4,000 home. But if John still suspects a joker, these questions and answers may convince him.

Q. I understand that you must make monthly payments on an FHA loan; what do these cover?

A. The monthly payment—which would be, for instance, $20.90 on a $3600 loan—includes interest, retirement of principal and FHA's insurance premium. In other words, you pay off your loan like rent—own your house, free and clear, after 25 years.

Q. Can you buy a sturdily constructed house at low cost?

A. The house in mind is of the best construction, brick, and cost less than $35 a month.

Q. I want to be sure of enough closets, how many should I have?

A. FHA requires one for each bedroom, one each for linen, coats, cleaning equipment.

Our 40-page booklet, "Low-Cost Homes—Planning, Financing, Building," explains FHA financing; describes sound and economical construction, wiring, heating, insulation. Has photographs and plans of 29 model homes.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "Low-Cost Homes—Planning, Financing, Building," to the NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Restoration Walnut

Restoration describes th period following the Cromwellian era, dated by the restoration of Charles II in 1660 and ending with the Bloodless Revolution in 1688. It includes the beginning of the vogue for walnut and marked a throwing off of all the Puritanical ideas introduced by Cromwell. Furniture during this period still retained its straight rectangular structure, but it was softened by carving, ornamental stretchers, spiral turning, curves and scrolls, crowns and crests, French and Flemish influences.

Mary Haworth's Mail

College Girl's Off-Again-On-Again Romance Hits Snag When Unpredictable Suitor Ignores Three of Her Letters in a Row; What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl of 20. For two years I have been going, not steadily and on a purely friendly basis, with a boy whose family lives near mine. I am definitely not in love with him, although I have tried to be. All last year he (let's call him Tom) raved to me about a certain boy he wanted me to know. In May, we met on a party, and while we were not alone during the whole evening, we knew that we were mutually attracted.

He doesn't have much money and is working his way through school. We had a date the following Saturday night and he gave me his ring—a good one—insisting that I keep it. I was going away to summer school and on our last date, we confessed our love for each other, and parted promising to write each other once a week. I was to be gone for 10 weeks, and because I was lonesome to see someone from home, I invited him to a school dance. He never replied, and six weeks later, when I was home for a week-end visit, I heard through Tom that he was going steady with another girl.

But when I got back to summer school, I had a letter from him, stating that everything he had said in the past still held true. I was dazed. I didn't know what to make of it. The first night I was home, after summer school closed, I saw him and Tom, who told me conflicting stories. I didn't know which to believe, but I wouldn't date him the whole week following.

Then, because he telephoned every night, I finally relented and gave him a date. And what did he do but break the date the following afternoon! I told him, when he called, that I had been expecting him to break it. He didn't call again until after I had a date with Tom, who said there had been some misunderstanding. And apparently Tom spoke to him, too, because he telephoned again, as sweet as ever.

At this point, mother put her foot down and forbade me to date him. The time was coming for me to enter college, and she said I could choose between dating him and going to college. She knew I planned on going to college—and she felt that strongly about it! She isn't old fashioned. She is as modern as I am. But she didn't want me getting upset about one boy. I was so miserable, not dating him, that I finally decided to have a serious talk with her, explaining how much I cared. When she saw how serious I was, she gave in and said I could see him. But I have not heard from him since that talk—which took place just before I entered college—although I have written him three letters.

The second note I wrote him was to say I would be home the following weekend, bringing a friend, and I wanted him to get her a date and let me know. He didn't reply, and after that weekend I was so furious that I wrote telling him in no uncertain terms "where to get off." I wrote in sheer exasperation and didn't mean a word of it. But I am afraid the damage is done.

Now, I am going home for the Thanksgiving holidays and I want to clear up the mess, if I can. Tom and he are "best friends," and I am sure Tom loves me, although he has never said so—as he knows I want his companionship only as a friend. I still have the other boy's ring, which I offered several times to return; and he wouldn't take it. Once, we actually talked seriously of getting married, in about three years. So I can't for the life of me understand his behavior.

Do you think I should try to forget him? Or should I try to patch things up and get him back? If so, how? Please advise me before Thanksgiving—as there is no telling what could be accomplished during the holidays.
Sincerely, BEWILDERED.

Case of Two Egoists Contending for Power

DEAR BEWILDERED: This romance has gone to pot, and you may as well face that fact. But take consolation from my absolute assurance that you haven't lost a thing worth mourning over. You've been chasing a dream; not coping with a reality. That sense of exciting secret awareness which you and your Lothario felt at first meeting, and assumed to be "mutual attraction," did not stem from any spontanous discovery of real rapport. It was purely and simply the result of Tom's having "raved" for months to each of you about the other.

And I daresay that each of you was more importantly self-conscious than genuinely smitten with the other, immediately following the introduction. Each of you was out to "make a hit;" and, indeed, to make a lightning conquest of the other, if possible. Tom's eyes on you probably heightened the tension felt, and soon you were plunged into a "game of hearts"—but in a spirit of ego assertiveness, of desire to dominate, rather than in a mood of tremulous deference, such as characterizes real love's dawning.

It is possible the boy "planted" his ring with you, on his first date with you following the introduction, just to prove to himself—and possibly to Tom—that he could do it. Not that he would have done so with malice aforethought, of course. He might have been completely unaware of his "motivation"—except to take a secretly swaggering pride in his achievement. And it is equally possible that you accepted the ring in much the same spirit of braggadocio—and again more or less unawarely, of course.

I should guess, furthermore, that the romantic duelling began to lose its piquant flavor for the boy, and the situation began to slip out of hand, for you, when you took the initiative in trying to make dates—as in the instance of immediately inviting him to a school dance. And I can imagine that where you really gummed the works—not that it matters, since the whole business was a flash-in-the-pan—was in talking too freely to good old go-between Tom, about his friend's uncivil, screw-loose behavior and its increasingly disturbing effects upon yourself. I suppose Tom artlessly spilled the beans, concerning your volubly expressed viewpoint, every time he talked with his friend; and probably earnestly expatiated on your character, disposition, idiosyncracies, etc., etc., at such length in these bull sessions that you lost all "mystery of personality" for your new beau."

Tom is in love with you, one can hardly picture him trying to promote a sentimental idyll between his best friend and you. On the contrary, it is more likely—since "all's fair in love and war"—that he would incline to tell each of you such truths about the other as would tend to do more harm than good. But if such is the case, don't blame him. Blame yourself for failing to keep a still tongue in your head.

As for what to do about the chap, it is flagrantly obvious that you should "forget" him. Since he not only blithely ignored your departure for college, but turned a deaf ear to your subsequent three separate and distinct communications as well, you would be making all kinds of a fool of yourself in trying to "patch things up and get him back." My advice to you is to mail him his ring, in time for him to receive it before you arrive home for the holidays. Send it back to him without a word of explanation—and never discuss the gesture with Tom. Let them get together and make of it what they will, but without any help from you.

Don't let yourself be talked into promising him any more dates. Tell him sweetly, if he asks, "Never again for me, my lad. I know you. You're not my type. A little of this strong-and-silent man stuff is all right, but too much is too much, if you know what I mean." And don't let yourself be drawn into any conversational analyses of your reasons for sending back his ring and cutting him off your calling list—either over the telephone or at parties, supposing you meet him out and around. Give him the cold shoulder, the disinterested eye, the dreamy silence treatment—if any. Get out and have fun, and grow up into forgetfulness of him. His attitude toward you, as described, has been too consistently boorish to be condoned. And you will appreciate that fact, one day, after you have met the man you were meant to love, and to be loved by. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Peruvian Exhibit Excites Interest

A recent exhibition of old Peruvian furniture included some lovely pieces in which one could see the influence of English, Dutch and French fasions of the eighteenth century—in Spanish colonial translation.

In addition to the piece obviously European in heritage, there was an intricate poster bed, rather Moorish in feeling but of Indian craftsmanship with fish-scale and feather motif in the carving, the wood covered with a wash of gold. In older Peru they had the secret of making liquid gold that could be put on like paint. This formula is no longer known—now we must apply it in gold leaf form.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

The Busy Executives

"Oh, hello! How are you?"

"Oh, I'm simply rushed to death as usual."

"So am I! I never have a minute of my own."

"Neither do I! The truth is—we all of us simply work too hard."

"I know it, but—how can you slow down when you're in a job like mine?"

"Or mine? Say, are you going to that Sequin luncheon?"

"Oh, I suppose so. I feel strongly that we should do something to boost sequins—as a defense measure if nothing else."

"That's just the way I feel but—well, I have two cocktail parties and a committee meeting tomorrow——"

"I have three cocktail parties and a preview."

"I suppose you're going to the Save Old Shoehorns Tea?"

"I guess I'll have to—for the contracts if nothinig else. That Civic Minded Ladies Inc. is a very important group."

"Yes, it's really good business to go. But then I have that exhibit at Sailem's."

"You mean the historic mustache cups?"

"Yes. And I understand they're going to serve cocktails."

"I simply MUST get there, but I'll have to get away in time to get to the Lastex Embassy."

"Oh, yes, that party for Princess Amnesia. Have you seen any of her things?"

"No, but I understand she does perfectly priceless carvings in jello. They want to introduce them in this country."

Well, one thing, they always have very good food at the Lastex Embassy."

"I MUST get there some way! It would look terrible if I didn't. But I have that committee meteing tomorrow, too—you know, the Amalgamated Career Women."

"Why don't you skip it?"

"Oh, but it's about defense!"

"Oh, that reminds me! I have a defense tea the day after tomorrow."

"I've been to two defense parties today—I'm so tired I could drop—and I have three more this week, besides the crowning of Miss Vitamin——"

Oh, say, I'll have to go to that, too! Those food men never would forgive me!

"I had hoped I'd have Friday free to—to—well, sort of catch up on my office work. But now there are these Bali women."

"What Bali women?"

"Oh, some group of feminists from the Bali Islands. The Career Women Inc. are going to receive them."

Oh yes, I did get a notice! But I have that Reptile luncheon Friday. And I do think we ought to back reptile strongly at a time-like this."

"Yes, and then there's that preview of 'Office Husband' . . . and Bootem's cocktail party to open their new baby shoe departments——"

"And that fashion show to promote femininity——"

"And all those scads of defense parties——"

"It simply exhausts me to think of it."

"Me too. You knowsometimes I think office work is just too hard on women."

"That's just the way I feel!"

Wear Low Heels For Sense and Chic, Girls Told

Hollywood, Calif.—Girls of the Civil War period had sense and girls of 1941 are gradually getting some—about wearing low-heeled shoes.

This statement came straight from the shoulder when designer Milo Anderson uttered it as he set up rows of diminutive low-heeled slippers worn by pretty Olivia de Havilland in a current picture.

"To be smart, women's shoes don't have to have spike heels," said Milo.

"The current demand for more comfortable clothes has launched a swing back to shoes that grip the ground as they were meant to. Fall shoes show lower heels in very chic styles that every girl will be proud to wear. At least she should wear them occasionally."

Adaptable 'Defense' Coiffure

Underwood & Underwood.

Short and simple but definitely becoming is the ideal defense coiffure. Too busy with social and wartime activities, too intelligent to adapt a faddish hair-do, Mrs. Paul McNutt (above) styles her own, dark brown hair. The soft bang effect (still a high style) gives a frivolous look to her high, intellectual forehead

Easy-To-Keep Hairdress Chosen By Mrs. McNutt for 'Duration'

This is the first in a series of Defense Coiffures that the Beauty Editor will present from time to time.

By Carolyn Abbott.

HOW will the vast defense program affect feminine hair-do's? Will women demand a style compatible with the speeded up activities of their lives? Or will the hair stylists sell them on the idea of elaborate coiffures to hold their men? Will they return to the mannish haircuts following World War I?

To find out the answer to these questions, I sought out the busiest women in Washington, whose lives are directly influenced by the defense program.

Mrs. McNutt's Idea

Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, wife of the Director, Defense Health and Welfare Services, is one society leader who has adopted an easy-to-keep coiffure—at least for the "duration." Furthermore, she styles her own naturally curly hair. But then pretty Mrs. McNutt has analyzed her features carefully to determine the hair-do that complements her particular type of beauty.

"I have seven hairs," said vivacious Mrs. McNutt, "that I care for lovingly."

Pinning her down to specific details, she explained that once a week she has her hair brushed thoroughly, massaged and shampooed at her favorite scalp specialists' salon here. Then she brushes the side of her hair backward and upward. He soft bangs decrease the loft of her high forehead.

Keeps Hair Soft

She keeps her hair soft to harmonize with her delicate features. Too fluffy or too sculptured a hair-do would throw her features out of balance.

In general, Mrs. McNutt thinks that simple hair styles are most flattering to women. However, they should follow prevailing modes only in outline, not in detail, unless the fad of the moment is becoming. If a long bob were becoming (she says that it isn't), she would keep it if every other woman had the three-inch cut. And this plan she advocates for all women.

Try Enriched Bread on Family Table

By Ida Jean Kain

SOME ONE remarked awhile back that it is easier to change a person's religion than to convert him to new food habits. On the face of it, that would seem to be true. The nutritionists have been fighting for whole wheat bread for 30 years, and the dark bread eaters are still in a class with the people who like cold showers.

In order to assure you of the same protective essentials, the scientists, millers and bakers have recently put enriched white bread on the counter—and at no increase in the price to you. I had assumed that you were all merrily buying the enriched brand and getting healthier by the week.

35 Per Cent Is Enriched

But, according to Clara Snyder, director of nutrition for the Educational Division of the Millers' National Federation, you are still asking for bread without any stipulation that it be the enriched variety. It is your fault that there is not as much of the new bread now as when the flour was first made available. To be exact, only 35 per cent of the bread on the market is enriched. The rest—with the exception of the slight percentage of whole wheat—is the same old kind. It gives you calories without vitamins.

The value of the new bread lies in the addition of the vitamin B group to the flour. You simply cannot get along without this important factor. We don't seem to have begun to grasp all there is to be known about the B's, but the complex is essential to the full liberation of energy. When you take your calories without vitamins, you do not completely utilize your calories. As a result, you are listless and easily fatigued. The other members of the complex now included in the enriched flour tend to give you a longer lease on a healthier life.

Whole Grain Still Best

If you homemakers would only realize how much enriched bread can mean to your families, and would insist that every slice be either the enriched white bread or the 100 per cent whole grain bread, those would soon be the only kinds you could buy. They are the only ones worth buying.

If your family likes whole grain bread, there is no use switching to the enriched white bread. In fact, the 100 per cent whole grain bread is still the best buy for your money.

Patriot Silversmith

The patriot Paul Revere would have been among the immortal Americans even if he had never engaged in politics or made his famous ride. For he was a celebrated silversmith and his works in silver are museum pieces today. Due to his interest in the patriot's cause, he made many commemorative pieces.

Members of Howes' 'Shooting Houseparty' Can Expect to Eat 'Just What They Kill'

When the George Howes asked a few friends out to their Maryland home for shooting this weekend, they didn't exactly say, "You're going to eat just what you kill," but that, according to Mrs. Howe, is just what the guests can expect. Anyway, the Howe children, and the British refugees who are in the Howe home for the duration are to be packed off for a weekend elsewhere, and a "shooting houseparty" is definitely on the Saturday schedule for several Howe friends.

The Roderick Barclays, of the British Embassy, will be there; also the Walton Butterworths, and Ensign and Mrs. Ronald Lyman, who are coming down from Boston particularly for the party.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Howe is whipping up plans for another project that has been occupying her attention for some time. Yesterday she and Miss Sue Rosenberg worked hours on end addressing several hundred invitations for the special preview opening on December 9 of the Salle du Bois, the swanky new restaurant at 1800 M Street. Miss Rosenberg is interested because the entire opening week for the new spot is to be sponsored by the overcoat committee of the British War Relief Society. Anyone who donates an overcoat between now and the opening of the restaurant may receive a specially designed Paul Flato pin at the Salle du Bois.

Thomas Bell Sweeneys Fete Son

Although the hosts and their guest of honor declined as if with one voice to divulge which birthday was being celebrated, a birthday party drew a sizable company to the New Hampshire Avenue home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bell Sweeney yesterday afternoon "after 5." Guest of honor was State Senator Thomas Bell Sweeney, jr., who arrived in town Monday from his home in Wheeling, W. Va., to be here through the Thanksgiving holidays.

Receiving in the drawing room with her two Thomases, Mrs. Sweeney was gowned in black lace, set off with a shoulder corsage of white orchids. Yellow and white chrysanthemums decorated the drawing room and centered the dining room table. The company included many former Yale classmates of the guest of honor.

Cuff Notes: Vice President Henry A. Wallace is out on the Wardman Park tennis courts almost every morning at 8:15 for a game with his sister, Mme. Bruggmann . . . Chief Justice and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone will be guests of honor at Clarence Hewes' dinner Saturday night . . . Robert Hinckley will entertain at dinner that same night, and Mrs. Northam Griggs is planning a similar party for Thursday evening . . . When the National Theater orchestra plays "The Star-Spangled Banner" before each performance, even the cello player and the pianist stand up . . . "It's definitely a 'suit season,'" said a guest at a ladies' luncheon yesterday. Every ranking guest except one was turned out in a tailleur.

French Envoy Widely Entertained

Party Patter: The policies of the Vichy French government may not be any too popular in Washington, but Vichy's envoy here certainly is. My special diplomatic informant tells me that Ambassador Henry-Haye is besieged with invitations from the Capital's upper crust. Last evening he was guest of honor at a dinner given by Miss Carolyn Nash, who lived in France for a number of years . . . The house that Washington society still calls "the Warren Barbour home" at 10 Thompson Circle is now occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Edward Foley, who will gather in a number of friends for cocktails there on Friday afternoon. Mr. Foley, who for years was regarded as one of the most eligible of the New Deal bachelors, married a one-time Alabama belle not so long ago. For years, however, she had been a resident of New York and the wife of George Bowdoin, a member of J. P. Morgan's firm. Ed Foley, who started out as an attorney with the RFC, and then went to the PWA, is now general counsel for the Treasury Department . . . You can't beat the Dutch—in this matter of giving pleasant parties. Yesterday, Dr. and Mme. H. H. Boon gathered in a few friends for cocktails after 5 o'clock, and as usual everybody lingered around as long as possible.

Mrs. Stone Is Honored At Mrs. Nover's Luncheon

With Mrs. Henry A. Wallace as ranking guest, Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone as guest of honor, and a number of other prominent hostesses from diplomatic and Government circles in the company, Mrs. Barnet Nover entertained at luncheon yesterday at the Carlton Hotel.

Mrs. Stone, who received informally with her hostess, had tucked a purple orchid in the belt of her black frock, to match the blossoms on her perky black hat.

The oval table in a private dining room was decorated with an autumnal motif, featuring a large bouquet of russet and yellow chrysanthemums nestled in scarlet and bronze leaves. Appropriately enough, cunning squirrels guarded the nut cups, and each place card was decorated with its own corsage of miniature chrysanthemums. Poetic prophecies, concealed in walnuts, were brought out at the proper time and passed on down, or rather up, the table to the guest of honor.

On the right of the hostess sat Mrs. Wallace, who, judging the weather accurately, had chosen a tailored black suit with which she wore a corsage of green orchids. Others there were the wife of the Argentine Ambassador, Senora de Espil, Mme. Ertegun, wife of the Turkish Ambassador, Mrs. William O. Douglas, with red frou-frou feathers on her black hat, Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, Mme. Hassan, wife of the Minister of Egypt, Mrs. Carter Glass, Mrs. Sumner Welles, Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck, Mrs. Wade H. Haislip, Mrs. Thomas Parran, and Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, who has plans afoot for a symphony-ballet benefit for the American soldiers.

Still others were Mrs. Harold Brayman, Mrs. Bruce Smith, Mrs. Thomas Austern, Mrs. Robert Sherrod and Mrs. Marc A. Rose and her daughter, Miss Cynthia Rose. Mrs. Rose, who is the wife of the associate editor of the Readers Digest, has been visiting Washington with her daughter from New York. Miss Rose, a soprano with operatic aspirations, has just finished an engagement with a New York opera company. She and her mother returned to New York last night.

Official Set Plans Quiet Thanksgiving

Official Washington is planning to spend its Thanksgiving quietly, either at home or in small gatherings with their out-of-town families.

The Vice President and Mrs. Wallace will celebrate the holiday in their apartment at the Wardman Park. Neither their draftee son, Bob, nor their daughter, Jean, who is now attending Connecticut College, are expected home for the occasion.

The Secretary of State will pursue his regular holiday regimen and spend the day at his office, but Mrs. Hull is hoping that she will be able to lure him away from his desk for a mid-afternoon dinner at their Wardman Park apartment. Mrs. Henry Stimson will return from their Long Island home, Highold, today in time to spend Thanksgiving with her Secretary of War husband. The Postmaster General, Frank Walker, will join Mrs. Walker in New York for the holiday and they will both return to the Capital after Thanksgiving.

The Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Frank Knox will leave tomorrow morning for Norfolk, Va., where they will be the house-guests of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Manley H. Simons. They will stay over there for the launching Friday of the U. S. S. Indiana. Then on Saturday they will go to New Jersey to attend the Princeton-Navy football game.

The Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Harold L. Ickes will have with them in their Oxon, Md., farm over the holiday, his son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Ickes, of New York. And since their family can't come to them, the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Claude Wickard are en route to their farm near Camden, Ind., where their two daughters, Betty and Ann, will join them. They will stop in Indianapolis to pick up Betty, who is pursuing a merchandising career there. Ann will come down from the University of Purdue to join her parents.

The Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Jesse Jones plan to spend the day quietly together after attending Mrs. Edward B. McLean's traditional Thanksgiving breakfast. And the Secretary of Labor, Miss Francis Perkins, is hoping that she can get away from her desk to spend the day with her family in New York.

Latvians Proudly Celebrate 'Independence' at Legation

By Carolyn Bell

Lai driwo Latvia!—or words to that effect.

With that on their lips a goodly number of Latvians turned out for the party yesterday given by the Minister and Mme. Bilmanis in celebration of Latvian Independence Day. With the red and white flag flying proudly—despite previous Russian military domination and now German occupation of their little country—the legation doors at 4704 Seventeenth Street were thrown wide so that Latvian subjects, as well as Americans of that descent, could celebrate their holiday. Lai driwo Yatvia, when literally translated, means phopheticlaly, let Latvia live.

This is the first party the Minister and Mme. Bilmanis have given since moving into their new legation (yes, legation!) on Seventeenth Street, on the edge of Rock Creek Park. "You should see the sunsets" enthused the Minister as he discussed his new home. Some of his famous paintings, that were formerly housed in the attractive legation on Massachusetts Avenue and still later on Twentieth Street, have now been effectively placed in their new home.

"What would be happening in Riga, if times were normal? Well lots of flags flying, plenty of military parades and lots of illumination" is how the Minister describes his homeland, celebrating independence in happier times. The "lots of illumination" means flares arranged along the sidewalk. "Lia driwo Latvia" spelled out in lights and three stars—symbolizing the three provinces—also marked out in lights.

Yesterday Mme. Bilmanis received her guests wearing a black lace frock and a cluster of red and white carnations pinned to it. "Why not in native dress?" some guest asked her. Mme. Bilmanis shook her head and replied that she didn't feel quite gay enough for a bright red "holiday" skirt, and brilliantly embroidered blouse. However, she pointed to the head of the stairs and there, a life-sized doll, complete in Latvian costume, was standing. Later Mme. Bilmanis showed off several miniature dolls in a glassed case that also held any number of delicate, Dresden figurines.

Red and white carnations centered the tea table where several ladies had been asked to serve. Any number of Latvian delicacies—such as tiny rolls filled with bacon—competed with the usual American version of canapes and tea cakes. "I am fascinated with the musical clock," said Mrs. McCeney Werlick who was among the guests. The Minister, who was proudly exhibiting the clock's manifold charms, explained that it was one of the few of his treasures that he kept—from the auction block.

Members of the American Chapter of the Order of the Three Stars of Latvia held their third annual dinner in the University Club, 1135 Sixteenth Street Northwest, on Latvia's twenty-third independence day, and rededicated themselves to the motto of their organization, "Through hardships to the stars."

"And the four freedoms proclaimed by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill are our guiding stars," declared Dr. Alfred Bilmanis, Minister of Latvia, grand officer of the order and guest of honor at the meeting. "But," he added humorously, "give us 100 freedoms, the more the better, we will take all of them."

Dr. Leonid I. Strakhovsky, professor of European history at the University of Maryland and commander of the order, declared: "In this war the only hope for small nations is to see a victory of right and justice. Latvia at present is under German occupation. It had been for a year under Soviet occupation. But neither a Soviet or a German solution will suit the Latvian people nor the peace of the world." Another honor guest was former Minister of Foreign Affairs of Estonia, Charles R. Pusta.

Mrs. Anne Archbold To Give Tea Today

This afternoon Mrs. Anne Archbold is giving a tea for members of the younger set working for the success of the Chinese fete, and earlier in the day Mme. Yu, wife of the Second Secretary of the Chinese Embassy, will hold a meeting at the embassy of some 40 Chinese women who are contributing entertainment, various wares—and even the tea for the forthcoming benefit.

Yesterday afternoon—and by special appointment—the Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Hu Shih, received Wang Cheng Ho, the Pekinese dog which has been sent to Mrs. William D. Connor for the fete, which will be held at the home of Mrs. Anne Archbold, 3905 Reservoir Road, November 25.

Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, chairman of the fete, took the dog of royal blood to the embassy for the presentation.

Shares are to be sold in the youngster who comes from the famous Catawba Kennels, Old Westbury, Long Island, to do his bit for Chinese Industrial Cooperatives.

Mrs. Harold Walker, zealous ticket chairman for Mrs. McNutt, opens headquarters for the fete in the Mayflower Hotel this morning—a room on the mezzanine floor where tickets, "shares" and information will be given all those calling the Mayflower number—District 3000. Already Mrs. Walker has interested civic groups, clubs, State societies and various church groups in the forthcoming benefit, and the new headquarters will serve as a clearing house for all those interested.

On Friday afternoon Mrs. Connor is giving a party for Prince Cheng Ho at her home on Tracy Place.

"What if we have more bathtubs and cars than other nations? We earned them! Maybe we got a little soft . . . but brother, we can toughen up again. I read that many Americans are suffering from HIDDEN HUNGER (malnutrition) due to faulty diets. O.K.—here's one American who's going to get in shape by eating more vitamin and mineral-rich foods. And I'm starting with MILK at every meal."

Inadequate diets . . . not enough mineral and vitamin-rich foods. That's the cause of HIDDEN HUNGER—a form of malnutrition that saps your vitality and health.

To combat HIDDEN HUNGER—and help make America strong—nutritionists advise diets that supply all the essential food elements in adequate amounts. In most of such diets, they recommend pure fresh MILK.

An ideal milk for this job is Sealtest Homogenized Vitamin "D" Milk. It contains all the important food elements of regular milk—as listed below—with 400 extra units per quart of precious Vitamin "D".

It has cream all through the milk—giving every drop its full share of nourishment—and a delightfully new creamy flavor.

Great Home Front Opportunity Seen

Defense volunteers can insure from the current emergency a result which soldiers and civilians alike expected from World War I and did not get—a better world—Dr. Leslie Glenn, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church, declared yesterday at opening of the ten-lesson orientation course for District residents who have registered for volunteer work with welfare agencies.

"It was because the better world did not result that we went through a period of disillusion and chaos," he said, expressing the opinion that advancement such as he had in mind is made on the home front.

About 50 volunteers were present for the first "school," which will have other terms in order that training may be made available for all who register for welfare work. The school is sponsored by the Council of Social Agencies and is being held in the United States Chamber of Commerce Building. Mrs. G. Howland Chase, of the Central Volunteer Bureau, presided.

"Bad morale develops when there is a feeling of rootlessness among people, the idea that no one cares. The big division between pagans on one side and Christians and Jews on the other always has been that the latter groups have cared what happened to their sick, their weak, and their poor.

"The easiest gift one can make to those who need looking after is money," Dr. Glenn said. "While absolutely necessary, money is the crudest form of giving. After that, we can give manners, teach others a little nicer way of getting along.

"After giving manners, we can give thought. That is a much harder thing to give away. Welfare work is much harder if you actually begin to think about these people and start worrying.

"If we can impart character, we have engaged in the highest form of giving. All who have engaged in welfare work know that basic character faults usually underlie most of the problems. The real purpose of social work is to give character, but that is very hard. Children in an orphanage can be turned out well fed, well clothed, educated to a certain point very easily. If they have not also been given character, taught about work, value of money, integrity and the like, the orphanage can be considered a failure."

Kelly Petitioned

Pupils Try To Save Job Of Policeman

Two thousand Northeast school children and their teachers yesterday asked the District authorities to keep Policeman William D. Cousins, 66, on the job.

Last week the children and their teachers read in the papers that the District Commissioners had decided to retire all policemen over the age of 64. This means that Cousins will have to go.

But to the pupils and faculties of McKinley High, Langley Junior High and St. Martin's Catholic Schools it meant losing the protection and friendship of the gray-haired patrolman, who for more than 12 years has been stationed at Lincoln Road and T Street Northeast, helping youngsters and adults across the busy intersection. Never during the years he has been there has a child been hurt at his corner.

POLICEMAN COUSINS
The Youngsters Will Miss Him

Yesterday, Maj. Edward J. Kelly, superintendent of police, received an 80-page petition signed by 2,000 students and teachers of the three schools "to continue Officer Cousins in service."

"In addition to his efficiency, he has endeared himself to the teachers and students of all these schools and we petition that he be continued in service," the appeal declared.

Maj. Kelly said last night he had not decided what to do about Cousins but said that the petition would be shown to the Commissioners.

Cousins was appointed to the force in December, 1908, after coming to this country from Canada. He has served in various precincts and has been commended for meritorious service several times. He lives at 438 Kentucky Avenue Southeast.

Lawyer Defends Self, Asks Trial In Traffic Death

Charles S. Robbs, 26, of 3106 Q Street Northwest, an attorney with the Internal Revenue Bureau, pleaded not guilty and demanded a jury trial yesterday when he was arraigned in Police Court under the negligent homicide act.

There was no testimony at the brief arraignment before Judge George D. Neilson. Robbs, who was not represented by counsel, made the requests himself. Bail was set at $1,000.

A coroner's jury held the young lawyer responsible for the death of William G. Walde, 76, of 2817 Q Street Northwest, after an inquest Monday when it was testified the defendant's automobile was speeding at the time of the accident.

Walde, a Government Printing Office bookbinder, was struck and killed at Twenty-eighth and P Streets Northwest, Saturday night. He was Washington's eighty-second traffic victim this year.

Knowledge Index Costing Millions Urged by Writer

A gigantic card index file of all scientific knowledge in the world to enable research workers to make fullest use of available information was suggested last night by Watson Davis, director of Science Service, in an address before the Washington Chapter of the Special Libraries Association in the National Archives.

"A good start" on the project could be made for an estimated expenditure of 20 to 30 million dollars, he said. With the aid of microfilm and other modern recording devices, copies of this superindex could be given wide circulation, he declared.

This index would be the "world brain" suggested by Historian H. G. Wells, Davis stated. He described science's inability to put its finger on all the literature on a given subject as "the great failure of our organization of written knowledge."

Traffic Signs Face North on Northbound Street

A new note of confusion was added yesterday to Washington's "no parking, no stopping, no standing" rules when it was discovered that afternoon rush-hour prohibition signs along Thirteenth Street Northwest have been placed in such a manner as to be unreadable by passing motorists.

Markers banning stopping and standing on Thirteenth Street north of Spring Road between 4 and 6:30 p. m. have been erected so they all face north—making them readable only to southbound traffic.

Thirteenth Street, however, is one-way northbound in the afternoon rush-hours. Motorists complained they had to look backward in order to read the "don't" signs.

Traffic officials, however, were quick with an explanation. Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer said the signs were purposely put up in that manner so that drivers who park facing south before the one-way regulation becomes effective will have ample notice to move.

"They are the ones we want to get out of the way," said Van Duzer.

"Motorists traveling north in the afternoon rush hours are usually bent on getting home and have no particular reason to stop. We know they can't see the signs, but we hesitated to put up double-faced markers."

Van Duzer added that some 2200 of the estimated 2600 "don't stop nor stand" signs on 32 arterial highways have been erected, and additional ones are being received each day from the manufacturing plant at the Lorton Reformatory.

5 Defendants Freed In S. W. P. Conspiracy Trial

Minneapolis, Nov. 18 (INS).—Because insufficient evidence was produced against them, five defendants were discharged today at the trial of 28 alleged Socialist Workers' Party members on charges of seditious conspiracy.

Federal Judge M. M. Joyce ordered the dismissals, ruling that Government attorneys had failed to prove the men and women released either were members of or active in the party or had knowledge of its principles or program.

Those cleared were Walter Hagstrom, Dorothy Schultze, Rose Siler, Nick Wagner and George Frosig. The court's decision was handed down following arguments on defense motions for a directed verdict of acquittal in all 28 cases. Judge Joyce ruled that sufficient evidence had been produced to hold the 23 remaining defendants for a jury verdict.

Taxi Customers Keep on Tipping Despite Fare Rise

Tipping taxicab drivers seems to be a Washington habit which even the new 30-cent single zone rate has not destroyed, a survey by The Post disclosed last night.

Drivers seemed generally pleased with the 10-cent increase for single zone rides which went into effect at 12::01 a. m. Monday for a "trial" period, with many reporting increased revenue with considerably less work.

Tips have continued in spite of the increase with some drivers receiving more 10-cent tips than heretofore in many cases where riders have loose change available it was reported. Previously, the standard tip on a 20-cent ride was 5 cents because of the ease with which a quarter could be given the driver.

W. H. Linkins' Rites Today, D. C. Lawyer

Funeral services for William K. Linkins, 60, attorney and realtor, who died Monday in Doctors' Hospital, will be held at 2 p. m. today at his late home, 1734 Lamont Street Northwest. Burial will be private.

A native Washingtonian, Mr. Linkins was a graduate of Columbian Law School, now a part of George Washington University. He was a member of the District Bar Association and was admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of the United States and the Court of Appeals.

He was former Mayor of Arundel-on-the-Bay, Md., and at the time of his death was a member of the board of commissioners there.

He also was a member of the Washington Board of Trade, the Washington Real Estate Board, the National Association of Real Estate Boards, the Chain and Sproket Club and Hiram Lodge, No. 10, of the Masons.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Mabel Kent Linkins; a daughter, Mrs. Louise L. Bezdeck; two sons, Walter H. Linkins, jr., and Kent Linkins, and two grandchildren, all of this city.

Census Employes Face Loss of Jobs

Census Bureau faces a virtual shut-down of its 1940 Census tabulations which would throw several thousands of employes out of work. To carry on the Census work as planned would require an additional appropriation of several millions—a maximum of $5,000,000—and whether Congress will approve such an expenditure in these times is anyone's guess. Congress already has appropriated forty-five million dollars to take and tabulate the 1940 Census. The tabulating job is about half completed. Final reports aren't due until December 31, 1942, which means more than 13 months of work.

Census Bureau is the victim of rising costs. The estimate of forty-five million dollars was made in 1938 and since that time, as everyone knows costs have shot upward. Labor costs really threw Census' budget out of whack. Census planned to hire thousands of clerks, card-punchers, typists and the like at $1260 salaries, but more had to be paid.

The general shortage of workers has played hob with the bureau. Very few persons would take card-punch jobs at $1260 and Census needed a crew of 2600. In fact, 2600 card-punchers couldn't be had at any price, because they refused to accept jobs here. Census had to spend $86,000 to train raw recruits to operate card-punch machines. Bureau officials lay this unbudgeted expenditure to the door of the Civil Service Commission which was supposed to recruit the card-punchers at $1260. And after Census trained the card-punchers, it had to pay them up to $1620 to keep defense agencies from luring them away. To keep its personnel, the bureau also has had to pay most of its employes one and two grades more than had been anticipated.

Separations Speeded

Census had a high of 10,500 temporary here on January 1. That number has now been cut in about half and separations from the force have been speeded because of the threatened fund shortage. Several thousand will have to be fired before January 1 unless Congress approves a supplementary appropriation. It was learned that the Census Advisory Committee, composed of Government and private business officials, met here several days ago to discuss the fund shortage. The committee decided that the work must be completed and it was agreed to ask the Budget Bureau and Congress for the additional millions.

There's serious doubt whether the money will be appropriated. Defense agencies have learned of the threatened curtailment and several already have spoken for Census' space and personnel. Commerce, however, will battle to retain the new Census Building. It plans to move the entire Census Bureau into the building and to centralize CAA in the main Commerce Building in space now occupied by Census. The Rockefeller agency on Inter-American Affairs also will be centralized in the Commerce Building.

OPM employes want to know if they'll have Thanksgiving off. The answer is "yes," but, as an official explained, that's subject to change . . . Defense bonds—$500 worth—will be distributed at a rally tonight of Columbia Lodge 174, International Association of Machinists, to be held in Eastern High Auditorium . . . Larry Appley who has been training employes for War Department jobs, has resigned to become personnel chief of the Vick Chemical Co. He'll continue on a consulting basis at War.

Stenographers, typists and secretaries—there are about 88,000 of them now on Uncle Sam's payroll and about 75,000 are women. Three years ago there were only 53,000 people in Government who made their living punching a typewriter. But by June 30, 1942, the Civil Service Commission estimates, the number will have grown to 100,000 and no let-up is in sight.

In the 1940 fiscal year, only 2868 stenographer and 5555 typist appointments were made. But for the 1941 fiscal year the number leaped to 15,000 stenos and 25,000 typists. The demand is so great that a shortage is developing. Eligibles are available but 50 per cent refuse jobs in Washington. They've read and heard too much.

Gets His Money and a Hat

Danville, Va., Nov. 18 (AP).—Ernest T. Stephens made a lunge—and came up with a hat full of money. It was his money—$175 in all—but the hat belonged to a highwayman who had taken the cash in a holdup of Stephen's filling station. The highwayman crammed it into his headgear and then came a stumbling cropper as he turned to flee.

Breaks In to Rob Jailor

Ancora, N. J., Nov. 18 (AP).—Somebody broke into a workhouse at the Camden County Prison Farm and stole $175 belonging to Warden Edward Powell. Investigation disclosed the fence around the farm had been cut with a pair of pliers—but no prisoners were missing. So Powell concluded: "It was an outside job."

Petworth

The Petworth Citizens Association last night decided to sponsor a Christmas lighting and decorating contest for a fourth successive year. Prizes totaling $10 will be awarded to the best outdoor decorations seen in Petworth.

Civilian defense volunteers were praised for their patriotism in a resolution which also urged the Federal Government to make adequate funds available for civilian defense work. Changes in zoning regulations to permit rooming houses to be established in residential sections and proposed increases in gasoline taxes were opposed.

Damon A. Spencer, chairman of the Petworth defense committee, spoke on air-raid precautions.

Stanton

The Stanton Park Citizens Association last night recommended that action be taken to remove the street car tracks from F Street Northeast between Union Station and Eighth Street Northeast. The tracks are no longer used as buses have replaced street car service there.

The association also went on record asking the school board to furnish chairs in the Peabody School, Fifth and C Streets Northeast, where its members meet so that "we will not have to borrow chairs from a nearby undertaker every time we meet."

Cathedral—Cleveland

Capt H. C. Whitehurst was the principal speaker at the Cathedral Heights-Cleveland Park Citizens Association last night. Whitehurst spoke on ways and means of improving traffic conditions here.

The association appointed a committee to study the question as to whether streetcar platform signs should be removed to permit motorists to drive on the tracks. Walter T. Hartley was named chairman.

Columbia Heights

S. A. Wood was elected president of the Citizens' Forum of Columbia Heights for a fourth successive term at a meeting last night.

Other officers elected are: First vice president, Lester T. Walter; second vice president, Mrs. C. J. Fernald; secretary, Miss Lela Cranford; treasurer, James W. Cranford; delegates to the federation, W. W. Coulliette and Dr. Lyman F. Keebler; chaplain, William L. Ford.

Resolutions were adapted opposing elimination of the Petworth bus line going via Sixteenth and Harvard Streets Northwest, urging a traffic light at Princeton Street and New Hampshire Avenue and stationing of a traffic policeman at Park Road and Fourteenth Street. Increased gasoline taxes were opposed.

Capital, 32 States Will Give Thanks at Feasts Tomorrow

Living under national emergency, and despite the threat of war, the people of Washington and 32 States including Virginia and Maryland, tomorrow will recall the faith of the early Americans in the strength and bounty of their country, by celebrating Thanksgiving Day in their homes, churches, and meeting places.

The tenor of this year's Thanksgiving Day is reflected in President Roosevelt's proclamation asking "the Divine Blessing on our decision and determination to protect our way of life against the forces of evil and slavery which seek in these days to encompass us.

"On the day appointed for this purpose," said the President in his proclamation, "let us reflect at our homes or places of worhip on the goodness of God, and let us pray for a speedy end to the strife, and the establishment on earth of freedom, brotherhood and justice for enduring time."

Last Year of Confusion

This will be the last year that Washington and a portion of the States will celebrate the holiday on the next to the last Thursday of November, as last May President Roosevelt proclaimed that beginning in 1942, the country should return to observing Thanksgiving on the traditional last Thursday.

A materialistic note on the holiday is the high price of turkeys.

A market round-up, focused on Chicago but reflecting the general situation, found turkey prices the highest in six years. The movement of turkeys to markets was said to have been late, but the quality of birds is high. Geese and ducks were called reasonably priced. Cranberries are plentiful.

In Washington, several charity organizations have arranged for the poor. The Central Union Mission will serve a dinner to jobless and homeless men at noon tomorrow at its headquarters, 613 C Street Northwest, serving "as long as the food lasts," said Mrs. John S. Bennett, superintendent.

40 Children Will Eat

Thanksgiving dinner will be given the 40 children in the Emergency Home for Children, and the "100 neediest families" on the Mission's list will be taken baskets of food today.

The Gospel Mission, 214 John Marshall Place orthwest, will also deliver food baskets to needy families today. Tomorrow, dinners will be served to the needy from 12 noon to 2 p. m.

The Volunteers of America, at their Relief Mission, 916 New York Avenue Northwest, have made arrangements to serve 2000 turkey dinners to needy families. Tickets already have been distributed, but no one will be turned away, said Maj. Walter O. Ulrey, commander of the organization.

Highlighting religious services tomorrow will be the annual Pan-American mass at 10:30 a. m. in St. Patrick's Church, 619 Tenth Street Northwest, with Government officials and representatives of all the Latin-American republics attending. The occasion will celebrate unified thanks for the state of peace in the Western Hemisphere.

Archbishop to Officiate

The Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, D. D., Archbishop of Baltimore and Washington, will be the celebrant, with the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, the Apostolic delegate, presiding. The diplomats, following the ceremony, will be guests of Archbishop Curley at a luncheon in St. Patrick's rectory.

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, will speak at 11 a. m. at the Washington Cathedral. Paul Callaway will be at the organ.

Takoma Park area churches will have united services at 10:30 a. m. in Trinity Episcopal Church, Piney Branch Road and Dahlia Street Northwest.

Protestant congregations in the Petworth section will have joint services at 10 a. m. at Wallace Memorial United Presbyterian Church, New Hampshire Avenue and Randolph Street Northwest.

Public school students will have Thanksgiving Day and Friday for holidays, and a three-day holiday for George Washington University students begins tomorrow. The Georgetown University classes closed yesterday and will resume Monday.

Maryland University students will have tomorrow, Friday and Saturday off.

Government Agencies Close

All Government agencies will be closed Thanksgiving, with minor exceptions where voluntary defense work is being done.

Washington retail stores, coal yards and other plants will be closed tomorrow, the Merchants and Manufacturers Association announced yesterday. Stores which have been opening on Thursday nights for the past few weeks will be closed tomorrow night, but open Friday evening instead.

Another change of date has been announced by the Y. W. C. A. which is having its regular Saturday night USO party tomorrow night. The building at Seventeenth and K Streets Northwest will be open from 8 p. m. for dances, games and special Thanksgiving festivities.

Other Events

The Senator's Club of the Catholic University will hold its annual Thanksgiving dance tomorrow night in the Garden Room of the Wardman Park Hotel. The affair is open to students and alumni members of the club.

Tonight most of the members of the Iowa delegation in Congress will attend the Thanksgiving dance of the Iowa Society at the Shoreham at 9:30 p. m.

The Public Library, Eighth and K Streets Northwest, and all branches in the library system will be closed tomorrow.

Northern Seventh Street

Installation of new fire apparatus and equipment at No. 4 Truck Company was advocated by the Northern Seventh Street Business men's Association at its meeting last night. The association pointed out that the equipment is outmoded and that it is imperative to have it replaced.

The organization also went on record favoring selection as rent commissioner here a resident who has been living here for at least five years and who has been practicing law here for five years.

Two new members were admitted to membership. They were Jack Kresner, of 1640 Seventh Street Northwest, and Sam Singer, of 1226 Seventh Street Northwest.

Gifts to Chest Reach 31% Of Goal

51,000 Persons Contribute $622,655; Leaders Become Hopeful of Victory

As Washington's campaign for funds to sustain its war against poverty and deprivation neared the end of its first week yesterday, its leaders became hopeful of victory.

Community Chest volunteers, at their fourth report meeting in the Willard Hotel, announced that collections and pledges received total $622,656.14, or 31 per cent of the two million dollar quota. More than 51,000 persons had contributed to this total.

Monday's report had shown only 21.9 per cent of the goal achieved and Chest workers had doubled their efforts to overcome the lag.

"Although this was a greatly improved day," John Clifford Folger, general campaign manager, said yesterday, "we should have reached 48 per cent of the quota by now. The District must not have the stigma of being one of the few lagging cities in the country."

Greater Aid Pledged

Pledging greater aid to the Chest, representatives of eight business firms in the District promised to increase by 15 per cent the amounts they pledged last year.

These contributions were Lansburgh Brothers, represented by Ralph A. Goldsmith, vice president and general manager; Palais Royal, represented by John H. Hasley, general manager; Woodward & Lothrop, represented by Philip W. Talbott, third vice president and secretary; Julius Garfinckel & Co., represented by William E. Schmid, president; The Hecht Co., represented by Charles B. Dulcan, jr., vice president and general manager; Frank R. Jelleff Co., represented by Frank R. Jelleff, president and treasurer; Peoples Drug Stores, represented by Dr. George E. McCann, secretary; S. Kann's Son's, represented by William F. Friel, superintendent.

Notable among contributions reported by the Advance Gifts Unit at the meeting, was an $11,000 gift from the Andrew W. Mellon Education and Charitable Trust, made through the cooperation of Donald D. Shepherd, who is a trustee of the Mellon trust.

Mrs. Harper Sibley Speaks

"This gift to Washington is in many respects a memorial to the many years Mr. Mellon spent here, and expresses the devotion he felt for the people of the city," commented the Chest's campaign chairman.

Of more than $600,000 total reported yesterday, collections were divided as follows: Federal Government unit, $241,018.80 or 28.7 per cent of its quota; District Government Unit, $13,059.76 or 17.6 per cent of its quota; Group Solicitation Unit, $240,917.57 or 35.5 per cent of its quota; and Metropolitan Unit, $127,659 or 31.1 per cent of its quota.

Guest speaker was Mrs. Harper Sibley of Rochester, N. Y., wife of the former president of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

"If ever my luck should turn," Mrs. Sibley told the several hundred volunteers, "and I become a receiver instead of a giver, I hope that I will be in a Chest city like Washington, where people can receive and still keep their self-respect."

Gas Mask Drill

Raid Wardens Learn How to Look Like Owls

The local civilian war games got into stride last night when 35 deputy air raid wardens met at the Firemen's Training School at 635 North Carolina Avenue, Southeast, to learn how to look like owls in 15 seconds flat.

To look like an owl in 15 seconds you hold your two thumbs and two forefingers just right and put on a thing called a gas mask. Under certain conditions, the wardens found, this is about the most fashionable garment you can be wearing.

Lieut. Comdr. J. P. Wetherill, chemical warfare officer at the Navy Yard, is the instructor in this two-weeks school, the first of many to be held until 2000 civilians, 1000 firemen and 150 fire chiefs and officers all get the necessary air raid instruction. Clement Murphy, training school chief, is District Air Raid Warden Chief also.

Serious Class

At 7:30 tonight at the school the pupils, lawyers, Government workers, doctors, so on—are going to have the opportunity to show whether they've been listening to teacher or not, because the commander is going to stand outside and light magnesium bombs and the pupils are going to do what they would do if the bombs had been dropped by old Hitler.

Sitting in on an air raid civilian defense class you get the idea that there is certainly a whole lot of seriousness running around loose.

Everyone takes notes, very assiduously, and most of the pupils, ask questions, very interestedly.

They learn information that will be highly valuable if they are ever caught in an air raid and have to do something about bombs—such tidbits, for example, as the one that a magnesium bomb must be sprayed with water and never fought with a direct stream. The direct stream gets inside, generates hydrogen and causes an explosion.

The climax in last night's class came when the gas masks were hauled out.

Lesson on Bombs, Too

"Girls go right along with the rest of them," Commander Wetherill said. "The women in England learned how to handle bombs."

The girls got their hair mussed and some of the men got their chins and their foreheads mixed up, but pretty soon everyone learned how.

A board over at the side disclosed some of the things this knowledge will protect one from. It was entitled "Summary—War Gases" and listed various qualities of various gases. The lists for odors included these: "Mustard—garlic or horseradish: Lewisite: geraniums; Phosgene: fresh cut hay."

Protection against garlic alone is worth learning how to use a gas mask.

Keystone Club Backs Open Type Garages for Downtown D. C.

The construction of a number of open type parking garages throughout downtown Washington in order to ease the District's traffic problem, was approved last night by the advisory board of the Keystone Automobile Club at its monthly meeting.

The board went on record favoring the proposal after Dr. Charles Stanley White, president of Doctors' Hospital, Inc., had described the operation of an open-type garage located opposite the hospital.

Meeting at the Shoreham, the board also elected its 1942 officers last night. Succeeding Luther C. Steward as chairman is T. Howard Duckett. Mark Lansburgh was elected as vice chairman.

Special guests at the meeting were Richmond B. Keech, corporation counsel; William A. Van Duzer, traffic director; Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways; James J. Whelan; and R. F. Camalier, District Adviser to the Senate District Committee.

Capt. Whitehurst, favoring the "open-type" garage proposal, told the group that terminal facilities for autos was one of the greatest problems of the traffic heads.

Traffic chief Van Duzer advocated that examinations given to new drivers be lengthened from 5 to 15 minutes, but added that four examiners would have to be added to give the longer tests.

The recent proposal to combine the Police and Municipal Courts was praised by the Corporation Counsel. Keech told the group that "if we can try serious traffic cases before a 'cooling period,' we will do much to discourage careless driving."

Camalier praised the District Police Department and Van Duzer's traffic staff, and said that "the two agencies are doing their very best under very difficult circumstances."

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Nick and Nora Continue To Enjoy Best Bafflers

Their Murder Mysteries Stand Up Nobly; Civic Production May Tour Training Camps; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

MOTION PICTURES produced in series, all involving the same characters, usually portrayed by the same casts of principals, as a general thing become pretty stereotyped or grow dangerously transparent to the habitual filmgoer. The Hardy pictures and the Dr. Kildares follow what amounts to a frozen formula, varied in their embellishments but substantially the same in fundamentals. In fashioning the "Thin Man" releases, however, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer seems to have found a rabbit's foot.

WILLIAM POWELL

Nick Charles and Nora, his "helpful" wife, not only contrive a steady flow of comedy, but manage to keep the murder mysteries upon which they unload their talents among the most baffling of the whodunits. This has never been truer than in "Shadow of the Thin Man," previewed by the baffled guys and gals of the drama desks yesterday. William Powell and Myrna Loy have never had a better multiple-murder to solve than the one they will unravel for the confusion of the lay public at the Palace, beginning tomorrow.

We have no intention of writing two reviews of this laugh-and-gasp number, so will stand, for the present, on the simple statement that it is the best of the lot. For further information see this space tomorrow. To discover what an important sleuth you are, see the picture.

Due to the extraordinary length of "They Died With Their Boots On," opening at the Earle tomorrow to take advantage of the holiday, curtailment of the stage bill originally announced has been made necessary. Johnny Long and His Orchestra and specialists will supply the entire footlighted bill. So what becomes of Billy De Wolfe and Evelyn Farney and Al Gordon? The last named will be coming along at some later date, as yet unannounced, and De Wolfe the week of December 19. So now you know.

'Way Back There in the Nineties

Mrs. Lyman Beecher Swormstedt was interested in our recent printing of the cast that appeared in Mrs. Fiske's revival of "The Rivals" in 1925—one we thought would be within easy memory or present-day theatergoers—but we are more interested in the one she recites. Writes Mrs. Swormstedt:

"While you are 'reminiscing' over casts for 'The Rivals,' why not mention the greatest of all, when, in the early nineties, the play was presented with Joe Jefferson as Bob Acres, Mrs. John Drew as Mrs. Malaprop, Billy Florence as Sir Anthony, and Viola Allen and Aubrey Boucicault in the other leads? The whole cast were stars of lesser magnitude, whose names I do not so well remember. Never having seen a revival since then, I am greatly anticipating this one."

The anticipation is not ill placed.

Negotiations are under way to tour neighboring training camps with the Civic Theater's production of its current hit at Wardman Park. The idea back of the move was expressed to Director Leon Askin by Lieut. Col. Quincy Scott, head of the Morale Division of the United States Army, recently in these words: "We want plays of pure entertainment for our boys in the camps. We do not care for plays which aim to indoctrinate. We have our own way of taking care of that problem." Did you say "pure" entertainment, Colonel?

Dots and Dashes

Having played to an absolute sellout Saturday night, the Civic Theater's "Kiss the Boys Goodbye" goes into its second week at Wardman Park Theater tonight . . . Director Leon Askin says his next production, Shakespeare's "Troilus and Cressida," is churning itself up into a honey of a farce in rehearsal . . . Ruth Simon, play agent, 1650 Broadway, New York, you with your third acts almost finished, is in the market for exceptional manuscripts for both stage and motion picture production . . . She just put "For This We Fight" on the gay white ways for early launching . . . The Drama Workshop of the Jewish Community Center will put on "The Man Who Came to Dinner," January 24 and 25, as its second major production of the season . . . Open tryouts at the Center, Sixteenth and Q, November 24 to 27, both inclusive, at 8 p. m. . . . So now that the "Ice Follies" has come and gone, it is the "Ice Capades" that is breaking the postman's back . . . Our order seems to have been for 300 pounds of publicity a day!

Leading Lady

Went Classic Early

Robert Preston, one of the principal players in "Parachute Battalion," played "Julius Caesar" in an important stock company at the age of 15, even before his voice had completely changed.

He Probably Won by a Nose!

JIMMY DURANTE AND ANN SHERIDAN

no doubt on, or near, the "The Man Who Came to Dinner" set, at Warner Brothers, seem to be giving the gossip columnists something to wag their typewriters about. One can almost hear Mr. Durante saying in his rich, warm, caressing tones, "Babe, y're da niftiest lookin' tomater in heaven or on eart'!"

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Avery Lucky Choice!

Hollywood, Nov. 18 (INS).—If you read this column—and I hope you do—you have seen the name of Bettye Avery, the pretty model from Oklahoma. She first was reported engaged to Gov. Lehman's nephew and later she was seen at night spots with Pat Di Cicco. Well, Sam Goldwyn has signed Bettye and not for a small part—she already has had that in "Ball of Fire"—but for leads, if you please.

LARAINE DAY

If I hadn't met her, I would say Sam is exaggerating when he says that she is another Vivien Leigh in personality and looks. Only last week Sam got in the headlines when he signed Virginia Hill, the girl who spends money like water. But Virginia was just given a bit in "Ball of Fire"—and only in the one movie. There is a very strong possibility that Bettye will play opposite Gary Cooper in his next picture. So you can see the Goldwyn Company is going to town on her.

Laraine Day, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's young actress who recently graduated from the "Kildare" series into better roles, is one of the "Girls of the Year" according to both Cosmopolitan magazine and the Princeton University Triangle Club. Cosmopolitan has selected her for an article and a cover and she will be mentioned as the outstanding young actress of the year. The Princeton Club, founded 53 years ago by Booth Tarkington, has invited Laraine to come to the New York opening of their show on Friday, December 19, 1941, as the guest of honor. At a poll taken it was voted that Laraine had the qualifications most desired in a young actress. I would like to add—not only is she a gifted actress, but a swell girl.

Lieut. Commander John Farrow, who has been very sick, has been given a leave of absence and will be in Canada within 30 days. Maureen O'Sullivan and little Michael will join him; Lucille Ball planed out last night to spend Thanksgiving in New York with Desi Arnaz.

HEDDA HOPPER

When Greek Meets Greek, What?

Hollywood, Nov. 18.

Have I got a treat ahead! I've promised to introduce Orson Welles to Bette Davis. They've never met. And Bette's admiration for him is profound. I've never known her to be so enthusiastic. And when these two who love the theater above all else, who have intelligence, courage and ability, finally meet, it should send out sparks enough to start a conflagration which I hope will result in their doing a picture or a play together. Wouldn't that be something?

ORSON WELLES

Did you know that curly-haired, dimpled Dennis Morgan, who started his career as Stanley Morner, the singer, was once a rookie with the White Sox, and a lefthander? Both he and George Montgomery, also a left-handed ball player, will test for the Gehrig role next week. Morgan is the guy signed by Warners three years ago to sing "The Desert Song." What's ever happened to that?

Jean O'Donnell, "Killer" Gray's girl friend, was chosen for her underpinnings when they needed special leg art for "Ball of Fire." Which reminds me, they're calling "Let's Face It" the greatest Naval parade in New York.

I asked Charlie Coburn if he wasn't getting more fan mail since he's left those sweet old gentleman roles and been playing the sadistic doctor in "... ings Row" and a nasty old man in "In This Our Life." He said, "How did you guess, Hedda?" "Oh, shucks! Women always like wicked men. At least they like to think you are." Then he admitted he's not only getting more mail but requests for photographs. In one letter came a dollar bill, and sender described herself as "a blonde grass widow of forty-odd, not unattractive." Why, Charlie, you old roue!

Milton Berle and Joyce Mathews haven't set the altar date yet. He's bought a Beverly manse—and says Hollywood should shoot fewer pictures and more actors if it wants to improve itself. And now that he's settled here, he's retired as Abbott of the New York Friars' Club, in favor Ben Bernie.

Ann Rutherford's named her new toy poodle "Sunbonnet," but calls him "Henry" for short. As Gracie Allen says, "I don't get it!"

Ted North's playing a Marine in "To the Shores of Tripoli," so Mary Beth Hughes is knitting him socks and a sweater . . . Their friend are rejoicing at the reconciliation o' Joan Davis and her husband. Would that more happily married couples were as sensible.

The Guy Kibbee's maid is a perfect jewel, except that every time anyone phones to ask if Guy is home, she answers, "Hold on a minute—I'll ask him!"

When Arthur and Sam Lyons entertained those 12 soldiers and 12 college girls, they had entertainment lots of us would have given our eye teeth for—a tennis match with Bill Tilden, Mort Ballagh, Bobby Faulkner, jr., and Phil Neer playing. Jack Benny dropped by to ad lib, so did Ida Lupino. And when Hedy Lamarr arrived, the college girls yelled in chorus, "Unfair! Unfair!"

When Dorothy Comingore toured recently with "Citizen Kane," she invited exhibitors to be her guests, if and when they came to Hollywood. She's had word from A. W. Michael, of Dallas; John Horn, of Phoenix; B. H. Swales, of Memphis, and Dick Jackson, of Pittsburgh, and all are arriving to spend Thanksgiving week with Dorothy and husband Dick Collins. Look like a bull market on turkeys!

No Quakes in Quake

New York, Nov. 18.

The two young sons of screenwriter Paul Gerard Smith were undisturbed by this week's earthquake in California—for they already are accustomed to the shock . . . When Hollywood had its last earthquake the boys were playing a combination game of G-man, Indian massacre and hide-go-seek . . . Despite their father's protests, they ran roughshod through the living room. Ten minutes later they were observed running across the backyard, with their father in earnest pursuit, while the boys shouted: "We didn't do anything. Honest, the house shook by itself."

LILLIAN GISH

Floyd Odlum's ailment finally was diagnosed by the specialists at Mayo Clinic, and he was operated upon yesterday. They yanked one of his teeth, and the pain is eased . . . Mack Millar, the Hollywood publicist, who also went to the Mayo Clinic, now is completely cured. He's back in the West Coast, in full action again . . . Louis Adamic author of "Two Way Passage," is flying to Cuba to participate in the "America and the World Crisis" conference . . . Alan Reed, who relinquished the income from a dozen radio program so that he could play in the Theater Guild's "Hope For a Harvest," feels amply rewarded—by the drama critics' praises in the cities where the show is being prepared for Broadway . . . Henny Youngman is joining the touring Tommy Dorsey troupe.

Saburo Kurusu, the Japanese diplomat who arrived recently and told reporters that he "hopes to break through the line and make a touchdown," learned these American phrases from an excellent instructor—his wife, who is an American. And it may well be that the wives of the Tokio diplomatic corps have complicated the entire foreign situation . . . Lady Craigie, wife of the British Ambassador to Japan, also is an American. Mrs. Togo, wife of the Foreign Minister, is a German . . . The Kurusu home in Tokio now is occupied by Frank Williams, the American commercial attache, who leased it while Kurusu was in Berlin, signing the Axis treaty . . . William's wife, completely Americanized that Kurusu home. She painted all the elegant mahogany furniture snow white, and the rest of the house was completely modernized. Kurusu never has been inside that house since the changes were made.

Nunnally Johnson has come home to New York and again is rewriting the play on which he collaborated with Charles MacArthur. "Every fall, when I want to see the leaves turn," Johnson explained, "I come East to work on that play" . . . Lillian Gish declined an offer to appear in a new play in which the central theme is hatred. "Hate is too much at $3.30 a seat," she told the producer, "when the world now gets so much of it for nothing."

Donald Ogden Stewart and Mrs. Robert Ardrey, wife of the author of "Thunder Rock," visited a movie director at the Gotham Hotel. The director phoned Burgess Meredith, who lives in the same hotel, and invited him to join them . . . "I can't. I've got to rush away," Meredith explained. "I've got an appointment with John Steinbeck" . . . "You prefer to be with Steinbeck?" asked the director. "All he ever wrote was about a bunch of moronic Okies" . . . Stewart tapped the director and said: "Apologize immediately. Because Mrs. Ardrey is from Oklahoma—and I'm a moron."

Some of the newspapers recently reported that Artie Shaw and Lana Turner, while dining together at the Stork Club, had announced their intention to remarry. That story isn't true. Mr. Shaw and Miss Turner were dining at the Stork Club with my wife and me. No such announcement was made. The subject never was mentioned . . . George Balanchine went to the Ringling Bros. camp to start training the elephants for the ballet they'll do next season. Balanchine began to instruct one elephant, "Murdock." He had been assured that "Murdock" would obey all his commands, "Leeft the right lagg hopp," Balanchine directed. Murdock didn't respond. He repeated: "Leeft the right lagg hopp." Again no response—until Murdock's trainer said: "Raise your right leg." Murdock obeyed . . . the trainer turned to Balanchine and advised: "Before you start giving instructions, in English, to the elephants, you'd better start taking English lessons."

Many Gay Dances and Home Dinners Are Planned for Soldiers in Washington to Celebrate Thanksgiving Holiday

Dancing and turkey dinners for thousands of soldiers are scheduled in Washington and at Fort Belvoir for the Thanksgiving holiday, which begins tonight, according to the recreation division of the District Defense Council.

One hundred and fifty dancettes will attend a party at the War College this evening, with about the same number going to Fort Belvoir.

To give a holiday flavor to the dances, many of them will be formal. One hundred and fifty-six girls will wear their gayest party dresses to Fort Belvoir tomorrow night, making the trip in three buses. About 200 will be dancing formally at Walter Reed the same evening.

Four hundred girls will go to Belvoir Saturday night, when more buses are available. "We could send that many regularly, except for the transportation problem," a recreation committee member said yesterday.

Biggest single dance will be that in the Bureau of Printing and Engraving Auditorium on Saturday night, when 1,200 boys and girls will be on hand for the shag and rhumba. On the same night 1000 soldiers and "dates" will be dancing in the Departmental Auditorium on Constitution Avenue.

A dance for several hundred couples will be given in Georgetown tomorrow night at the Linthicum Institute, sponsored by the American Legion. The recreation committee will provide hostesses.

Soldiers from Minnesota and Wisconsin will be honor guests at a Thanksgiving party given jointly by those State societies Saturday night at 2400 Sixteenth Street Northwest.

The Y. W. C. A., like several other agencies with regularly scheduled USO programs, is shifting its Saturday night dance to tomorrow night. Approximately 700 girls and service men are expected.

"As for Thanksgiving dinner," workers at recreation headquarters declared yesterday, "We have received hundreds and hundreds of invitations from Washington families. We're now trying to get soldiers singled out and 'placed.'"

Tent camps for both white and colored soldiers, however, reported few reservations. In Anacostia only 75 "reservations" had been made, while in the white camp on the Potomac none had been received.

ONE STRANDED FAMILY...

Mrs. Henry Gichner will welcome Mrs. Peyton Hawes Dunn, volunteer solicitor of the Metropolitan Unit of the Community Chest, when she calls for her gift, for she knows that: Arriving penniless from a distant state, only to find relatives gone from the Capital, a family, despairing and bewildered, found help—prompt and understanding—with the organization best equipped to help them. Mrs. Gichner has visited that organization and she remembers this family. And, like other Chest givers, she takes pride and comfort in knowing that some of the money she gives through the Community Chest is devoted to the relief of distress when difficulties beset whole families, whether newly arrived or old residents.

Give Willingly

More than 13,000 families during the last 12 months were given personal service or financial assistance by the ten family-service agencies in Washington and in Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties supported by the Community Chest.

REDSKINS VS. GIANTS

The Redskins will be keeping fast company again this weekend. They have a date with the New York Giants at the Polo Grounds and that's sufficient to intrigue Washington fans. The Giants have come to be the particular hate of Redskin rooters and in this case any notions Washington may have of winning or tying for the Eastern Division title will be riding out the result of Sunday's affair.

POVICH

For five years now, or ever since the Redskins moved into Washington, their annual affair with the Giants at the Polo Grounds had been the excuse for Washingtonians to weekend it in New York. As many as 14,000 Capital fans, and never fewer than 10,000, make the trip. It's the biggest mass exodus by any sort of fans to any place for any sort of a contest. The weekend begins when they set foot on the special trains to New York. It is all very clubby and could never be confused with a W. C. T. U. outing.

Washington fans have been going back to New York each year with one brightly-burning hope—the hope of witnessing another such Redskin carnival as that of 1937 when the Redskins licked the Giants, 49-14. That was the year when Cliff Battles broke away on three occasions for runs from scrimmage of 80 yards or more.

It was a rude shock that the Washington contingent received at New York the following season when there was a 71-point turnover in the scoring. Virtually the same Giant team that had taken that 49-14 beating the previous season rocked the Redskins 36-0. There were times in that game when it seemed apparent what had happened to all those old cigar store Redskins. They were in Washington uniforms. Of course they missed a player like Battles, who quit the club after a salary argument. He was merely the league's greatest ground gainer the year before.

Remember That Place Kick?

But even that 36-0 loss to the Giants was not as bitter a dose as the outcome of the Polo Grounds battle of 1939. The Giants won that one, 9-7, and the Washington delegation was in a lynching mood. In fact, Referee Tom Halloran was forced to flee for what threatened to be his life when Redskin players and fans advanced on him at the game's conclusion, 20 seconds after he called Bo Russell's place kick "no good."

Washington set up a cry of "we wuz robbed" and on the returning special trains Halloran was swallowed in effigy, not always with chasers. Redskin rooters were in a vicious mood for days. The city refused to accept Halloran's decision as anything but a piece of robbery. Washingtonians vowed that the kick was good and there were offers of affidavits from Washington fans sitting behind the goal posts who were ready to swear that the ball landed in their laps after going through the posts.

One inconsolable Washington fan took particular umbrage in a letter to this department in which he declared, flatly . . . "I know the kick was good. I was listening to the radio and heard the Washington cheers." Another correspondent claimed actually to have caught the ball after it came sailing through the posts into his seat.

But the prize contribution was from a fan who admitted that, perhaps, he had taken a few snorts. "I was there on the 50-yard line when the kick was made," he wrote, "and I know the kick was good. I saw two balls and two sets of goal posts and I know damn well that one of those balls went through one set of those goal posts."

Giants Rebound With Crushing Power

Nothing is as unpredictable as these Redskin-Giant affairs. When the two clubs met in Washington last year, the Redskins won, 21 to 7. And when they played later in the season in New York, the Giants won, and the score was 21 to 7. Down through the 18-game series between the two clubs, dating from 1932, the Giants have scored 196 points and the Redskins 184.

The Redskins' 35-21 game with the Bears would have sent Washington hopes booming for a victory over the Giants this week, except for some disquieting proceedings in New York at the same time. The Giants, who had been licked by the Dodgers and Cardinals on successive weeks, roused themselves and swatted the Cleveland Rams, 49-14. This was the same Cleveland team that the Redskins had beaten by only four points.

The Redskins will be meeting the Giants at a time when Steve Owen's offense has begun to roll. The Giants were weakened by the departure of Frank Reagan into the Marines and with Minnesota's George Franck something of a flop, Owen's running attack was pretty horrible except when Leemans had the ball. But on the same day that this department pointed out that Franck was flopping all over the premises as a pro football player, Franck scored two touchdowns against Cleveland, one after a 38-yard punt return, and another on a 44-yard gallop with a pass. It hasn't made the Redskins happy.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Nov. 18.—WHAT INTERESTS YOU, BUDDY? BASKETBALL?—The Babe Ruth of the game, 6-foot-3½ Hank Luisetti, will pack them in at Madison Square Garden tomorrow night at the opening of the Golden Jubilee basketball tournament. The Stanford, All America, now the star of the Phillips 66 team, will be seen in action against the Ohrbach Club, made up mostly of New York College players. The National A. A. U. champions, Twentieth Century Fox, takes on the Roanoke, Va., Legionnaires. The winners play it off next Monday.

CONSIDINE

Some of this may sound a little on the minor league side, but the brand of basketball doesn't promise to be. These four amateur clubs come close to being the four best teams in the country—or the world, for that matter, for the game which Doc Naismith invented just 50 years ago is world-wide. We doubt if four college teams or pro teams could be found to hold these four clubs which have been invited to play for the fund which will build a basketball hall of fame in Naismith's memory at Springfield, Mass.

Luisetti is now 25 and probably is a finer player today than he was for Stanford, where he become one of the few men in basketball history to rise above the anonymity of the sport. The Ruthian deeds he turned in as a collegian—he scored 50 points against a strong Duquesne team—continue today.

Hank's Name Is Box Office Magic

Last year, after he regained his amateur standing (he turned pro to make a basketball picture) Luisetti played for the Olympic Club of San Francisco and was chiefly responsible for a string of attendance records. He scored 540 points in 30 games, after a two-year layoff. When an injury forced him to cancel an appearance in Oakland, the box office was rushed by irate fans demanding their dough back. He has never failed to sell out the Garden, nor has he ever failed to bring the mob to its feet with his incredible floor play and great one-handed shooting. The fellow has averaged 18 points a game through his career.

"I've seen most of them," Chuck Hyatt, former Pitt star now coaching the Phillips team, said today. "I mean Beckman, Holman, Dennert, Banks and the others who were gifted for this game. But this kid is the last word. He was born for this game. I've never seen him make a mistake. He's just one of those guys who come along once a generation with just the right combination of speed, reflexes, good hands, good eyes and class."

Luisetti is a quiet, good-natured Italian-American who grew up near the neighborhoods which produced Joe Cronin, Joe DiMaggio, Frank Crosetti and other San Franciscans of note in the sports world. It so happened that his playground stressed basketball; not baseball. He was just another player in high school, but at Stanford he was an All America as a soph, and kept getting better.

He doesn't like to talk about himself. "This is a team game," he told me. "I get as much of a kick out of passing the ball to the man who shoots the basket, as shooting it myself."

A Vote For "Leemans' Day

FOOTBALL?—Let me swing in with a loud "yea" to the suggestion that December 7 be set aside as "Tuffy Leemans Day" at the Polo Grounds. As one whose job and joy it was to whack the cymbals for Leemans, back in the days when he was famed only around the macadam campus of George Washington University, we feel that Leemans has done much to sell pro football to the public. The public would be glad to reciprocate by signally honoring Tuffy. We're not being polyannish when we say there isn't a finer bloke in football, and that darn few better ball-carriers ever drew a breath.

Incidentally, a lot of us have a new appreciation of how great a job Bernie Bierman is doing at Minnesota, now that we've seen Michigan. Against Columbia, Michigan looked good enough to hold its own in the National League. It had everything, plus Tommy Kuzma and Bob Westfall. It might have won 50-0, but didn't want to rub it in. What a club Minnesota, conquerer of the Wolverines, must be!

Race Body Won't Lift Suspension

Trainer's Attempt To Keep His Horses In Condition Fails; Simon Suspended

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, Nov. 18.—The Maryland Racing Commission today denied a request by Trainer J. H. (Bud) Stotler, now under suspension as the result of the alleged stimulation of the horse One Tip, to allow his horses to be conditioned and raced by another conditioner, pending the outcome of his case.

The body set November 27 as the date of a hearing for Stotler, formerly trainer for Alfred G. Vanderbilt.

At a meeting this morning, the commission also revoked the training license of Moe Simon, Baltimore horsema:, who recently was convicted and fined in the local criminal court for cruelty to animals in connection with the "nerving" of the plater Meadow Morn.

While Stotler was unsuccessful in obtaining permission to keep his horses in action, he has been granted permission for a series of tests on One Tip to determine whether a tonic, prescribed by a veterinarian, was responsible for the positive findings of the saliva test.

One Tip has been shipped from Pimlico to Bowie and is now stabled along with horses owned by Chester F. Hockley, chairman of the Maryland Racing Commission. Trainer Johnny Forbes, who conditions horses for Hockley, had the horse on the track today for a short gallop. A track policeman watched the workout and later stood guard at the stall.

It is understood that One Tip will be given the exact treatment that Stotler said preceded his winning race at Pimlico, and that following this a State chemist will secure saliva to determine if benzedrine, the drug reported to have shown after One Tip's race, again shows.

Bruin Sextet Swamps Weak Americans, 7-2

By the Associated Press

Boston, Nov. 19.—The renamed Brooklyn Americans afforded the Boston Bruins their customary feeble opposition tonight, with the result that the Stanley Cup hockey champions pulled out a one-sided 7-2 victory before a slim crowd of 8000 at the Boston Garden.

The Bruins had to overcome the Amerks' early 2-1 lead before gaining their third straight National Hockey League win in four nights.

After Roy Conacher opened the scoring during the fourth minute of play, Rookies Bill Benson and Fred Thurier each rammed bucks through Frankie Brimsek, the Boston goalie, with the assistance of Mel (Sudden Death) Hill, who performed for the Bruins last season.

The second Brooklyn tally aroused the Bruins and three of them swarmed through the enemy defense and blasted the veteran Earl Robertson for six more tallies. Those registering twice were Bill Cowley, the league's highest scorer last season. Milt Schmidt and Bill (Flash) Hollett.

Maple Leafs Win Over Rangers, 8-6

New York, Nov. 18 (AP).—The Toronto Maple Leafs, stretching their winning streak to four games, won a high-scoring National Hockey League game over New York Rangers, 8-6, tonight and went into first place in the standings.

Center Syl Apps and Pete Langelle each scored two goals to lead the Leafs to a well-deserved victory in a game in which they always held the edge in offensive play. Other successful marksmen for the visitors were Gordon Drillon, Dave Schriner, Bob Davidson and Lorne Carr, the recent acquisition from the Brooklyn Americans.

Lyn Patrick scored twice for the Rangers, who took their third straight defeat and were crowded out of a tie for fourth place by the Boston Bruins who won at home against the Americans. Norm Tustin and Grant Warwick, rookies, and Veterans Neil and Mac Colville each scored once to complete the rout of the goalies.

Western Maryland Soccer Team Cages Bucknell, 3 to 2

Westminster, Md., Nov. 18.—Western Maryland's soccer team presented a mild surprise today when it nosed out Bucknell, 3 to 2, in a hard-fought contest.

The Bisons went ahead in the first period when a goal was scored by Yost. Frank Turbutton, Terror cocaptain, scored in the second and third frames to send the Terrors ahead, only to have the score tied when Lewis sank a long shot for the visitors.

Grid Pros' Meeting Reset for Dec. 1

Chicago, Nov. 18 (AP).—Commissioner Elmer Layden said today the meeting of National League pro football club owners, scheduled for tomorrow to formulate plans for possible division play-offs and the championship game, had been postponed until December 1.

By that time, Layden explained, the play-off possibilities may be more clearly defined. The meeting will be held in Philadelphia.

Bob Zuppke's Successor Is Undecided

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Nov. 19.—Several former Illini gridiron stars were mentioned as possible successors to Bob Zuppke as head Illinois football coach today as the university's board of trustees took cognizance of his surprise resignation and named Doug Miller permanent director of athletics.

The trustees, admittedly as surprised as anyone by the decision of the 62-year-old mentor to relinquish a post he'd held 29 years, deferred formal action on the matter. They did, however, present the telegram in which Zuppke yesterday announced he was quitting after Saturday's Illini-Northwestern game and thereby touched off a round of speculation on his successor.

Mills had been one of those mentioned and it was known Zuppke favored him for the post. In naming him permanent athletic director effective next September 1, however, the trustees recommended he give up his assistant football coaching duties. After today's session, Mills said he had no thought of succeeding Zuppke and the field apparently was wide open.

Don Peden, who has been highly successful as football coach at Ohio University, was listed as a possible choice. Other former Illini stars mentioned were Burt Ingwersen, present Northwestern line coach; Ray Elliott, now on the Illini coaching staff, and Harold (Red) Grange, most famous star Zuppke ever produced. Chuck Palmer, former Northwestern star, now a Chicago high school coach, also was mentioned as a possible choice.

The trustees made no comment on the situation except to emphasize it would be handled in routine manner. The school's athletic association board will cancass the field then make its recommendation to President A. C. Willard, who will make his report to the trustees. The trustees must approve the final

55,000 Fans Expected to See Redskins Battle Giants Sunday

Advance Sale Reported Heaviest of Season; More Than 5000 Going From Washington

The Redskins are apparently headed for a fourth consecutive season as the league's leading gate attraction on the home and foreign fields in the National Pro League, according to games played to date.

In the five victories and three defeats this season the Washington club has played to an average of better than 28,000 fans a game, with the biggest crowd in Griffith Stadium to see the Giant game—35,000—and the smallest in Pittsburgh to see the Redskins-Steelers, 18,000.

The Redskin management yesterday received an order from the New York Giant office to close reservations for Sunday's game in New York by 6 o'clock tonight, the earliest the request has ever been made.

Thus Redskin fans who have reserved seats for the game which will go a long way toward deciding the Eastern champion, must pick up the tickets tonight or lose them.

Heaviest Advance Sale

The advance sale in New York is the heaviest of the year to date and from present indications the Polo Grounds will be packed to its capacity of more than 55,000. The Redskins hold the honor of drawing the largest National League crowd to the Giant field, a turn-away mob of some 60,000 in 1938. Only the Red Grange day of nearly a decade ago found more New Yorkers attending a pro grid encounter.

Special trains will leave here Sunday morning starting at 7:30 a. m. General Manager Jack Espey, of the Redskins, said yesterday the local followers would probably ex-

Va. Drought May Delay Game Season

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Nov. 18.—With the upland game-hunting season opening set for Thursday in the eastern section of the State, fire wardens in three counties in the Richmond area said today they would seek a postponement of the opening hunting date until the drought ends because of the acute fire hazard.

The possibility that some State action might be taken to allay the danger was seen in the action of Game Commission Chairman Carl H. Nolting, who said he had contacted members of the commission to see if they would be able to assemble at an early date. He was unable to say what action could be taken, however, because the law requires a published notice ten days prior to any change in the announced season. In any event, the commission will not be able to make a change before Thursday.

The fire wardens of Chesterfield, Henrico and Hanover Counties were the three who said they would seek the postponement.

Meanwhile, F. C. Pederson, State forester of the conservation commission, warned hunters to exercise the greatest care with fire when they take to the abnormally dry woods and fields Thursday.

Eli Forwards Stop Harvard's 'T' Formation

By the Associated Press

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 18.—Harvard's version of the T-formation got no place today against two alert Yale lines as Coach Spike Nelson worked his Elis far into the dark in preparation for their climax game of the season Saturday.

ARMY'S MAUPIN OUT

West Point, N. Y.—Jere Maupin, speedy triple-threat back from Glendale, Calif., apparently has played his last game with the Army eleven. Maupin was kept out of the Columbia, Notre Dame and Harvard contests because of a leg injury. He saw brief action in the Penn game, but suffered an ankle hurt that is expected to sideline him for the remainder of the season.

EAGLE DOWNCAST

Newton, Mass.—Still downcast because of their defeat by Tennessee, Boston College football forces went through a light workout for the coming intracity battle with Boston University. Ed Doherty, quarterback, was out for the drill but was not allowed to participate in the contact work.

CLIFF BATTLES DRILLS

New York—Columbia's battered and bruised football forces were so depleted of able manpower that Assistant Coaches Cliff Battles and Gerry Seidel were forced to play in the second string backfield.

HARVARD HAS TROUBLE

Cambridge, Mass.—For the second consecutive day Harvard's regulars had difficulty stopping the scrubs' version of the Yale aerial attack.

TWO RAMS DEMOTED

New York.—Coach Jim Crowley demoted two of his starting oacks to the second string and sent another to the third team as the Fordham Rams romped through a routine drill stressing pass defense.

FIVE JASPERS RETURN

New York.—Five Manhattan regulars, who weren't expected to be healed until Thursday's game with Georgetown, reported for a workout today but Coach Herb Kopf kept the physical contact work at a minimum.

Major Leagues' Meetings Moved to Chicago Dec. 9-11

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 18.—Ford Frick, president of the National League, announced today that the senior circuit had waived its right to name the site of the annual major league baseball meetings, and that the National and American Leagues would hold their individual and joint sessions at Chicago December 9-11.

The leagues originally had been scheduled to meet at New York on the same dates. The shift was made, apparently, because of the recent illness of Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis and William Harridge, American League president. Both have their offices in Chicago.

The minor league meeting will be held at Jacksonville, Fla., December 4-6.

Rowland Gets Manager Post

Los Angeles, Nov. 18 (AP).—Clarence (Pants) Rowland, of Chicago, for many years a prominent figure in major league baseball, was named today to take charge of the Los Angeles baseball club in its reorganization by the parent Chicago Cub management.

Rowland, due here in several days, has been in baseball since 1903. He managed the Chicago White Sox from 1915 to 1918, winning the pennant in 1917. He was an umpire in the American League from 1923 to 1927, became a major league scout soon afterward and joined the Cubs in 1931. He has served both as a scout and in an executive capacity for the Cubs.

2225 at Riverside See Local Hockey Team Fight Losing Battle

By Jack Munhall

Eastern Amateur League hockey was back in town last night, rough and ready as ever, and the Washington Eagles continued defense as many matches, 4-3, before 2225 fans at Riverside Stadium.

In a match bespattered with blood and littered with penalties, the Eagles fought uphill from start to finish, but they had no excuses. For late in the third period, trailing by one goal, they were unable to take advantage of two near-simultaneous penalties against the Rovers.

The last two minutes of the game, which was climaxed by a fist fight between Washington's Paul Corteau and New York's Walter Kyle, the Eagles hammered at the Rovers' cage without success.

The Rovers scored what proved the deciding goal at 12:05 of the final period when a quick two-man break caught the Washington defense napping and enabled Center Gil Nordin to register his second goal of the night.

Eagles Again Come Back

Nordin grabbed the puck at his own blue line after a Washington rush failed, carried it unmolested across the Eagles' penalty line and then fed it to Howie Hollinger who had followed him all the way. By this time Len Burrage, veteran Washington defenseman, had gotten back, but he couldn't stop Hollinger's return pass to Nordin who scored easily.

Washington came back to threaten the Rovers' comfortable lead with a goal at 13:05 by Paul Corteau, assisted by Center Tom McCormack, outstanding of the new Eagles' players, but couldn't put over the one needed to tie.

They were given a hoped for opportunity when Walter Kyle drew a tripping penalty and Gordon Davidson one for illegal checking within one minute. That left the Rovers with only four players against the Eagles' six for one minute and with but five players for another two minutes.

Rovers' First Victory

But the New Yorkers managed to hold, even as the Eagles had done in the opening period when they were socked with six penalties, while the Rovers had one inflicted on them.

It was New York's first victory of the season after a tie and a loss, but neither the Rovers nor the Eagles was a good hockey team last night. The shooting by both teams was unusually ragged, even for an early season match, and the Eagles were guilty of many bad errors on defense.

Washington scored first on a shot by McCormack, but that's the last time they held the advantage. The broad-shouldered recruit poked the puck past New York Goalie Gerald Cosby, a holdover from last year, at 6:39, after Leith Allen's shot had been turned aside.

The Rovers tied the count at 9:37 of the period when "Red" Tilson

D. C. Schoolboys Impressive in 'Bowl' Work

Work Well In 1st Drill At Stadium

Coaches O'Leary And Augusterfer Pleased With Squad To See Action Nov. 29

By Bill Burnett

With startling rapidity a mythical all-star team began the transformation into a powerful working unit yesterday at Griffith Stadium, where the 1941 All-Metropolitan schoolboy football squad took the first practice steps toward a march on the Richmond Tobacco Bowl November 29.

Under Coaches Gene Augusterfer and Jim O'Leary, the boys selected by Washington's scholastic grid teachers as best in town forgot the various systems they've used all year and worked smoothly, willingly and cleverly into the modified T-formation they will hurl at Richmond. After only half the two-hour drill there was already evidence of stiff rivalry between players for the 30 squad berths on the invading force.

Coach Is Pleased

Chief absentees from the drill were members of Central Anacostia, Washington-Lee, Bullis Prep, and George Washington High elevens, all now preparing for championship games tomorrow. These will report at Friday's session, swelling the squad to its full strength.

Augusterfer, who took charge of ends and backs, was openly pleased with All-Metro prospects.

"Give us three more days of learning plays," he said as darkness settled over the huge park Clark Griffith has lent the All-Metro team free of charge," and then we'll get our timing. These boys are working like they meant it, so we'll be clicking soon. We ought to whip any team with all this material."

Particularly impressive as is his custom, was Gonzaga's Elmer Raba, who handled part of the kicking and most of the passing. Harold Krug, the rugged plunger from St. John's, also shone in the booting department. In the quarterback slot was Reds Murphy, on one flank was George McGowan, Devitt's flashy runner, and the fullback post was held down by hard-charging Tom Chisari.

Reaction Is Same

Across the field, where O'Leary sent guards and tackles through their paces, the reaction was the same.

"Look at the weight on those boys," O'Leary exulted. "And they're fast enough for anybody's team. If they can't furnish a forward wall for the D. C. representation, nobody can."

Biggest of O'Leary's charges was Bev Miller, St. Albans 225-pound tackle, and the smallest in point of stature was Ben Johnson, 5-foot-4 guard of Gonzaga. Other standouts were Jim O'Keefe, All-Metro first-team tackle of Gonzaga; Roosevelt's Stan Silverman, and Devitt's Francis Manilli.

Work will be continued today at 3:30 at the stadium. A day off will be enjoyed tomorrow, but it starts all over at 1 p. m. Friday. By Saturday there will be some idea of the squad which will be selected to go to the Tobacco Bowl, an American Legion sponsored classic for the benefit of Boys' State, a summer camp for boys in Virginia.

The Stars Come Out—for Tobacco Bowl Drill

What Next? Now It's a 'Cocktail' Clutch at Arena

The "Wrestling Bartender" will make his local bow professionally on tomorrow night's wrestling show at Turner's Arena when George Bruckman, a local lad, goes against Stanley Pinto, the Bohemian Bomber, in a 30-minute bout.

Bruckman, bartender at a local hotel, will feature his own version of the "cocktail cluth." He has been wrestling for the last five years as an amateur and recently turned professional in a Newark ring.

Promoter Joe Turner, who hasn't seen a good local prospect since he came along three decades ago to win the world middleweight title, thinks Bruckman is a good prospect.

Nat Singh, the "cobra clutch" king, will headline the show, facing George (K. O.) Koverly, the wild-swinging West Coast villain.

Pat Fraley will tangle with Fred Carone; Big Jim Henry (the Green Hornet) will engage Frank Judson and Ace Freeman will go against Babe Caddock.

News of Bowling in D. C., Md. and Va.:

PINFALL —By John Chaney

It's really hard to figure the favorite in the Dixie Classic, scheduled Saturday. All of the leading bowlers from Washington, Maryland and Virginia will be out to gain new glory and the winner's purse that will amount to $500. The Dixie, which will be rolled in three blocks of five games each at Lafayette, 2 p. m.; Lucky Strike, 5 p. m., and the finale at Convention Hall at 9 p. m., is one of the greatest events in duckpin bowling in the country. For the caliber of bowlers entering, the event goes on record as being next to the United States Classic in importance.

To get down to the bowlers themselves, there are several local pinmen who, based on their past performance, figure to have a fine chance at this major title. Number 1 in our book is young Billy Stalcup from over Rosslyn way, who last weekend won the Ice Palace Open, when he shot a truly great set of 1431 for the 10 games to nose out Winnie Guerke, of Baltimore. Guerke, by the way, will be right in the thick of the fight, as he always is. He holds the world's record score for 10 games, his record total being 1482.

Other Washington bowlers who are conceded a real chance in this event include Lou Jenkins, who, after a fine start in sweeps this year, bogged down in the Ice Palace tourney to finish well down the line. Perce Wolfe, the Hyattsville champ, will be in there and his total may be counted on to be well near the top. Perce hasn't had the best of luck in tourneys to date, but with a little good fortune on his side, he might make the grade in the Dixie.

Hokie Smith, the defending champ, has not been in tournament form so far this season and it looks like he won't be able to make the grade.

However, if you're looking for an outstanding contender to follow in the tournament it might be well to get on the bandwagon of one of a number of Connecticut's top rankers who are expected to be present. Nick Tronsky, who won this event in 1937 and always a crowd pleaser, looks like the one to beat from the north, if he is able to make the trip. Others who are shooting fine scores in the Connecticut State League and in sweepstakes up north are Mac Carboni and little Bill Tato. Last year Carboni finished seventh, while Tato wound up in ninth position. Tronsky, after a brilliant start in the first block when he shot a beautiful 691 set, faltered and dropped out of the money in the later sessions. This is unusual for Nick, who probably is the most consistent high scorer in the game, as his three straight wins for the United States all-events championship will testify.

Other Baltimore bowlers who have a good chance in the event include Johnny Miller, who finished second to Smith last year with a 2025 total; Al Neubert, who was fourth with 1991, and Nick Paye, who rolled 1956 for sixth place.

Last year's field of 80 bowlers may be exceeded this year, and if it is it will be a new record for a 15-game event. Entry fee is $25.

As a preliminary to the Dixie, the Connecticut Blue Ribbons will take on some of the leading local bowlers in doubles and singles affairs at the Lucky Strike drives Friday night at 8 p. m.

Harry Peters, who won the United States Classic last year will be the main pin smasher in the Connecticut lineup, while Hokie Smith, Ed Blakeney, Bill Krauss and Fred Murphy will be on the line for Washington.

Tick Thumm and Allen Liebler, a couple of the best from down Norfolk way, will be on hand to take on any or all of the others, so an evening of thrills is in store for the fans.

United States participation in Pan-American games at Buenos Aires in 1942 were outlined to sports representatives from all over the country tonight by Avery Brundage, chairman of the United States committee for the games.

New York, Nov. 18.—Plans for Many problems are connected with the undertaking, he told the sports leaders who came here to organize the groups which will choose and direct the United States teams for the various branches of competition.

"The Pan-American games are to be held November 21 to December 6, 1942, and most of the athletes will have to depart by next October, leaving only 11 months in which to organize and finance this important international venture," he said.

The size of the teams in the various divisions—track and field, swimming, boxing, baseball, basketball, tennis, and other sports—would be left to the committees in charge of the various branches, he said, but reminded them of their obligation to finance their own way and gave an estimate of the cost of sending each athlete to the games as $800 by boat or $1200 by air.

Unofficial estimates of the probable size of the entire United States delegation was placed at 150 competitors and the minimum funds needed to finance the expedition as $175,000.

Springfield Tops Pittsburgh Six, 3-1

By International News Service

Springfield, Mass., Nov. 18.—Two goals by Bill Summerhill led Springfield to a 3-to-1 victory over the Pittsburgh Hornets tonight and pulled the Indians to within one point of idle New Haven at the top of the Eastern division of the American Hockey League.

All the scoring came in the second period.

Navy Gridders Drill Against Princeton Play

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Nov. 18.—Navy's football squad participated in an offensive and defensive spot scrimmage today against the junior varsity which used Princeton plays.

Middie Coach Swede Larson said the last hard contact work for Saturday's game at Princeton would be held tomorrow. Bill Chip, reserve blocking back who broke his finger recently, hasn't done any heavy duty and may not be available against the Tigers, Larson said.

Clyde Siegfried, another blocking back whose shoulder was injured, and Casey Ploszay, sub back who ready for Saturday's contest, Larson underwent an appendectomy several weeks ago, are both in shape and announced.

The sailor mentor said he had not made any changes in his two teams.

Ray Robinson Fight Awaits Furr or Zivic

Ray (Sugar) Robinson, outstanding contender for the world's welterweight boxing championship and the hottest box office attraction since Henry Armstrong, will box Phil Furr here in the not distant future in the event Furr defeats Fritzie Zivic, former world welterweight champion, in their scheduled 10-round feature at Uline's Arena November 26.

Matchmaker Johnny Attell, who arrived here yesterday to close out final details for the show, was authority for this announcement upon his arrival here yesterday.

"I also sounded out Robinson regarding the possibility of his boxing a return go with Zivic here in the event Fritzie whips Furr, but it's no go," Attell admitted. "That leaves it squarely up to Phil to beat Zivic, the man Furr claims repeatedly ran out on him while Fritzie was champion."

Many believe Furr has a fine opportunity of upsetting Zivic, and will be backing him. For one thing the former soldier boy seldom has failed to make good when confronted with the opportunity of landing a major bout, and again Phil admittedly will be playing the role of hungry fighter.

Goldie Ahearn, who is assisting Attell in rounding out the supporting card, is one who champions the local boy's chances.

"Phil's just about in the same spot now that Zivic was a few years ago when he won the championship," Goldie cites. "Zivic upset Henry Armstrong at a time everybody considered Armstrong invincible, and followed up with a knockout of Hammerin' Hank in a return go."

Billiard Exhibition Is Slated at Arcade

Arcade Billiard Room will be the scene of an outstanding exhibition at 2:30 and 7:30 p. m. today when Willie Mosconi, former national pocket billiard champion, meets a local star in a 25-point match. A display of fancy shots also will be given by Mosconi.

Maryland Must Upset W. L. To Improve on Recent Records

Despite all talk about the poor record of Maryland's current football team, it is quite possible that the 1941 Terrapin eleven will prove the school's best since 1937. All they need to do to improve on the accomplishments of their predecessors of the last three years is to beat Washington and Lee tomorrow at Baltimore Stadium.

Maryland, if victorious over W. & L., will wind up its season with three victories, one tie and five defeats. In 1938 and 1939 they won only two games in nine and last season it was two victories, one tie and six setbacks.

On comparative scores, W. and L. will rate the favorite's role over Maryland. The Generals tied Davidson, 13 to 13, and V. M. I., which beat Maryland, 27 to 0, was able to beat Davidson by only 13 to 6.

This will be the sixteenth game between the Generals and the Terps, with Maryland holding the series edge with eight victories as against five defeats and two ties. Last year their game ended in a 7-7 tie at College Park, with the Generals deadlocking the count on a 99-yard march late in the game.

Analyzing the teams, it would appear that Maryland has the better offense; W. and L. the superior defense. Therefore, a close battle is expected.

Generals Busy

Lexington, Va., Nov. 18 (AP).—Washington and Lee footballers worked until after dark today preparing for the game with Maryland Thursday. The full squad will start the trip tomorrow morning.

The drill today was the last one of the season. In accordance with school tradition, the squad tossed Senior Manager Allen Overton and Trainer Trent in the swimming pool at the conclusion of practice.

Two Baltimore boys, Harry and Joe Baugher, both backs, will be in the starting line-up against the Terrapins.

Seven George Washington Players End Careers Tomorrow

Colonials Are Drilled On Defense

Wake Forest Slated To Rely on Aerials In Stadium Battle Tomorrow Afternoon

Seven seniors will close their college football careers for George Washington tomorrow afternoon at Griffith Stadium when the Colonials meet Wake Forest's Deacons.

Unfortunately, not all will be in the starting lineup and injuries will prevent a pair of them from seeing any action. The injured are Johnny Picco, a fine end, and Walter Welc, a blocking back.

Those who will see service for the last time under the Buff and Blue colors are Walter Fedora, star fullback, who has had a good season despite his team's poor record; Burnell (Stubby) Martinson, quarterback and the squad's workhorse; Stan Ziobro, the guard, who played several games at end this season and then returned to his natural position; Paul Nugent, fullback, and John Clarey, reserve tackle.

Two Are Drafted

Three other seniors concluded their college grid careers several weeks ago. They include Matt Zunic, an end who has turned his attention to basketball, a game at which he excels; Dan Douglas, another end has signed up with C. A. A., and Floyd McGlinn, a guard, is sidelined with a broken hand.

Frank August and Mike Monchlovich, end and center respectively, would have finished this year had they not been drafted. But since neither played any part of a game they are eligible for another year of competition.

Expecting Wake Forest to make widespread use of passes, Coach Bill Reinhart has drilled his men hard on defense against the overhead game. The Deacons' great tailback, Red Cochran, looms as one of the deadliest aerial artists the Colonials have encountered this season.

Deacons Arrive Tomorrow

Wake Forest will leave for Washington tonight, arriving here early tomorrow morning. The squad is in fine shape except for Pat Greer, 6-foot 3-inch end, who bruised an ankle in the Clemson game. Even so, Greer probably will be used tomorrow, since he is a great pass receiver.

Attesting to Wake Forest's ability as a passing team is its record to date, of 59 completions in 152 tries for an average of a fraction over one completion per three passes. Total yards gained from these passed is 981.

The Deacons' leading pass receivers have been Johnny Perry, fleet wingback with 19 catches for a total gain of 191 yards, Greer with 16 completions for 264 yards, and Herb Cling 12 completions for 210 yards.

Southern Cal. Off For 'Near-Hopeless' Game With Irish

Los Angeles, Nov. 18 (AP).—Given a final send-off cheer by hundreds of supporters, the University of Southern California football squad headed east tonight for its annual clash with the Irish of Notre Dame.

The four-times-beaten Trojans had little upon which to base hopes for a win, but they figure to give the Irish a contest.

"We should show marked improvement," said Coach Sam Barry.

Chief ground-gainer for U. S. C., Bobby Robertson, has been hampered by leg bruises but should be in excellent condition.

Lesnevich Cleared In Girl's Death

Hackensack, N. J., Nov. 18 (AP).—A jury in Bergen County Circuit Court today returned a verdict of $5,000 against Nils T. Granlund, stage producer, but found no cause for action against Gus Lesnevich, world light-heavyweight boxing champion, in a $50,000 damage suit in which the two were co-defendants.

Henry Argenti, of Warren Avenue, Fort Lee, brought the suit after the death of his daughter, Beatrice, on August 11, 1939, in Queens County, N. Y., in a collision of automobiles driven by Lesnevich and Granlund. The girl was a passenger in the boxer's car.

Lesnevich, in court today wearing dark glasses, denied from the witness stand that he had been negligent. The fighter suffered an eye injury in defeating Tami Mauriello in a boxing bout last week.

Younger's Ring Victory Streak Ended by Veteran

Brooklyn, Nov. 18 (AP).—Mickey Farber, 134½, New York veteran, stopped the victory streak of Morris Reif at 23 tonight by winning from the Brooklyn youngster by a technical knockout in the seventh round. Reif weighed 138.

Reif was making his first start as a windup fighter and in the second had Farber in distress. The veteran weathered the storm, however, and after the fifth scored almost at will. Referee Jack O'Sullivan halted the bout to protect Reif.

OUT HUNTING . .

The Wrong Way:

The Right Way:

Drawings by Jack Bell.

The opening of the Virginia and Maryland upland game hunting season got away with a very good start generally, with weather and temperature most agreeable. The woods and fields were covered with hunters but the bag was very small, compared with the numbers of game seen, and ammunition fired.

The woods are extremely dry, with loose dry leaves ankle deep everywhere. The brush is dry and brittle and breaks at the slightest touch with a loud crack. It was impossible to get close enough to game for a fair shot.

The rabbit hunter, using hounds, had the best chance and his bag was very good but his dogs could not take the going long. The hounds would jump the rabbit and had to chase mostly by sight, which was fast going, and could not be kept up for very long before their feet became very sore.

If hunters want to be good conservationists and at the same time insure more game in the bag for themselves, they should pay more attention to how they hunt, according to the Pennsylvania Game Commission.

The person who goes afield overlooks most of the game he hunts in many cases because he does not know where to look for it, and in many cases, especially with this dry season, he does not take—time—to look for it. It is not the amount of ground one covers, it is how well it is covered. "Know the topography of your hunting grounds," says the commission. "By so doing you will save yourself many tiresome steps, and in the woods prevent yourself from getting confused or lost, also result in more game in the bag."

One of the features of the menu will be sturgeon. This sturgeon, we understand, was caught in the St. Lawrence, especially for this dinner, by Dr. Jean L. Trembly, supervisor of fisheries in the Gaspe Peninsula. Another gesture will be roasted ring-necked pheasant.

Hundreds of hunters destined to die in accidents in the fields, marshes and woods this fall and thousands of those slated for injury, can escape that destiny by following ordinary rules of common sense in their use of firearms.

Study the illustrations here intended as reminders. If first in line, don't carry your gun over your shoulder . . . if last in line . . . don't carry a gun pointing forward. Best practice is for men to walk side by side, each carrying his gun in the hollow of his arm.

Although walking in single file is not recommended, it sometimes is necessary. Then be sure that you gun is not pointed at your companion. The safe method of carrying your gun is quite obvious in the illustration.

Loaded guns should never be carried in an automobile. A bump in the road or an excited dog

Kingsolver's 445 Set Tops Pin Matches

Billy Kingsolver combined five spares and two strikes in the first seven boxes of his third game in the O. A. S. I League at the Ice Palace and came up with a 162 total, which followed singles of 158 and 125 for a splendid 445 set, one of the highest of the year outside the District League. Kingsolver's Accounting Control team won three from Adjudication No. 4 and posted high set of 1620 as well, but Adjudication No. 8 won high team game with 565 to take two from Recovery, with Grover Sheppard contributing 359 to the losers.

BROOKLAND

Charley Smith, of the Ray Steelers, aided his team in taking the old tilt from Shoreham with individual highs of 159 and 394 in the Diamond Cab League at Brookland Recreation. The Service Station quintet scored a sweep over Hotels and posted team highs of 578 and 1664. Hartley's 119-338 aided the Greyhounds in a three-game win over the Walter Reed boys.

SILVER SPRING

Mildred Brockdorff had 143 for high individual game in the Maryland-District Ladies' League at Silver Spring and helped her Sandford's, Inc., quintet to the odd game over Esslinger's Little Man Ale and high team game of 554. Alma Mehler, Kopy Kats, sparkled her team to high set of 1618 with her own 376 effort and the team scored a sweep over Corr's Sport Shop.

MOUNT RAINIER

Mandley Kennemore had 161 for high single in the East Washington Church League at Mount Rainier which led his Petworth boys to team highs of 585-1713 and a sweep over Anacostia. Brock Bruton, Douglas No. 1, led for individual set with his 402. The St. George team whitewashed Bradburn.

CLARENDON

FORT DAVIS

The Tom Boorde's Service individuals and team won all the glory last night in the Commercial League at Fort Davis when Ed Seay banged out a 172 single and 407 set to boost his boys to team highs with 618-1695 and three games from Washington Navy Yard. Ed Cleary had 390 in an odd-game win by H. & J. Construction over Capital City Cleaners, while 134-380 by Arthur Dove of Washington Gas led to the first and last games from Nine Seventy-five Optical. Mike Young's Cafe won two from Avenue Grill with Pessitore's 135-367 despite Bill Buckle's 145-398.

MERCHANTS LEAGUE

Although his Southern Iron Works team lost two to Harris Plumbing, Ragland had the high game of the match with a 135. Watts and Saunders won the odd game from Smith's Food Store as Wiltshire shot 126-329. Roland's 129 and Roger Thornett's 334 aided Crumps Esso Service to win two from Woody's Texaco. B. J. Vos won two from Turner's Studio despite Capt. Vos' high game of 127. Red Diamond swept the match with Barnes and Ford Furniture as Stuart led the charge with a fine 351 set.

Cavaliers End Short Drill For Tarheels

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 18.—The shortest period the University of Virginia football squad has had to prepare for a game in recent seasons ended with a stiff workout today, and the Cavaliers set their course tomorrow morning for Chapel Hill, where a final rehearsal will be staged for Thursday's climax battle with North Carolina.

Having no new injury troubles by getting by last Saturday's clash with Lehigh with hardly a scratch, Coach Frank Murray was able to make the most of the two full practice days allotted him and divided them between thoroughgoing defensive and offensive drills. Otherwise, the squad is at full strength and hopeful of putting the finishing touches on an almost perfect season.

With Bill Dudley at the throttle, the Cavaliers have been driving their T-formation offense in high gear, overpowering Hampden-Sydney, 41-0; Lafayette, 25-0; Richmond, 44-0; V. M. I., 27-7; Virginia Tech, 34-0; Washington and Lee, 27-7, and Lehigh, 34-0, losing only a hairline 19-21 decision to Yale back in early October.

The brilliant Virginia captain, approaching the end of his spectacular collegiate career at the age of 19, set a burning pace all the way to rank at the top or nearby on national scoring and ground-gaining lists during the entire season.

Dudley's total yardage from rushing, passing and punt returns, with smaller amounts coming from pass receivinig and kickoff returns, is in excess of 2000 yards, and he has had a hand in 178 of Virginia's 251 points. He holds a personal collection of 112 on 15 touchdowns, 19 extra points and 1 field goal, having scored in every game, and 11 of his passes went for touchdowns for an additional 66 points.

Ranking next to Dudley in offensive effectiveness, Bryant has averaged better than 5 yards in carrying the ball 212 yards. He figured in 14 pass completions for 148 yards and returned punts 214, scoring 5 touchdowns.

Next in line is Herbert Munhall, 190-pound sophomore line crasher, who has averaged 3.5 yards in 255 yards of ball carrying and scored 4 touchdowns.

The starring trio of pass-catching ends also accounted for a large quota of points, Billy Hill leading the way with 4 touchdowns in snagging eight passes good for 159 yards. Jim White scored three times in picking up 120 yards on seven completions, while Bill Preston has been limited to one touchdown, but is the top receiver with 19 catches and a total of 297 yards.

Along with such line standouts as Bill Suhling, center, and Jack Sauerbeck, the ends also have held up their end in limiting opponents to a collective total of two touchdowns by rushing, the other three coming on passes and a blocked kick.

Soccerists Promise Hot Battle

Crew of Agamemnon And Regals Fling Boasts, Challenges

Threats and predictions are being freely made by both sides on the outcome of tomorrow's soccer feature between sailors of H. M. S. Agamemnon, now resting at Baltimore, and the Regal Clothiers, leaders of the Washington Suburban Soccer League.

The consensus, however, is that the U. S. contender in this international battle, set for Gonzaga Field, as a tie. The British seamen have as a tie. The British seaman have played soccer since childhood and thus know it from start to finish.

In Regal's favor is the fact the Agamemnon crew has been confined to its ship for some time, voiding its chances for practice.

Led by Lieut. Phillips, the English tars will arrive here early tomorrow morning as the guest of Pat Regal, the local club's sponsor. When hostilities start the officials will be Linesmen Davidson and Morrison and Referees Burton and Holt.

The line-ups:

Agamemnon.	Position.	Regal.
Sampson	Goal	S. Vermillion
Adams	R.B.	G. Simonds
Cocks	L.B.	Susha
Walker	R.H.	Dore
Moore	C.H.	Cooksey

Rodin Takes 2d Straight Start, Winning Bowie Handicap

Hambleton Is Won by 8 Lengths

Big Rally Beats Sagnenay II; $12 Mutuel Paid; Daily Double Returns $89

By Walter Haight

Post Staff Correspondent.

Bowie, Md., Nov. 18.—C. E. Nelson's Rodin made it two victories in a row today by winning the Hambleton Handicap, featuring the Tuesday program in Prince Georges County. The 5-year-old son of Chance Shot came fram far back to laugh at his four rivals when the finish came.

Rodin won by eight lengths, galloping home in handy fashion while E. K. Bryson's Saguenay II drove into second position a length in advance of J. Freedman's Homeward Bound.

Winner of his last effort at Pimlico, Rodin stepped up the class ladder today and was only lukewarm in the betting. His backers collected $12.50 for each $2 investment while the favorite players were tearing up tickets on Homeward Bound. Rodin was clocked in the fair Bowie time of 1:47 3-5 for the mile and a sixteenth. A crowd of 7000 watched the action and the day was ideal for the sport.

Jockey Ken McCombs rode Rodin and allowed the gelding to settle into stride and he trailed for more than a quarter. Rough Time went to the front as the field went to the clubhouse turn. Army Song was closest to the leader, with Saguenay II next and Homeward Bound well back.

Along the backstretch, Rodin began to move up gradually and backers of Homeward Bound expected him to move along with the ultimate winner. However, there was little life in Homeward Bound today. Rough Time weakened approaching the stretch and Saguenal II took command briefly as Rodin swept around the outside to wear him down, seemingly without effort. In the stretch run it was simply a case of how far Rodin would win by.

Daily double tickets were cashed by 165 customers and they collected $89.50 per pasteboard. Mrs. J. V. Stewart's Hearts Entwine set the stage by winning the first race from Sun Hera, Chronos and nine others. The Knollwood Stable's Perlette won the second race and completed the "double" transaction. Jockey R. Sisto drove this one home ahead of Bold Turk and Rugged Rock. The individual pay-offs were $8.40 on Hearts Entwine and $18.20 on Perlette.

Morris Brown and Carolina in Peach Bowl

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, Nov. 18.—The Nation's last two unbeaten, untied Negro collegiate football teams headed today for a championship showdown—the third annual Peach Blossom game, to be played December 6 at Columbus, Ga.

They are Morris Brown College, of Atlanta, winner of eight straight contests this season, and North Carolina College for Negroes, at Durham, which has won seven successive starts. Indirectly, they could jointly thank little Hampton Institute, of Hampton, Va., for clarifying the Negro gridiron picture, for Hampton last weekend sprang a Pittsburgh upset by defeating previously unbeaten, untied Morgan, 8-6.

The Carolina Eagles have a chance to pull even with Morris Brown Thursday. They will meet Greensboro (N. C.) Agricultural and Technical College at Durham in one of the top Negro games. Morris Brown takes a weekend off.

John (Big Train) Moody, Morris Brown's plunging triple-threat fullback, zoomed back into the lead of the Negro individual scoring race. He punched out all his team's points as Brown beat Le Moyne, of Memphis, 13-6. He now has 70 points, against 66 for second-place O'Neill Baldwin, of Prairie View, Tex., and 65 for Albert Gant, of Florida A. & M. Wallace Mosby, of Morgan, is fourth with 48.

North Carolina College and Morris Brown top their respective conferences. Carolina is leading the Colored Intercollegiate Athletic Association with five straight victories, and Morris Brown is credited with six straight wins in the Southern Intercollegiate Conference. Kentucky State of Frankfort has won the Midwest Conference title with a sweep of three conference games. Prairie View, only unbeaten team in the Southwest Athletic Conference, has won four and tied one.

At The Post

Selections at Bowie

Dear Al:

At long last, it appears that Walter Haight, the colt, will swing into action today. He is first on the reserve list and needs only one scratch to send him to the post. I'm betting even money he runs the wrong way. They tell me the boys at the Naval Observatory cleaned up on the Monday program here when Solar Star, Total Eclipse and Star of Padula all won races. Frank Cronan, new publicity director at Charles Town, has arrived at the West Virginia track to help prepare for the meeting which opens December 1. Friend Russ Hodges is off to a fine start on the WOL sports programs. I feel like a traitor, but yesterday I took the money I was going to bet on the daily double and wagered that the Redskins will beat the Giants next Sunday. I hope Maryland is'nt going to let the "nerving" investigation die out. We all know there are many horses running in this State and elsewhere who have had this cruel operation performed on them. "Nerving" long has been the ace in the hole of so-called big-time trainers. It is high time this thing is stopped. How about examining horses and barring those "nerved." Let's leave partiality and politics out of this. So far the investigation has caught only one rather obscure trainer. Some big ones are just as guilty. Maryland seems determined to erase doping. In my mind, "nerving" is an even more cruel practice. Now is the time to get in action. Are we going to make this a real investigation, or are we going to forget it and try to believe that only one horse in Maryland has been "nerved?" Bowie came up with another day of perfect weather yesterday. With that summer sun shining down, a guy breaks even if he loses ten bucks. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—THE GENERAL ran an impressive race to be second last out here and appears well suited with these. POST HASTE is speedy and the one to beat. I can't say anything good about WALTER HAIGHT, so I won't say anything.

Second race—ROYAL ECHO, if able to run back to that one race at Laurel, looks like the proverbial lock in this field. HI-BLAZE likes the track and will have Buddy Root, his regular rider, in the saddle. SPANG figures oft best best efforts.

Third race—I'm going out on a limb here and try to make BLUE NOSE beat this field of cheap 2-yer-olds. VALDINA OAK could be serious. MICHIGAN BROWN has trained well and must be figured.

Fourth race—It looks like I'm shooting for the moon again here but I'm going to take STORMINESS to beat these cheap routers. Has been stabled here for some time and trained briskly. LEGAL LIGHT may be the winner if started.

Fifth race—SHIN PLASTER has shown well enough in these parts to warrant top selection. HISTRIONIC may be a tough one to beat in this soft footing. BUNNY BABY should be in front part of the trip.

Sixth race—VINTAGE PORT was sprinting at Pimlico but has proven that a distance is preferable. BIRCH ROD appears the one to beat and should be no worse than second. HERE GOES has plenty of foot.

Seventh race—WAR KEY was poorly handled last out when sent five in front. With a better judged ride, this may prove the right one. BANKER JIM was a winner here and should go well. KARNAK likes the track.

Eighth race—MAECLOUD looks like money in the bank here and should have little trouble coming out on the head end. OCTOBER ALE will like the track and may surprise. CHARLENE for the show.

Best bet—MAECLOUD.

1—Stimstone, Loch Raven, The General.
2—Royal Echo, Cathode, Hi-Blaze.

6—Obash, Birch Rod, Vintage Port.

British Purchase Huge Quantities of Canadian Wheat

Ottawa, Ont., Nov. 18 (AP).—Prices paid by the British Food Ministry for Canadian wheat are understood to have been more than 70 cents a bushel, it was said in reliable quarters today as the government announced British purchase of a new 120 million bushel lot. The new sale is in the form of futures.

Trade Minister J. A. Mackinnon said that no statement on the price could be made, a policy followed since the start of the war.

Seventy cents is the minimum price paid by the Canadian Wheat Board for Canadian wheat, basis No. 1 northern at Fort William or Vancouver.

Authoritative sources said it was "quite possible" that some of the latest British wheat purchase might find its way to Russia.

Gasoline stocks rose 635,000 barrels during the week to a total of 81,412,000 barrels, compared with 82,777,000 at the end of the previous week and 79,340,000 a year earlier.

Bankers Oppose Registration of Private Issues

An American Bankers Association spokesman told the House Interstate Commerce Committee yesterday that it would be an unwise public policy for Congress to require registration of new securities sold privately.

Testifying against a proposal to make private sales as well as public offerings subject to registration sections of the 1933 securities law, A. L. M. Wiggins, chairman of the ABA committee on Federal legislation, asserted:

"Stripped of verbiage and reduced to its real objective, the purpose of this proposal is to divert into the hands of investment dealers and underwriters part of the present flow of funds now secured by business and industry from banks and other institutions.

"It is evidently the hope of the proponents of this proposal that if registration is required for these credits and advances, business and industry will then meet a larger part of their credit needs by issuing securities through underwriters as public offerings rather than by dealing directly with banks and other institutions.

"The essence of the position of the commercial banker is that the commercial banking business is now effectively regulated and supervised by numerous Federal and State agencies by means of a vast body of laws and regulations that have been developed through long experience, and that it is neither necessary nor desirable for the protection of bank depositors that an additional Federal agency should be given authority over investments of banks.

"I believe we will agree that the commercial banking system today is functioning with the highest degree of service to the economy of this Nation and to Government in the history of banking . . . To slow up or divert or hamper the servicing of sound credit needs of business and industry by commercial banks through legislation requiring unnecessary registration of its investments, in our opinion, would be an unwise public policy."

Air Freight Firm Seeks to Expand Field

The Universal Air Freight Corporation applied to the Civil Aeronautics Board yesterday for authority to operate as a Nation-wide air carrier of freight.

A Delaware corporation with offices in New York, Universal Air Freight is a subsidiary of the United States Freight Co., which owns several freight consolidating and forwarding companies.

Universal air freight has operated as a forwarding company through the Railway Express Agency. Its application is for permission to enter into direct agreements with existing air lines.

In its present operations, Universal Air Freight assembles shipments at termina. points, consolidates them into larger units and turns the shipments over to Railway Express. Through the Consolidation of shipments, it told the board, it is in a position to charge its customers a lower rate than the applicable Railway Express rate for individual shipments.

Universal Air Freight added that it had been unable to enter into direct arrangements with air lines because of the exclusive contract they have with Railway Express.

If permitted to enter into contracts with the air lines, the company said, it felt its operations could be conducted more economically and at lower rates to the public.

Contending that the air express and freight fields have not been tapped to any great extent, the company said that by development of these fields it believes the resultant costs of transportation of mail and passengers would be reduced substantially.

Renewed Rise in Food Prices Predicted

Prices of food and farm products will start upward again in the next few months, Government economists forecast yesterday as they reported a recent halt in such increases.

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics said that mounting industrial payrolls under the defense program and the vast "food-for-defense" buying drive would bring the higher prices.

"The pressure of improving demand probably will cause the farm and food products again to join the general advance in commodity prices," the economists said, adding that these future increases were "likely to be much more moderate than during most of 1941."

Prices of several farm products have declined since last summer. The bureau said some of these declines, such as in hog prices, were normal for this season and have been offset by increases in others, such as dairy and poultry products.

Although priority regulations have forced a decline in production of automobiles, household equipment, private housing and other durable civilian goods, the Government economists said this had been more than offset by expanding defense production.

They reported that defense expenditures have been increasing about 200 million dollars monthly and in October aggregated $1,527,000,000 compared with 287 million dollars a year earlier. As a result payrolls and consumer demand have continued upward.

Defense Bond Questionaire

Q. What is the best safeguard for my child's future?

A. Buying defense saving bonds, which will help the Government to preserve your child's American heritage of freedom.

Q. Will there be an intensive drive to sell defense savings bonds and stamps?

A. The Treasury Department sees in the response to the program so far indication that Americans will support national defense on a voluntary basis, without high-pressure methods.

Note.—To buy defense bonds and stamps, go to the nearest postoffice, bank, or savings and loan association; or write to the Treasurer of the United States, Washington. Also stamps are now on sale at retail stores.

Stocks Again Inch Lower in Timid Trading

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 18.—The stock market made stabs at recovery today, but continued cloudiness of the labor and international pictures rendered most ineffective.

The list got off to a ragged start, hardehed after midday, then slipped again at the close. Losses of fractions to a point or so were in the majority.

Trade Remains Timid

Wall Street was unable to work up much buying steam as the coal strike continued to dampen speculative spirits and Japanese representatives talked lengthily with Secretary of State Hull without announced results. Offerings, however, remained of the timid variety as thought was given to the possibility of legislation curbing walkouts in defense industries.

The business scene was bright in spots, especially in the matter of dividends and earnings statements, and seemingly inspired bidding for specialized stocks. On the other hand, the impact of growing taxes on profits of most companies, and the idea of a huge tax bill next year, served as a restraining influence even for favorites.

Rails generally maintained their balance as White House conferences got under way in a move to settle the carrier wage dispute.

American Can Slumps

American Can again was a weak performer, dropping 3 points to a new 1941 bottom. Lesser losers included Bethlehem Steel, Youngstown Sheet, General Motors, American Telephone, Western Union, American Smelting, Sears Roebuck, Woolworth, General Electric, U. S. Gypsum, Douglas Aircraft, Glenn Martin, Boeing, Westinghouse, Goodrich and Chesapeake & Ohio.

Among shares finishing on the upside were Santa Fe, Southern Railway, Pennsylvania, U. S. Rubber, Montgomery Ward, Du Pont, Dow Chemical, Johns-Manville, Allied Chemical, J. C. Penney, Eastman Kodak, Kennecott, Consolidated Edison, Standard Oil (New Jersey) and Texas Co.

Rail loans did fairly well in the bond department. Commodities were a trifle uneven. At Chicago wheat was unchanged to up ⅜ of a cent a bushel, corn off ⅛ to ⅛ and hogs about 10 cents higher. Cotton was up 25 cents a bale to down 35 cents.

Curb issues in the retreating column were Electric Bond & Share, Bell Aircraft, Colts Patent Firearms, International Petroleum and Lake Shore. Modest gains were posted for Creole Petroleum, N. J. Zinc and Phoenix Securities. Volume here approximated 164,000 shares versus 171,000 yesterday.

U. A. L. Names New Aide

Appointment of John W. Newey, for the past 20 years active in the Chicago investment field, as assistant to the president of United Air Lines in charge of stockholder relations, was announced yesterday by President W. A. Patterson.

Daniels' Return Augurs U. S.-Mexico Oil Settlement

Settlement of the Mexican petroleum controversy was believed in usually well-informed oil circles to be near, following the return to Washington of Josephus Daniels, Ambassador to Mexico.

Daniels indicated he was hopeful of an early peace in the three-year-long economic battle and that both sides were closer together.

Oil men suggested the two sides actually were only about 70 million dollars apart.

This figure, or something very near to it, represents the difference between what the Mexican government says is the value of the expropriated properties of Standard Oil Co. (N. J.) and an estimate current in oil circles, although not issued by the company itself.

This estimate becomes important at this time as reports from Mexico City and Washington indicate both governments are making a concerted attempt to reach a friendly solution of the problem created March 18, 1938, when about 500 million dollars of oil properties worked by foreign companies were senzed by the Mexican government on a promise of payment at some future date.

The valuation mentioned is that set by the Mexican Ministry of Industry in 1928. It referred not only to oil company equipment, pipelines and machinery, but to the estimated value of the oil under the surface.

However, under Mexican law, oil and other mineral wealth under the surface of the ground belongs to the nation, not to the person or company owning the surface, except in cases where oil properties were developed prior to 1917, when the basis of the present law was put into effect.

This basic Mexican law, which dates back to ancient Spanish royal grants and Roman law, is in contrast to the law of the United States, where ownership of the surface carries with it the right to everything below ground.

Montgomery Ward Sets Up Reserve For Price Slumps

Chicago, Nov. 18 (AP).—A two million dollar safeguard against the possibility that the present upturn in prices eventually will be followed by a decline was made today by Montgomery Ward & Co., retail merchandising and mail order firm.

The company took the money out of earnings in the three months ended October 31 and set aside in preparation for falling prices in the future. When, as and if prices drop any inventory loss the company sustains will be deducted from this two million dollars.

A representative of the company said today it was the first time in Montgomery Ward's history as far as he could remember, that a deduction from earnings had been made for such a purpose.

Rodin Takes 2d Straight Start, Winning Bowie Handicap

Big Rally Beats Sagnenay II; $12 Mutuel Paid; Daily Double Returns $89

By Walter Haight

Post Staff Correspondent.

Bowie, Md., Nov. 18.—C. E. Nelson's Rodin made it two victories in a row today by winning the Hambleton Handicap, featuring the Tuesday program in Prince Georges County. The 5-year-old son of Chance Shot came fram far back to laugh at his four rivals when the finish came.

Rodin won by eight lengths, galloping home in handy fashion while E. K. Bryson's Saguenay II drove into second position a length in advance of J. Freedman's Homeward Bound.

Winner of his last effort at Pimlico, Rodin stepped up the class ladder today and was only lukewarm in the betting. His backers collected $12.50 for each $2 investment while the favorite players were tearing up tickets on Homeward Bound. Rodin was clocked in the fair Bowie time of 1:47 3-5 for the mile and a sixteenth. A crowd of 7000 watched the action and the day was ideal for the sport.

Jockey Ken McCombs rode Rodin and allowed the gelding to settle into stride and he trailed for more than a quarter. Rough Time went to the front as the field went to the clubhouse turn. Army Song was closest to the leader, with Saguenay II next and Homeward Bound well back.

Along the backstretch, Rodin began to move up gradually and backers of Homeward Bound expected him to move along with the ultimate winner. However, there was little life in Homeward Bound today. Rough Time weakened approaching the stretch and Saguenal II took command briefly as Rodin swept around the outside to wear him down, seemingly without effort. In the stretch run it wa simply a case of how far Rodin would win by.

Daily double tickets were cashed by 165 customers and they collected $89.50 per pasteboard. Mrs. J. V. Stewart's Hearts Entwine set the stage by winning the first race from Sun Hera, Chronos and nine others. The Knollwood Stable's Perlette won the second race and completed the "double" transaction. Jockey R. Sisto drove this one home ahead of Bold Turk and Rugged Rock. The individual pay-offs were $8.40 on Hearts Entwine and $18.20 on Perlette.

OLD ROSEBUSH was hard ridden from the start, shook off PORT WALES and fought it out willingly. CARVALE could not keep up early and closed gamely. ZENANA was squeezed back going to the far turn and closed willingly. PORT WALES quit.

BROTHER DEAR was in the thick of contention from the start and weakened gradually in a stretch run.

SAGUENAY II took over the lead after disposing of ROUGH TIME, held on willingly, but could not keep up with the winner. HOMEWARD BOUND was allowed to drop far off the pace and would not respond to pressure until the last eighth. ROUGH TIME was through after a half. ARMY SONG stopped.

Morris Brown and Carolina in Peach Bowl

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, Nov. 18.—The Nation's last two unbeaten, untied Negro collegiate football teams headed today for a championship showdown—the third annual Peach Blossom game, to be played December 6 at Columbus, Ga.

They are Morris Brown College, of Atlanta, winner of eight straight contests this season, and North Carolina College for Negroes, at Durham, which has won seven successive starts. Indirectly, they could jointly thank little Hampton Institute, of Hampton, Va., for clarifying the Negro gridiron picture, for Hampton last weekend sprang a Pittsburgh upset by defeating previously unbeaten, untied Morgan, 8-6.

The Carolina Eagles have a chance to pull even with Morris Brown Thursday. They will meet Greensboro (N. C.) Agricultural and Technical College at Durham in one of the top Negro games. Morris Brown takes a weekend off.

John (Big Train) Moody, Morris Brown's plunging triple-threat fullback, zoomed back into the lead of the Negro individual scoring race. He punched out all his team's points as Brown beat Le Moyne, of Memphis, 13-6. He now has 70 points, against 66 for second-place O'Neill Baldwin, of Prairie View, Tex., and 65 for Albert Gant, of Florida A. & M. Wallace Mosby, of Morgan, is fourth with 48.

North Carolina College and Morris Brown top their respective conferences. Carolina is leading the Colored Intercollegiate Athletic Association with five straight victories, and Morris Brown is credited with six straight wins in the Southern Intercollegiate Conference. Kentucky State of Frankfort has won the Midwest Conference title with a sweep of three conference games. Prairie View, only unbeaten team in the Southwest Athletic Conference, has won four and tied one.

Selections at Bowie

Dear Al:

At long last, it appears that Walter Haight, the colt, will swing into action today. He is first on the reserve list and needs only one scratch to send him to the post. I'm betting even money he runs the wrong way. They tell me the boys at the Naval Observatory cleaned up on the Monday program here when Solar Star, Total Eclipse and Star of Padula all won races. Frank Cronan, new publicity director at Charles Town, has arrived at the West Virginia track to help prepare for the meeting which opens December 1. Friend Russ Hodges is off to a fine start on the WOL sports programs. I feel like a traitor, but yesterday I took the money I was going to bet on the daily double and wagered that the Redskins will beat the Giants next Sunday. I hope Maryland is'nt going to let the "nerving" investigation die out. We all know there are many horses running in this State and elsewhere who have had this cruel operation performed on them. "Nerving" long has been the ace in the hole of so-called bigtime trainers. It is high time this thing is stopped. How about examining horses and barring those "nerved." Let's leave partiality and politics out of this. So far the investigation has caught only one rather obscure trainer. Some big ones are just as guilty. Maryland seems determined to erase doping. In my mind, "nerving" is an even more cruel practice. Now is the time to get in action. Are we going to make this a real investigation, or are we going to forget it and try to believe that only one horse in Maryland has been "nerved?" Bowie came up with another day of perfect weather yesterday. With that summer sun shining down, a guy breaks even if he loses ten bucks. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—THE GENERAL ran an impressive race to be second last out here and appears well suited with these. POST HASTE is speedy and the one to beat. I can't say anything good about WALTER HAIGHT, so I won't say anything.

Second race—ROYAL ECHO, if able to run back to that one race at Laurel, looks like the proverbial lock in this field. HI-BLAZE likes the track and will have Buddy Root, his regular rider, in the saddle. SPANG figures on best best efforts.

Third race—I'm going out on a limb here and try to make BLUE NOSE beat this field of cheap 2-year-olds. VALDINA OAK could be serious. MICHIGAN BROWN has trained well and must be figured.

Fourth race—It looks like I'm shooting for the moon again here but I'm going to take STORMINESS to beat these cheap routers. Has been stabled here for some time and trained briskly. LEGAL LIGHT may be the winner if started.

Fifth race—SHIN PLASTER has shown well enough in these parts to warrant top selection. HISTRIONIC may be a tough one to beat in this soft footing. BUNNY BABY should be in front part of the trip.

Sixth race—VINTAGE PORT was sprinting at Pimlico but has proven that a distance is preferable. BIRCH ROD appears the one to beat and should be no worse than second. HERE GOES has plenty of foot.

Seventh race—WAR KEY was poorly handled last out when sent five in front. With a better judged ride, this may prove the right one. BANKER JIM was a winner here and should go well. KARNAK likes the track.

Eighth race—MAECLOUD looks like money in the bank here and should have little trouble coming out on the head end. OCTOBER ALE will like the track and may surprise. CHARLENE for the show.

Best bet—MAECLOUD.

British Purchase Huge Quantities of Canadian Wheat

Ottawa, Ont., Nov. 18 (AP).—Prices paid by the British Food Ministry for Canadian wheat are understood to have been more than 70 cents a bushel, it was said in reliable quarters today as the government announced British purchase of a new 120 million bushel lot. The new sale is in the form of futures.

Trade Minister J. A. Mackinnon said that no statement on the price could be made, a policy followed since the start of the war.

Seventy cents is the minimum price paid by the Canadian Wheat Board for Canadian wheat, basis No. 1 northern at Fort William or Vancouver.

Authoritative sources said it was "quite possible" that some of the latest British wheat purchase might find its way to Russia.

Bankers Oppose Registration of Private Issues

An American Bankers Association spokesman told the House Interstate Commerce Committee yesterday that it would be an unwise public policy for Congress to require registration of new securities sold privately.

Testifying against a proposal to make private sales as well as public offerings subject to registration sections of the 1933 securities law, A. L. M. Wiggins, chairman of the ABA committee on Federal legislation, asserted:

"Stripped of verbiage and reduced to its real objective, the purpose of this proposal is to divert into the hands of investment dealers and underwriters part of the present flow of funds now secured by business and industry from banks and other institutions.

"It is evidently the hope of the proponents of this proposal that if registration is required for these credits and advances, business and industry will then meet a larger part of their credit needs by issuing securities through underwriters as public offerings rather than by dealing directly with banks and other institutions.

"The essence of the position of the commercial banker is that the commercial banking business is now effectively regulated and supervised by numerous Federal and State agencies by means of a vast body of laws and regulations that have been developed through long experience, and that it is neither necessary nor desirable for the protection of bank depositors that an additional Federal agency should be given authority over investments of banks.

"I believe we will agree that the commercial banking system today is functioning with the highest degree of service to the economy of this Nation and to Government in the history of banking . . . To slow up or divert or hamper the servicing of sound credit needs of business and industry by commercial banks through legislation requiring unnecessary registration of its investments, in our opinion, would be an unwise public policy."

Air Freight Firm Seeks to Expand Field

The Universal Air Freight Corporation applied to the Civil Aeronautics Board yesterday for authority to operate as a Nation-wide air carrier of freight.

A Delaware corporation with offices in New York, Universal Air Freight is a subsidiary of the United States Freight Co., which owns several freight consolidating and forwarding companies.

Universal air freight has operated as a forwarding company through the Railway Express Agency. Its application is for permission to enter into direct agreements with existing air lines.

In its present operations, Universal Air Freight assembles shipments at termina, points, consolidates them into larger units and turns the shipments over to Railway Express. Through the Consolidation of shipments, it told the board, it is in a position to charge its customers a lower rate than the applicable Railway Express rate for individual shipments.

Universal Air Freight added that it had been unable to enter into direct arrangements with air lines because of the exclusive contract they have with Railway Express.

If permitted to enter into contracts with the air lines, the company said, it felt its operations could be conducted more economically and at lower rates to the public.

Contending that the air express and freight fields have not been tapped to any great extent, the company said that by development of these fields it believes the resultant costs of transportation of mail and passengers would be reduced substantially.

Renewed Rise in Food Prices Predicted

Prices of food and farm products will start upward again in the next few months, Government economists forecast yesterday as they reported a recent halt in such increases.

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics said that mounting industrial payrolls under the defense program and the vast "food-for-defense" buying drive would bring the higher prices.

"The pressure of improving demand probably will cause the farm and food products again to join the general advance in commodity prices," the economists said, adding that these future increases were "likely to be much more moderate than during most of 1941."

Prices of several farm products have declined since last summer. The bureau said some of these declines, such as in hog prices, were normal for this season and have been offset by increases in others, such as dairy and poultry products.

Nonagricultural prices continued upward during the past two months, the bureau reported, although the "rise has been held in check by price ceilings and priority limitations on civilian demands for the principal commodities not in ample supply."

Although priority regulations have forced a decline in production of automobiles, household equipment, private housing and other durable civilian goods, the Government economists said this had been more than offset by expanding defense production.

They reported that defense expenditures have been increasing about 200 million dollars monthly and in October aggregated $1,527,000,000 compared with 287 million dollars a year earlier. As a result payrolls and consumer demand have continued upward.

Defense Bond Questionaire

Q. What is the best safeguard for my child's future?

A. Buying defense saving bonds, which will help the Government to preserve your child's American heritage of freedom.

Q. Will there be an intensive drive to sell defense savings bonds and stamps?

A. The Treasury Department sees in the response to the program so far indication that Americans will support national defense on a voluntary basis, without high-pressure methods.

Note.—To buy defense bonds and stamps, go to the nearest postoffice, bank, or savings and loan association; or write to the Treasurer of the United States, Washington. Also stamps are now on sale at retail stores.

Republic Steel Votes Another 50c Dividend

Directors of the Republic Steel Corporation yesterday declared a dividend of 50 cents a share on the common stock, payable December 22 to holders of record December 5. This brings the year's payments to $2 a share against 40 cents a share in 1940.

Christiana Securities Co. which lists several members of the Du Pont family among its officers, declared a dividend of $35.15 a share on common stock, payable December 15 to stockholders of record November 24. Payment of the dividend will bring the total for this year to $132.65 a common share, compared with $134.50 in 1940 and $136.60 in 1939.

The investment company started the year with 1994 common stockholders and 928 preferred stockholders. Chief holdings of the concern were 3,049,800 common shares of E. I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co. and 90,151 shares of General Motors common stock.

The United States Rubber Co. announced yesterday that a common dividend of 50 cents a share, declared last March 5 and held up by litigation, would be paid Wednesday to stockholders of record April 16.

In an explanatory note accompanying dividend checks, Arthur Surkamp, company treasurer, said a restraining order which resulted from a preferred stockholder's suit had been vacated.

Directors voted the dividend originally for payment last April 30.

Stocks Again Inch Lower in Timid Trading

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 18.—The stock market made stabs at recovery today, but continued cloudiness of the labor and international pictures rendered most ineffective.

The list got off to a ragged start, hardened after midday, then slipped again at the close. Losses of fractions to a point or so were in the majority.

Trade Remains Timid

Wall Street was unable to work up much buying steam as the coal strike continued to dampen speculative spirits and Japanese representatives talked lengthily with Secretary of State Hull without announced results. Offerings, however, remained of the timid variety as thought was given to the possibility of legislation curbing walkouts in defense industries.

The business scene was bright in spots, especially in the matter of dividends and earnings statements, and seemingly inspired bidding for specialized stocks. On the other hand, the impact of growing taxes on profits of most companies, and the idea of a huge tax bill next year, served as a restraining influence even for favorites.

Rails generally maintained their balance as White House conferences got under way in a move to settle the carrier wage dispute.

American Can Slumps

American Can again was a weak performer, dropping 3 points to a new 1941 bottom. Lesser losers included Bethlehem Steel, Youngstown Sheet, General Motors, American Telephone, Western Union, American Smelting, Sears Roebuck, Woolworth, General Electric, U. S. Gypsum, Douglas Aircraft, Glenn Martin, Boeing, Westinghouse, Goodrich and Chesapeake & Ohio.

Among shares finishing on the upside were Santa Fe, Southern Railway, Pennsylvania, U. S. Rubber, Montgomery Ward, Du Pont, Dow Chemical, Johns-Manville, Allied Chemical, J. C. Penney, Eastman Kodak, Kennecott, Consolidated Edison, Standard Oil (New Jersey) and Texas Co.

Rail loans did fairly well in the bond department. Commodities were a trifle uneven. At Chicago wheat was unchanged to up ⅜ of a cent a bushel, corn off ⅛ to ⅛ and hogs about 10 cents higher. Cotton was up 25 cents a bale to down 35 cents.

Curb issues in the retreating column were Electric Bond & Share, Bell Aircraft, Colts Patent Firearms, International Petroleum and Lake Shore. Modest gains were posted for Creole Petroleum, N. J. Zinc and Phoenix Securities. Volume here approximated 164,000 shares versus 171,000 yesterday.

U. A. L. Names New Aide

Appointment of John W. Newey, for the past 20 years active in the Chicago investment field, as assistant to the president of United Air Lines in charge of stockholder relations, was announced yesterday by President W. A. Patterson.

Daniels' Return Augurs U. S.-Mexico Oil Settlement

Settlement of the Mexican petroleum controversy was believed in usually well-informed oil circles to be near, following the return to Washington of Josephus Daniels, Ambassador to Mexico.

Daniels indicated he was hopeful of an early peace in the three-year-long economic battle and that both sides were closer together.

Oil men suggested the two sides actually were only about 70 million dollars apart.

This figure, or something very near to it, represents the difference between what the Mexican government says is the value of the expropriated properties of Standard Oil Co. (N. J.) and an estimate current in oil circles, although not issued by the company itself.

This estimate becomes important at this time as reports from Mexico City and Washington indicate both governments are making a concerted attempt to reach a friendly solution of the problem created March 18, 1938, when about 500 million dollars of oil properties worked by foreign companies were senzed by the Mexican government on a promise of payment at some future date.

The valuation mentioned is that set by the Mexican Ministry of Industry in 1928. It referred not only to oil company equipment, pipelines and machinery, but to the estimated value of the oil under the surface.

However, under Mexican law, oil and other mineral wealth under the surface of the ground belongs to the nation, not to the person or company owning the surface, except in cases where oil properties were developed prior to 1917, when the basis of the present law was put into effect.

This basic Mexican law, which dates back to ancient Spanish royal grants and Roman law, is in contrast to the law of the United States, where ownership of the surface carries with it the right to everything below ground.

Montgomery Ward Sets Up Reserve For Price Slumps

Chicago, Nov. 18 (AP).—A two million dollar safeguard against the possibility that the present upturn in prices eventually will be followed by a decline was made today by Montgomery Ward & Co., retail merchandising and mail order firm.

The company took the money out of earnings in the three months ended October 31 and set aside in preparation for falling prices in the future. When, as and if prices drop any inventory loss the company sustains will be deducted from this two million dollars.

A representative of the company said today it was the first time in Montgomery Ward's history as far as he could remember, that a deduction from earnings had been made for such a purpose.

Two D. C. Pros Take Leaves; One Marries

The District lost two golf professionals, temporarily, yesterday.

Edward L. Stevens, assistant professional at Manor Country Club for the past 11 years, was married yesterday afternoon to Claire McLees, of Little Rock, Ark., at the St. John's rectory in Forest Glen, Md.

Mr. and Mrs. Stevens left after a reception at Manor Club for a honeymoon in Arkansas, Alabama and Florida, and will return about December 1. Attendants were Harry G. Pitt and Mrs. John R. Daily, both prominent in local golf affairs.

Robert T. Barnett, Chevy Chase Club professional, took leave from his local post for his annual winter appointment at the Indian Creek Club in Miami, Fla.

Barnett will take Clagett Stevens, brother of the bridegroom, with him again this year to Indian Creek. The staff will be completed by Cumberland, Md., and Chicago professionals.

Gene Larkin, secretary of the Middle Atlantic P. G. A., met with District professionals last night at Bannockburn Country Club and gave a full report on last week's National P. G. A. meeting in Chicago.

John Bass, who attended the convention with Larkin, will meet with the Baltimore pros for a like report at a later date.

Hoyas Leave For Jasper Game Today

Seeking their fifth victory against three losses, Georgetown's football squad will catch the 9 o'clock train for New York this morning and head for tomorrow's game with Manhattan at the Polo Grounds.

The Georgetowns will be quartered at Hotel Croydon. They plan to hold a workout at the Polo Grounds this afternoon. Tonight Georgetown alumni will stage their annual smoker at the New York Athletic Club. Coach Jack Hagerty will be among the principal speakers.

The Georgetown-Manhattan game wil bring together a couple of in-and-out teams with identical records and it should produce plenty of scoring, much of it via the air lanes. Georgetown boasts a trio of dangerous passers in Frank Dornfeld, Benny Bulvin and Benny Reiges, while Manhattan likes the way Ed Finkoski, Frank Kiescker and Charley McNulty flip the ball around.

Both the Hoyas and Jaspers appear at their peaks, with Georgetown's latest effort a 20-7 victory over North Carolina State and Manhattan's an upset 13-13 tie with Holy Cross in a game the Jaspers should have won by all accounts.

Buckeyes Drill After Darkness

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 18 (AP).—Ohio State's Buckeyes finished one of the season's longest practice sessions under the stadium lights as they prepared for Saturday's clash with Michigan at Ann Arbor.

Coach Paul Brown drilled the Bucks almost an hour on fundamental blocking and tackling, and worked them that long again on pass offense and defense, then wound up with a light scrimmage.

The didn't even take time out to look at the movies of last Saturday's 12-to-7 victory over Illinois, but Brown said that would come later.

Game Wanted

A game tomorrow or any Sunday this season is being sought for the unlimited football team of Occoquan, Va. Managers who are interested should call National 6000, branch 658, or write the chief clerk, Occoquan.

South Has Too Many All-America Backs

Dudley, Sinkwich, Nelson and Lack Battle For Recognition and They Are Tops

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, Nov. 18.—Over-production is the word.

Time was when the South's plague was a surplus of cotton, corn and boll weevils. Now it has added an athletic ache—an excess of All-American football talent.

There are just four places in a first-string All-America backfield. And the South this year has four noted claimants, plus an ancestral squirrel gun to back up its nominations.

Consider, for instance, the University of Georgia's ball of fire, broken-jaw Frankie Sinkwich. He leads the Nation in ball carrying with 868 yards in eighat games, and has pitched passes for nearly 500 more.

"We haven't seen all the backs in the Nation," says his coach, Wally Butts, "but we think Sinkwich is the best we've ever seen."

Then there's Steve Lach, Duke's candidate for all-America, rated by conservative Coach Wallace Wade as being as great or greater than any player Duke ever had, and the best defensive halfback in his coaching experience. He has carried the ball 40 times in 8 games for 327 yards—an average better than 8 yards a clip. Twice he has passed the ball, gaining 70 yards and setting up two Duke touchdowns. His punting has averaged 45.4 yards.

Alabama, producer of many an all-America, is pounding the drums for Halfback Jimmy Nelson, whom Coach Frank Thomas says he'd take over any back in the Nation. The big senior from Live Oak, Fla., has gained 311 yards rushing and 331 by passing in 8 games, and averaged 40.7 yards punting. He's a threat every time an opponent passes, is credited with five interceptions, including a 53-yard gallop for a touchdown against Georgia.

"Nelson may not break any records as a ball-carrier, passer or punter," observes Thomas, "but he will sure win ball games for you."

Few teams have had a more effective performer than Virginia's Bill Dudley. The Bluefield bullet is among the national leaders in total ground gained, with 1492 yards in eight games—753 rushing and 739 passing. He has returned punts 422 yards and scored 112 points. After the Cavaliers' defeat by Yale—their only setback—the Eli's coach, Spike Nelson, said:

"I consider Dudley one of the greatest backs I have ever seen. On the basis of this showing this season, he should have all-America rating."

The guns should be loaded only after you have arrived at your destination; and then the guns should be put on "safety" before leaving for the woods, because in the first underbrush a small twig may hook through the trigger and cause disaster. Incidentally, the man ahead should always hold back the branches for the one following. Many a hunter's eye has been seriously injured by a snapping branch.

Ten Commandents for a Nimrodic

1. Handle every gun as if it were loaded.
2. Be sure of your target before you pull the trigger.
3. Never leave your gun unattended unless you first unload it.
4. Carry your gun so that you can control the direction of the muzzle even if you slip.
5. Always make certain that the barrel and action are clear of obstruction—but be sure to look into the breech of the gun, not the muzzle.
6. Never point your gun at anything you do not want to shoot.
7. Avoid horseplay while holding a gun.
8. Never shoot at a flat hard surface; such as rocks or the surface of water.
9. Instruct your children in the proper use of firearms and explain the dangers of the weapons.
10. Do not mix gunpowder and alcohol.

Pat Kennedy To Referee Pro Cage Game

Pat Kennedy, long regarded as one of the best basketball officials in the country, yesterday was selected to referee Friday night's professional game at Turner's Arena between the Washington Brewers of the American League and the world-famous Renaissance colored cagers.

Kennedy, who handles all the big college games at Madison Square Garden and also national championships, recently completed a book on basketball officiating. His bouncing tactics have added considerable color to games, according to Coach Mack Posnack, of the Brewers, who made a special trip to New York just to secure his services.

At the same time Posnack announced the signing of Herman Knupple, of Newark, a 6-foot-7 center, who last spring was graduated from Panzer Normal School (New ark) after playing four years of basketball without missing a single game.

Knupple captained the Panzer team that defeated New York University and other top Gotham quintets and hung up 44 straight victories.

Coach Posnack stated that Knupple said he was too tall for the Army and thus was deferred.

The Washington pros' roster rapidly is filling and thus far Coach Posnack has under contract Jim Kiernan and Irving Rizzi, Georgetown University stars; Nat Frankel, Ben Kramer, Whitey Wilson and Ben Goldfaden, veteran of last season's squad.

The Ren-Brewer game will start at 9 p. m., with a preliminary game slated for 7:30. The Rens have three of the stars of the 1940 pro champion Globe Trotters—Sonny Boswell, Duke Cumberland and Hillery Brown, plus Willie Smith, 6 foot 5 giant captain; Puggy Bell and Zack Clayton.

ceed the 5000 mark. Game time is 2 p. m.

The Redskins took part in the shortest Tuesday workout of the season yesterday morning in Griffith Stadium as the squad was still pretty well tired out from the Bear clash of last Sunday.

Bob Titchenal and Al Kreuger were excused early, the starting center with a recurrence of a back injury and Kreuger with a muscle cramp. Both are expected to be available the latter part of the week.

Movies of the Bear game were shown last night and proved the Redskins were justified in one or two of their squawks about the officiating but the 35-21 defeat by the Bears still stands, and always will.

Coach Ray Flaherty will send the squad through a stiff workout today. The Redskins have little to fear from the Giants for they feel the six fumbles separated victory from defeat in the season's opener, and it will not happen again.

Bradley Spikes Boudreau Rumor

Cleveland, Nov. 18 (AP).—Flashy Shortstop Lou Boudreau frequently has been mentioned as a possibility to manage the 1942 Cleveland Indians, but President Alva Bradley reiterated today that there's nothing to it.

"There's just nothing to it," said Bradley. "He's 24 years old and he's a swell shortstop. I'd hate to make a manager out of him and find he had no time to be a shortstop."

Roger Peckinpaugh now is the tribe's field chieftain, but Bradley may move him to the top front office job vacated by C. C. Slapnicka if it proves easier to find a new manager than a new executive.

Vic Gauzza Offered Semipro Commission

Vic Gauzza, for many years the District's outstanding sandlot baseball promoter, yesterday was offered the D. C. commissionership of the National Semipro Baseball Congress in a letter from its president, Ray Dumont. If he accepts, Gauzza will have charge of a regional semipro tournament here, designed to select a mid-Atlantic champion to send to the Wichita, Kans., national meet.

Va. Baseball Moguls Okay Salary Raise

By the Associated Press

Petersburg, Va., Nov. 18.—Directors of the Virginia Baseball League voted today to increase the player salary limit to $1400 and voted approval of a 1942 schedule of 130 games beginning next April 30.

In their winter meeting at the Hotel Petersburg, the directors also rescinded a 60-day suspension imposed upon Guy Lacy, manager of the Lynchburg Senators, following a run-in between Lacy and an umpire in Lynchburg's final game of the last regular season at Salem.

Lacy appealed from action of Ray Ryan, league president, in fining him $250 and ordering his suspension for 60 days as the result of the flare-up.

His case was brought before the directors on motion of the Newport News Club with the result that they reduced the fine to $75 and ordered the suspension lifted when the fine was paid. Lacy said he would pay it.

Non-playing club managers were excluded from the salary limit fixed.

The league also voted to close the 1942 schedule on next September 7. The new schedule called for 10 more games next year than the 120 played in 1941. The Shaughnessy play-off system again will be in effect.

The election of officers was deferred until a meeting to be held in Roanoke November 30.

Although there had been talk that the league would consider plans to expand from a six to an eight club circuit, there was no discussion along this line today. Winchester, Radford and Danville, which reputedly are interested in joining the league, sent no representatives to the assembly today.

Zuppke's Job Still Unfilled

choice, and indicated it would not be made for many weeks.

Zuppke's resignation and Mill's appointment as permanent athletic director apparently heralded a new and peaceful era in Illini athletics. A long and bitter controversy over the athletic situation came to a head last July when Zuppke was given a one-year contract as the trustees eased Wendell S. Wilson out of the picture by giving him a year's leave of absence and naming Mills acting athletic director.

Zuppke, whose team has won two games and lost five this season—including four Big Ten defeats—had been scheduled to appear before the trustees next March to determine whether he continued as coach or retire. In 29 years, Zuppke teams won 132 games, lost 79 and tied 12, taking seven Western Conference titles.

Minnesota Coach Polishes Defense

The latter part of the practice was secret, Bierman excluding sideline experts as he outlined new offensive plays.

The Gophers were in the best shape since the Michigan game of three weeks ago, Capt. Bruce Smith was running easily and Herman Frickey's condition made it certain he would see service against the Badgers. Helge Pukema, lineman suffering from a charleyhorse, limbered up but did not see heavy duty.

Leo Marks Dead; Rich Sportsman

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 19 (AP).—Leo J. Marks, 67, millionaire philanthropist and sportsman, died of a heart attack tonight.

Marks owned the Le Mar stock farm near Lexington, Ky., and raced thoroughbred horses. His horse, Many Stings, won the $50,000 added Widener Handicap at Hialeah Park last year. His Missiep ran second to Reigh Count in the Kentucky Derby in 1928.

Whizzer White O. K. For Service in Army

Detroit, Nov. 18 (AP).—Halfback Byron (Whizzer) White, of the Detroit Lions of the National Football League, passed his physical examination today for induction under selective service, but it was disclosed that the former Colorado All-America might enlist in the Naval Reserve.

The chief clerk of White's draft board said the football player had applied for a naval intelligence post, reporting for active duty after the close of the professional football season. Detroit still has games with the Chicago Bears and Cardinals.

The Judge Disproves A Fishing Fallacy

Special Dispatch to The Post

Going along to the Lower Potomac with rod and reel yesterday he caught 17 rock from 3 to 15 pounds each on 16 strikes. On one strike he landed two 12-pound rock simultaneously.

Cleveland Parkers Divide Grid Games

Football teams of the Cleveland Park Y. M. C. A. split even in two games yesterday. The 105-pound team defeated Friends School's club at that weight, 12-0, while the 135-pound outfit lost to Landon School's 135-pounders, 12-6. George Taylor and Jack Haymaker scored the 105-pounders' touchdowns.

Landon's Midgets Trip St. Alban's, 7 to 0

Wagnerian Singers Join In Recital

By Ray C. B. Brown

Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey presents Lotte Lehmann and Lauritz Melchior in a joint song recital Tuesday night in Constitution Hall. Accompanists: Paul Wlanovski and Ignace Strasfogel.

When two such experienced Wagnerian singers as Lotte Lehmann and Lauritz Melchior combine their voices, they can bring a joint recital to a triumphal climax, as they did last evening in Constitution Hall with the finale from the first act of "Die Walkuere." That long and exultant duet, beginning "Winterstuerme wichen dem Wonnemond," was sung with a vibrant fervency that aroused the auditors, already well pleased by the preceding program, to an ovational outburst of applause. Both artists deserved the tribute, for their reading was dramatically phrased and emotionally cogent.

BROWN

They had been previously recalled with insistence for their excellent delivery of four seldom-heard duets by Schumann: "Familiengemaelde," "Er und Sie," "So wahr die Sonne scheinet" and "Unter'm Fenster." The last one, thanks to Mr. Melchior's irresistible humor, had to be repeated, and when an extra number was made inevitable by the demand from the house, they sang Karl Bohn's "Still wie die Nacht."

In their solo groups, the soprano and tenor diverged completely in their opinions as to whether unfamiliar or familiar songs are preferable. For an artist reputed to be a great singer of lieder, Mme. Lehmann was singularly limited in her choice of material. She relied upon such well-worn items as Schubert's "Liebesbotschaft" and "Der Erlkoenig." Brahms' "Mein Maedel hat einen Rosenmund," Wolf's "Verborgenheit" and Richard Strauss' "Zueignung" and "Staendchen." Her readings of these varied in sensitivity, the best being the Wolf lied.

Her group in English contained two fresh songs, Seth Felt's "To Electra" and Richard Hageman's "Music I Heard With You," but were overbalanced by Purcell's "There's Not a Swain," Haydn's "She Never Told Her Love" and Schubert's "Who Is Sylvia."

Mr. Melchior seemed bent upon presenting as many novelties as his time would permit. He began with a group sung in Danish, Swedish and Norwegian: an aria from Hakon Boerresen's opera, "Kaddara;" Richard Hanneberg's "Fly, My Thoughts," Sverre Jordan's "Flying Eagle." Eyvind Alnaes' "February Morning by the Sea" and Grieg's "To Norway." These were projected with the vigor of voice and authority of statement which make us call a tenor heroic.

In his second group he placed only one "favorite" song, Schubert's "An die Musik," the others being Schubert's setting of Klopstock's "Dem Unendlichen," Peter Erasmus Lange-Mueller's "Die heiligen drei Koenige," Harold Craxton's "Come You, Mary," and Walter Bransen's "There Shall Be Music When You Come." His extra numbers were another fine song by Bransen, "Music of the Spring," and "The Star," by the late James Hotchkiss Rogers.

Gen. Heavey Dead at 74; Rites Friday

Brig. Gen. John W. Heavey, U. S. Army, retired, died yesterday at Walter Reed Hospital following an illness of several months. He was 74 years old.

Funeral services will be held at 10 a. m. Friday from the Fort Myer Chapel. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Gen. Heavey, a native of Vandalia, Ill., was graduated from the Military Academy in 1891 and was first assigned to the Fifth Infantry at St. Augustine, Fla. He served with the Eleventh Infantry during the Puerto Rican campaign and in the Jolo Expedition in the Philippines.

Gen. Heavey was detailed here in the National Guard Bureau and organized the United States Guards consisting of 1300 officers and 25,000 men for interior protection. One of his proudest boasts was that he played tackle in the first West Point-Annapolis game in 1890.

Surviving Gen. Heavey are his wife, Mrs. Katherine S. Heavey, 1323 Thirtieth Street Northwest, and three sons, Lieut. Col. William F. Heavey, stationed at Jacksonville, Fla.; Lieut. Col. Thomas J. Heavey, stationed at Birmingham, Ala., and Wade Heavey, of Louisville, Ky.

Waterways Bill Is 'Pork-Laden,' Tydings Charges

Snator Tydings, (Democrat), of Maryland, yesterday attacked the new billion-dollar House rivers and harbors bill as a "pork"-laden measure that will carry the National debt above the 61 billion dollar mark.

"Nothing could show more conclusively the present 'joy-ride' attitude of the American government," said Tydings in a blast at the omnibus measure authorizing $180,000,000 for the Florida Ship canal and $70,000,000 for the Tennessee-Tombigbee River and other projects.

"There is enough pork in the rivers and harbors bill as reported to the House not only to load all the ships we are now building but those which we may build for many years to come," said Tydings in his statement.

Listen! with Glynn

This being the week of Thanksgiving—according to some people, anyhow—it is meet and fitting that one of America's most famous dramatic sagas, closely associated with the beginnings of that national feast day, should be given a wide hearing.

That dramatic saga, of course, being "The Courtship of Myles Standish," which has to do with some of the more romantic adventures of the Pilgrim Fathers (and mothers), who, in turn, were responsible for our celebrating Thanksgiving in this age.

So this is to call your attention to the fact that "The Courtship of Myles Standish," complete with Priscilla, John Alden, Myles, himself, and the classic line, "Why not speak for yourself, John?" is to be heard over WJSV and the Columbia network today at 11:45 a. m. in "Aunt Jenny's Stories."

Then, to get you further into the mood for tomorrow's feasting, Edward G. Robinson is to depart from his usual characterizations in his "Big Town" program tonight at 8 over WJSV and present Alice Duer Miller's Thanksgiving story, "Plum Pudding and Mince Pie."

The story originally appeared in the Woman's Home Companion and subsequently was selected as one of the 10 best of the year. Crane Wilbur has made the radio adaptation.

Bridge

Finesse went ont othe success of today's no-trump hand. At a recent women's championship Mrs. George U. Harris and Mrs. A. M. Sobel with a dainty bit of bluff bidding, arrived at three no trump and fended off an unfavorable lead.

Mrs. Harris opened with one club. This was not a psychic in the real sense, as it was the cheapest bid she could make, and any response of another suit by her partner she could raise with ease.

It was not difficult for Mrs. Sobel to read the bid, holding seven clubs with 100 hundred honors, and her one diamond response was a definite deceptive bid to ward off an unfavorable diamond opening should, as she anticipated, the hand be played at no trump. The bidding then followed a logical progression to game.

But the two unusual bids had performed neatly, and West opened a spade. Mrs. Sobel let this ride around to her nine and immediately played clubs. East won the ace, but unaware of the club situation, tailed to take her ace of diamonds and declarer won the rest of the tricks, making six odd. Upon regaining the lead with a heart, Mrs. Sobel ran her clubs and then took the proven spade finesse, leading the queen which West covered, to win six clubs, three spades and three hearts or three no trump with three over-tricks.

Had West made the inspired lead of the jack of diamonds, the defense would have taken four diamond tricks and the ace of clubs to set the contract one.

The arm-chair anaylsts will have fun with this hand, criticizing the defense, pointing out the advantage of North playing the no-trump contract, and so on, but they will have to admit that the women players did a nice job of bluffing, just the same.
